ORDER PROBE OF CIO SCANDAL IN GUADALCANAL

Navy Gets Demand for Union Data.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Congress will launch a formal investigation into charges that a merchant ship, reported to have been manned by members of the Communist dominated CIO National Maritime union, refused to unload food and supplies for marines on Guadalcanal.

Chairman Carl Vinson [D., Ga.] of the house naval affairs committee announced that Tuesday morning he will appoint a special subcommittee to make a full investigation of the incident.

Rep. Vinson said he had asked the navy department to furnish the committee with all the information it had concerning the incident. He said that all the facts published in the press concerning it will be aired.

Witnesses' Names Sought.

A telegram from Vinson to the Akron, O., Beacon Journal, which published interviews with a number of unnamed marines who were witnesses to the incident, requesting the names of the persons interviewed, brought a noncommittal answer from James P. Rosemond, managing editor of the newspaper.

"Thanks for your wire," Rosemond replied to Vinson. "We will endeavor to assist you in every way possible and will forward further information next week." Rosemond refused to indicate whether the newspaper will supply the house committee with the names.

Charge Crew Jeered Marines.

Members of congress revealed they had been informed that the crew of the merchant ship not only had refused to unload fresh food and supplies from the ship for wounded and half starved marines on Guadalcanal because it was Sunday but had stood around and jeered the battle-worn, homesick youngsters that were forced to do the work.

The story of the ship and the actions of its crew, which has been circulating in Washington for some time, was described in detail this week by three Akron, O., marines, just back from the Solomons. Their reports were corroborated by a navy pilot and two sailors, just returned from the same war area.

Called '$50 a Month Suckers.'

The congressmen have been told that the burly crewmen, said by the pilot to be members of the notorious CIO National Maritime union which has been a hotbed for communism in this country, stood on the decks jeering and derisively chanting at the sick and tired marines laboring under the blazing tropical sun. A favorite piece of sarcasm was:

"O, you fifty buck a month suckers!"

Another favorite was the singing of a parody on the popular soldier song, "You'll Never Get Rich . . ., etc."

In addition the ship's crew mouthed a wide range of other vile and degrading chatter at the nation's fighting men, the congressmen said. They have demanded an immediate investigation of the entire situation, which the navy says has been started.

8 Hour Day for CIO Crew.

The congressmen are particularly incensed at charges that the highly paid members of the ship's crew—some of them make as high as $700 a month on voyages into the war zones—should not only refuse to unload the supplies for the marines but should speak derisively of the pay they earn as fighting men. The crew works only 8 hours a day, gets extra pay for overtime, and in this instance refused to work on Sunday.

Altho this incident was reported to have occurred last fall, the navy department disciplinary section said today that it still hadn't received full information about it. Officials said they were "investigating."

Cook County Buys Double Its December Bond Quota

War bond sales in Cook county for December were more than double the prescribed quota, it was announced yesterday by the war savings staff of the treasury department. The report said the sales had exceeded the county's quota by 103 per cent. Total war bond sales for the month were $32,014,700, an average of $7.88 per capita. The rate was topped only by Woodford county, which averaged $8.57 per capita.

Subsidy Offer Arouses Ire of Produce Body

Representatives of produce growers in six north central states yesterday opposed the department of agriculture subsidies offered last week to stimulate production of potatoes, dried beans, and fresh vegetables.

The North Central Vegetable and Potato council, in a special meeting in the Hotel Sherman, warned the government bureau and the office of price administration that the government's plans menace, rather than stimulate, produce growing.

Three Subsidies Proposed.

Before the growers was an offer from Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, announced last Saturday, to pay subsidies of 5C cents a bushel for potatoes, $50 an acre for truck crops and $20 an acre for beans.

Instead of the subsidies, the growers' council, which usually deals with technical and trade matters of growers in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Ohio, but called the extraordinary meeting to deal with "this serious problem," asked that the government restore the factors of supply and demand. If a fair price were in sight, growers would increase production voluntarily, the council said.

Labor Problem Cited.

"The growers not only won't, but can't, plant crops if they aren't going to break even," Leo J. Hagemann of Peoria, association secretary, said. "Unless they see a profit, the growers may turn to other crops or reduce their acreage because of the very serious labor problem. Then the food situation only becomes worse."

CHIEF OF SUBS IN PACIFIC, 18 OTHERS ABOARD

Hope Fades as Hunt Enters Third Day.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 23 (AP).—Hopes were dimming tonight for the safety of Rear Adm. Robert H. English, commander of the Pacific fleet submarine force, and 18 other persons aboard a navy transport plane missing since Thursday.

Rear Adm. Robert H. English.

"The search is continuing," navy officials reported succinctly. That the loss of so many high ranking officers was a severe blow was easy to discern thru terse statements by navy headquarters.

One woman was aboard, a navy nurse assigned to duty in the South Pacific.

The plane was last heard from Thursday morning, when it circled the bay area, unable to land because of weather conditions. Whether the pilot sought a water landing at Clear lake, which before the war was an emergency landing "field" for the Pan-American Clippers, or headed back to sea was not disclosed.

Names of Passengers.

In Washington, D. C., the navy announced the following officers, in addition to Adm. English, were on board the plane:

Capt. Robert Holmes Smith, commanding officer of a naval vessel, whose usual address is Rocky Mount, N. C. His wife, Mrs. Frances B. Smith, lives in Cambridge, Mass.

Capt. Robert E. Thomas, of the navy civil engineer corps, director of the Pacific division of the bureau of yards and docks. His usual address is 614 Whitman street, Rockford, Ill. His wife, Mrs. Helen L. Thomas, now lives in Seattle, Wash.

Capt. Donald C. Godwin, attached to the 12th naval district, San Francisco, whose usual address is Williamston, N. C. His wife, Mrs. Hazel M. Godwin, lives in Los Angeles, Cal.

Comm. William G. Myers, commanding officer of a naval vessel. Usual address: Washington, D. C. His wife, Mrs. Susan Gladding Myers, also lives in Washington.

Lt. Comm. John O. R. Coll, gunnery officer of submarine force, Pacific fleet. Usual address: Jeffersonville, Ind. His wife, Mrs. Margaret Coll, lives in San Diego, Cal.

Lt. Comm. George R. Stone, attached to the 14th naval district at Pearl Harbor. Usual address: Big Rapids, Mich. The home of his wife, Mrs. Jean Richards Stone, is at 925 Keystone avenue, River Forest, Ill.

Lt. [j.g.] Edna Owella Morrow, navy nurse assigned to duty in the South Pacific. Usual address: Pasadena, Cal.

Crew Members Listed.

The nine members of the crew:

Robert McNair Elsey, captain, Palo Alto, Cal.

Orvan K. Judd, first officer, Berkeley, Cal.

John R. Maynard, second officer, Alameda, Cal.

George H. Aabel, third officer, Menlo Park, Cal.

WOOLLCOTT DIES OF HEART ATTACK

New York, Jan. 23.—Alexander Woollcott, 56 years old, author and actor, died tonight shortly after he had collapsed during a radio broadcast here. Dr. Edmund De Vol said Woollcott suffered a heart attack.

Woollcott was participating in the "People's Platform" program on the subject, "Is Germany Incurable" when he became ill. He collapsed 10 minutes after the program started.

Program Goes On.

"I'm feeling sick," he wrote in a note to Dr. Harry Gideonse, president of Brooklyn college and acting chairman of the discussion group.

Motioning to other participants to continue the program, Dr. Gideonse helped Woollcott to a lounge in the lobby. The radio program continued without announcement that Woollcott was ill.

Woollcott first achieved distinction as a dramatic critic for the New York Times, a post he held from 1914 to 1922, except for two years when he served in the army during the first World war.

Stage, radio and writing have held his attention in recent years. He played the rôle of Sheridan Whiteside in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," a stage comedy based on his own personality.

Known as "Town Crier."

As the "Town Crier" he was well known not only through American radio networks but also thru the facilities of the British Broadcasting system from 1929 to 1940. He wrote frequently for periodical publications.

Woollcott was born in Phalanx, N. J., graduated from Hamilton college in 1909, and did post-graduate at Columbia university. He helped publish Stars and Stripes, the AEF newspaper, during the first World war.

As a dramatic critic, he also worked for the old New York Herald and for the old New York World. Among his books were "The Story of Irving Berlin," published in 1925, and "Mrs. Fiske—Her Views on Acting, Actors, and the Problems of the Stage," which appeared in 1917. His first stage appearance was in "Brief Moment," in 1931.

Ran for Librarian.

In 1932 he leaped into a campaign to elect the late Newton D. Baker President of the United States. "It was a single handed campaign, unassisted even by Baker," he explained later.

Another foray into politics was made by Woollcott when he became irked because he found a book he wanted always out when he called at a library in a New England precinct. Altho he did not live in the precinct he announced himself a candidate for the job of county librarian and ran on a campaign promising to make every one return overdue books. He lost.

Ensign's Bride Slain in Berth; Mystery Man Flees from Train

BULLETIN.

Klamath Falls, Ore., Jan. 23 (AP).—State police tonight arrested John Funches, 30 years old, a Negro dining car waiter, as a suspect in the train slaying of Mrs. Martha Virginia Brinson James. Funches, whose home is at Oakland, Cal., denied knowledge of the slaying. He is in jail, but no charge was placed against him.

Eugene, Ore., Jan. 23 [Special].—A manhunt radiated from this city tonight for the slayer of an ensign's blonde 21 year old bride, whose throat was slashed in lower berth 13 of a darkened Pullman as the Southern Pacific's West Coast limited sped southward thru Oregon just before dawn.

The victim was Mrs. Richard F. James, the former Martha Virginia Brinson of Norfolk, Va., who was married to Ensign James four months ago. With the wife of another ensign, she was en route to Los Angeles from Seattle, Wash. The husbands of the two women were on an advance section of the same train.

Several Suspects Held.

The slayer was described as "a husky, dark man in a brown suit" by Harold R. Wilson, a marine private, who occupied upper berth 13 and who was awakened by a woman's shriek. He peered out in time to see a man of this description hurrying down the curtained corridor while the body of Mrs. James hurtled into the aisle from the berth beneath him.

Late today officers halted the train at Klamath Falls, near the California border, and Deputy Sheriff Roy Southerland reported that a number of suspects are being held.

Authorities said they were inclined to believe the slayer escaped from the train a short time after the crime was committed, however. They said the train was a few miles south of Salem at that time, and that it would have been possible for the man to have left the train at Tangent.

Train Vestibule Open.

This theory was supported by the discovery of an open vestibule when the train was stopped at Eugene to permit removal of the body. A search of the train here failed to reveal the presence of a person answering the description given by Wilson.

Ensign James did not learn of the tragedy until the section of the train on which he was riding reached Klamath Falls. He turned back for Eugene.

Wilson told officers that it was about 4 a. m. when he was awakened by Mrs. James' scream. He said he scrambled out of his berth at once and that Mrs. James was apparently dead when he reached her. Discovery of $112 in cash among her possessions indicated that robbery was not a motive for the crime.

Man in Brown Suit Vanishes.

Trainmen said they remembered seeing a Negro in a brown suit aboard the train early in the evening, but this man was not on the train when it was searched at Eugene.

Ensign G. A. Keaton of Eudora, Ark., who was with James on the first section of the train, said that they had left Seattle with their wives but had been forced to take separate trains at Portland. James had been stationed at the naval air station at Seattle and was being transferred elsewhere.

Mrs. James was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur C. Brinson, who live in Norfolk's fashionable northshore district. She attended the Norfolk division of William and Mary college and Sweet Briar college. James, who attended the University of Virginia, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mapp James of Nassawadox, Va.

POWDER PUFFS IN ENGLAND BECOME WAR CASUALTIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Here are some of the things which Britons will be unable to get shortly, owing to the new concentration of industry for necessities of war purposes only:

Women will be deprived of powder puffs, powder boxes, manicure sets, electric irons, mirrors, eye lash tweezers, sponges, jewelry, and face cloths. Men will lose wallets, pouches, cigaret cases, neckties, drinking glasses, hair cream, oil or lotions, phonographs, and lawn mowers.

'Tough Negotiating' for Labor Past, Says Cripps

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Stafford Cripps, minister of aircraft production, warned trade unionists tonight that the day of "tough negotiating" is passing. He admonished members of the Association of Supervisors, Staffs, Engineers, and Technicians, that it is up to workers to do their part in solving production problems, "altho management must continue to manage." Trade unions will have to take their share of responsibility for plant efficiency, he concluded.

Tripoli Seized; British Drive for Tunisia

ALLIED HDQ., North Africa, Jan. 23 (AP).—Britain's 8th army captured Tripoli to finally topple Mussolini's African empire early today. Then it raced on westward toward Tunisia where allied troops were mopping up Nazi parachutists trying to widen the 50 mile "bomb alley" of escape left to Marshal Erwin Rommel's axis forces fleeing into Tunisia.

Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's desert troops at 5 a. m. swept into Tripoli whose dock depots and installations had been blasted both by allied bombers and Nazi demolition squads. Capture of this city was the ultimate triumph of a three month push equivalent to the distance from New York City to the plains of Nebraska.

British Push On Westward.

The British were reported to have pushed on westward toward the Tunisian border, 100 miles west of Tripoli, while allied planes pounded Rommel's shattered troops on the coastal highway and inflicted "great damage" on boatloads of axis officials fleeing the port of Zuara, 60 miles from Tripoli.

[The admiralty in London also announced that light forces of the royal navy bombarded Zuara early Saturday. Berlin broadcasts hinted that Montgomery's forces had intercepted the retreat by landing forces from boats somewhere along the coast west of Tripoli. Berlin claimed the landing party was driven off.]

Less than 300 miles separates Gen. Montgomery's troops and the allied forces in the Gafsa area of Tunisia, but the axis apparently is firmly entrenched all along the eastern Tunisian coast where Rommel is withdrawing to join the axis troops under Gen. Jurgen von Arnim.

French Fall Back Again.

A French communique tonight reported hard fighting had continued thruout the day in central Tunisia, especially in the chain of mountains some 30 miles northwest of Kairouan where French units previously had made a slight withdrawal.

"After having repulsed all concentrated attacks made by the enemy, these units were ordered by the high command to fall back more to the south in the region north of the road leading from Ousseltia to Kairouan," the communique said.

The bulletin said French Moroccan troops had annihilated a German detachment nine miles from Ousseltia and taken prisoners, including three officers.

Earlier British and French troops were reported to have rolled back a German tank column at least four miles in the Kebir valley after a counter-attack launched from Robaa toward Pont du Fahs. This sector is above the Ousseltia-Kairouan area.

Arabs Aid in Roundup.

Allied aircraft pounded the axis airdrome of Ben Gardane in southern Tunisia and also attacked the Tunis, El Aouina airdrome three times yesterday, finding a great concentration of axis transport and fighter planes on the field.

In their attempt to widen their hold on the 200 mile long coastal belt the axis dropped parachutists at several points in the rear of the allied forces. But the majority of these already have been rounded up with the help of the French gendarmerie and Arabs, a spokesman said.

Some of Col. Edson Raff's parachutists are based in southern Tunisia.

NEW DEAL PLANS WORLD MEDICAL AID AND U. S. CUT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 [Special].—Dr. George Baehr, chief of the medical division of the office of civilian defense, said today that medical services for the American people will be "rationed" for the duration of the war and for many years afterward.

He claimed this curtailment of medical services will be necessary because American physicians and nurses will be needed abroad during the reconstruction period to control health conditions in foreign countries.

Dr. Baehr said Americans must give up what he called "luxury" medical attention. Among services which he characterized as "luxuries' were:

1. Full time attention in a hospital of one or two private nurses if the nature of the illness is such that the nurse can attend to other patients in nearby rooms.

2. Going to a hospital just for a "rest," or for clinical diagnosis that could be made by visits to physicians' offices.

3. Calling a doctor to the home when the patient could be taken to the doctor's office or could be treated by some one in the house upon telephone instructions.

NEW WAR PLANS AGREED UPON, HULL INDICATES

Political Fronts Also Affected, He Hints.

"Big News Soon"

LONDON, Jan. 24 [Sunday].—Under a banner line of "Big News Soon, Says America," the Sunday Pictorial said that "late last night the news in London and Washington, D. C., hinted dramatically that an early announcement of 'vital decisions' was expected."

The London Observer's diplomatic correspondent, under a heading of "Unifying Plans of Allies," wrote that "an unusually optimistic and expectant atmosphere in authoritative quarters in London leads observers to the belief that comprehensive steps either have been or will be taken in these directions."

The Sunday Express headlined "Great Events Ahead," saying "plans for the coming offensive against the axis are, it may be assumed, now under active consideration and discussion between the British and United States governments."

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 [Special].—What was regarded as a broad hint that the allied nations had reached a new unity among themselves for more intensive and better integrated prosecution of the war on both the military and political fronts was given by Secretary of State Cordell Hull today.

His remarks were taken as supporting reports from Europe that allied leaders and governments had reached new understandings on these points.

The reports were strengthened by dispatches from London which stated that important announcements on allied war plans were expected soon, and that such plans would include a unified command and global strategy. Indications that plans were shaping up for a "big four" over-all strategy board, which would embrace the United States, Great Britain, Russia, and China, already have been given both here and abroad.

Emphasize Need for Unity.

Secretary Hull's hint came when he was asked to comment on published reports that Republican leaders in congress had decided not to attack the lend-lease act, which is due to come up for legislative renewal this year.

The Republican decision, Hull said, shows a commendable spirit of teamwork and wholehearted coöperation in support of the war. It is always gratifying, he declared, to see the fullest measure of unity among the governments that are waging war against the axis.

Then by way of emphasis, he paused, and added that he was referring to unity both within governments and among governments.

It was considered significant in this respect that the London press has dropped its attacks on Lt. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and is referring to an improved political atmosphere in North Africa.

Report De Gaulle, Giraud Confer.

This change of tone has coincided with denials of Fighting French representatives here that they aim to

STALINGRAD FORCES' SITUATION IS SERIOUS, BERLIN RADIO ADMITS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Berlin radio last night said the Nazi armies encircled at Stalingrad were fighting "to the last cartridge and last hand grenade" to tie down huge Russian forces and make them "employ large amounts of material."

The broadcast was seen as part of the German press and radio campaign to prepare the German people for news of greater reverses in Russia.

"Press and broadcasts in Germany let arise no doubts any more as to the seriousness of the situation at Stalingrad and the difficulties in general," said one broadcast.

Acknowledging new retreats in the Caucasus, the radio said these had been "foreseen" and that "the German command has the patience to wait until the wear and tear of soviet armies has reached a climax" before "employing numerous new divisions against them." These new divisions, it said, are only partly ready.

ORDEAL AT END, 'IRON MAN' HAS 3 MALTED MILKS

How Rickenbacker, Others Returned to U. S.

(This is the 13th and last installment of the story—told here in full for the first time—of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker and seven companions and their three weeks' fight for life against the perils of the equatorial Pacific. It is told by Lt. James C. Whittaker of the army transport command, co-pilot of the Flying Fortress which was crashed into the sea Oct. 21 after running out of fuel.)

BY LT. JAMES C. WHITTAKER,
U. S. Army Air Force Transport Command.
As Told to CHARLES LEAVELLE of The Chicago Tribune.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

It was about this time that they started calling me "The Iron Man of the Army." I had not gone to bed on the island until they made me go, and now, aboard a navy vessel en route to the marine establishment on Island X-2, I still wanted to be up.

The same thing occurred several times during the next few days, until the doctors agreed finally that unlike the other six survivors I wasn't in absolute need of hospitalization. It looks like the name "Iron Man" is with me to stay.

But the reader will know there were many occasions during those 21 days adrift in the blazing Pacific that I was anything but an "Iron Man." It was just that I happened to be in better physical condition than the others and so recuperated faster.

Walks to Hospital.

As the navy vessel headed out to sea I stood and watched the native village disappear in the distance. I'll never forget the care those gracious folk lavished upon me and my two companions, Lt. John J. De Angelis and Staff Sergt. James W. Reynolds, navigator and radio operator of our ill-fated Flying Fortress.

Both now were in the sick bay under care of the medical officer, Lt. Richard W. Garrity. Reynolds, whose condition still was grave, was receiving regular injections of glucose and other restoratives. At length Lt. Garrity caught up with me and packed me off to bed.

We stood off X-2 all night and landed in the morning. De Angelis was carried ashore, but I insisted on walking the two blocks to the emergency hospital. I probably wanted to show off my beard. Lt. Garrity kept Reynolds in the sick bay.

Just a word or two now about that emergency hospital.

How Yanks Do Things.

It didn't exist until word was received that the raft of Capt. William T. Cherry Jr. had been sighted. Then Col. Lloyd Leech, the veteran marine commandant of X-2, put his Sea Bees—naval construction battalion—to work. In 24 hours they erected a fine little field hospital with concrete decks, screens all around, and a corrugated iron roof.

Those things usually are built after air fields and gun positions are in, but when they are needed, bang! They're there. That's the way our people do things in the Pacific.

In an outer room of the hospital I found Johnny Bartek, who had been our engineer. In the next room lay Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, whose indomitable spirit brought more than one of our company thru alive. I walked in and looked down at him.

"What's the matter, Rick?" I asked. "Been sick?" He grinned and held out his arms. I marveled again at this man.

The world knows him as America's greatest air ace of World War I. and as a top flight business man who had made a success of a great air line. He is known also as one of the greatest living authorities on aviation.

Writer-Critic Dies

Alexander Woollcott, who died last night, as he appeared in role parodying his own career in the play, "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Out on the trackless Pacific, our little band met the Rickenbacker few people know: the human man, the undoubting leader who doesn't know how to give up. When one and another of the fellows did give up out there, Rick handed him such a cussing that he'd usually vow to live if only to spite Rick. And Rick loved it. But when it was over, all agreed that if ever they had to go thru hell again, they wanted to go with Eddie Rickenbacker.

During that afternoon I lounged around and the others rested in bed. We heard that Reynolds was holding his own. A couple of hours later, Col. Hans Adamson, Rick's military aide, and Capt. Bill Cherry were brought in. The colonel still was suffering from salt water ulcers.

Bartek insisted he felt chipper and wanted to be photographed with Rick. But the doctors said he was not nearly as well as he imagined. When he insisted on the photograph, Rick [whom Bartek couldn't see], winked at us, then let go one of those bellows we knew so well:

Ordeal a Blessing.

"You stay right where you are. Do you want me to get on another of my mads?" Deep silence from the other room. On the night of rescue when Rickenbacker and Bartek were being carried ashore, Rick had said to the youngster:

"Better thank God for your Testament, son. You see now what faith can do for you."

It was Bartek's khaki New Testament, zippered and waterproof, that was one of our greatest sources of solace during the ordeal. It led us to prayer and prayer led us to safety. The tangible proof that prayer is answered, coupled with the two divine miracles I witnessed during our 21 days adrift, redeemed me from agnosticism. They changed the entire course of my life.

In that way, our ordeal was a blessing—to me at least. For 41 years I had lived a selfish life, believing in Jim Whittaker and practically no one else. It took something cataclysmic to change me.

The next morning, which was the 26th day since we were set adrift and the fifth since De Angelis, Reynolds, and I landed on the natives' island, we were told that our carriages were waiting. The carriages were three navy PBY flying boats and I went aboard, along with Rickenbacker, Col. Adamson, Cherry, and De Angelis. Bartek was pronounced too weak to be moved. He followed us a week later. Reynolds was kept aboard the ship and I did not see him again in the south Pacific. He returned to the mainland with Rickenbacker after Rick completed the mission he originally had set out to accomplish for the war department.

The PBYs roared into the air and we learned we were on our way to a base hospital in Samoa. During that trip I looked down at the Pacific. It appeared cool and inviting and as smooth as a ballroom floor. But Mrs. Whittaker's son James was not fooled. I knew what it was like down there: eight foot swells, sharks, and murderous heat. I found the medical authorities in Samoa a little more rigid that the others had been. In Samoa they put "iron men" to bed just like any one else.

They succeeded in keeping me there two days and for shorter periods afterward — whenever they could catch me. This usually was at meal time. We were getting steaks three times a day now.

We all were practically out of clothes and were fixed up handsomely by the Red Cross man who supplied marine uniform cottons, sun helmets, and moccasins. He even gave us insignia and ornaments. We stayed in Samoa until we were completely restored. And we were royally entertained. Then the PBYs landed us in Honolulu on Dec. 3 and we set out to achieve a long cherished goal—those strawberry malted milks we had dreamed up that day in the rafts.

Still Craves a Malted.

So strong had been our desire out there in the heat and glare that I still craved one, despite the steaks and other excellent food we'd had. The fountain man had heard about us, however, and he made those drinks too rich. Altho I had planned on drinking 10, I could barely finish three.

Pan-American Airways landed us at Treasure Island in San Francisco bay a few days later. In addition to high army officers, we were met by two of the people I wanted most to see—my wife, Ann, and our daughter, Shirley, 16. We went around and picked up my son, Thomas, 19, a petty officer 3d class in the navy. Then the four of us drove home to Burlingame, Cal.

Bill Cherry was ordered to Washington to help redesign the rubber life rafts carried by bombers. It has been announced that from now on those rafts will be known as "Rickenbackers." I am sure the new ones will have many improvements, but I pray I do not have to try them out.

I was detached from the transport command for 60 days after my month's sick leave and am now covering the west coast, addressing war production workers for the OCD.

[OCD officials assert that in the 13½ months since Pearl Harbor, no speaker has been received with greater enthusiasm in the war plants than Lt. Whittaker. His tour may be made national in scope.]

I am happier spiritually than I ever have been in my life. I think that I have only one worry in the world. Some time before Feb. 1 I have got to get in 12 hours of flying to protect my aviation pay. The government, it seems, will not count the time I spent flying that raft.

COMRADE OF '18 FINDS RICK THE LEADER OF YORE

Cheered, Taught and Wept, Says Tribune News Chief.

BY J. L. MALONEY.

Rickenbacker in '18.

Rickenbacker has not changed a whit.

The same courage and coolness, the same leadership and personal magnetism that characterized his life in death's shadow in 1917-'18 are still his despite the passing of 24 years.

This was the conclusion drawn by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's friends of World War I, when they read the Lt. James C. Whittaker diary account of the 21 days Rick and his seven companions spent in the shark infested waters of the equatorial Pacific beginning last Oct. 21.

Rick Still "Leader Never Doubted."

"He was a leader never doubted. He cheered them, he cussed them. He gave them confidence they would be saved."

These sentences from Whittaker's diary described Rick's leadership as the eight men faced death in the Pacific. They also give an accurate description of the Rickenbacker I knew at Château Thierry and at St. Mihiel in 1918.

There, too, he cheered his pilots and he cussed them. In his quiet, yet forceful and incisive talks to us by candlelight at the mess table, before the big map in the operations room, and on the field before the take-off on patrol, he inspired us—members of the 94th [Hat in Ring] aero squadron, first pursuit group, air service, U. S. A.—with the confidence that we could win. There he taught us how to meet and conquer the Germans who, in their Fokkers, often outnumbered us in our Spads three and five to one at Château Thierry.

Indomitable in Conflict.

It was the Rickenbacker indomitable will to outwit and outfight the enemy that fired the pilots of the 94th aero squadron to kill more Boches than any other squadron in World War I, with Rickenbacker getting 26 of these victories himself to be the ace of aces of the American Expeditionary force.

It was Rickenbacker who taught the raw flyers, sent to the front from AEF instruction centers, the dangers and tricks of life in the shadow of death. He instructed them in the use of clouds and the sun to attack the enemy with success. He taught them how to use their eyes to see the enemy before the enemy could see them, for over the lines in 1918, if any place in the world, eternal vigilance was the price of safety and success.

Imparts Vast Knowledge.

Rickenbacker's great aim at the front was to share his vast knowledge of killing Boches with his men that they might emulate him in victory.

"Follow my order and advice, profit by my experience," he often said, "and I will take you back with me in victory to see the Statue of Liberty."

In his air fights with the enemy Rickenbacker was cool, calculating, careful, and always painstaking of preparation for battle. He did not take foolish chances. He never flew or fought to create a sensation. He flew and fought to win and to kill the enemy.

Unlike Frank Luke, who was Rickenbacker's rival for the title of American ace of aces and who was continually taking sensational chances, Rickenbacker's cardinal over the lines principle was to get and hold an advantage—either of position or numbers—before attacking. As a result of these tactics Rickenbacker won his 26 victories and flew over the lines for 10 months.

This does not reflect for a moment on Rickenbacker's valor. When he was caught unawares he was as great and daring a flyer and fighter as any World war aviator—English, French, or American.

But as a result of his wise counsel, his insistence on care in preparation of his men and equipment, his squadron was able to amass nearly 100 victories and its losses were considerably fewer than many others.

At Chateau Thierry alone, replacements of pilots in the 27th aero squadron were 114 per cent, while Rickenbacker's 94th squadron was getting as many victories with fewer than half the replacements.

Naturally Rickenbacker's continual fight to give his men the best machine guns, the best motors, and the best planes, together with his oft repeated rescues of them in tight spots in the air and his wise counsel and craftiness, resulted in a reverence and respect for him among his pilots which almost amounted to adoration.

Warm Hearted to His Pilots.

And Rickenbacker was as warm hearted and sympathetic to his pilots as he was cold and crafty in dealing with the enemy. I recall the night of Aug. 17, 1918. That day cost the lives of Alexander Bruce and Walter Smythe, the latter one of Rickenbacker's best pals.

At mess that evening there was absolute silence, and when some of us were able to glance up from our plates and thru the candle light to Rickenbacker at the head of the table we could see the tears running down his cheeks. On his right Smythe's and Bruce's chairs were empty.

Here are a few other sidelights on Rickenbacker which may not be generally known:

Because of the necessity of having confirmation from another arm of the service, Rickenbacker was credited with at least 10 fewer German planes than he got. On the other hand, he often said he was credited with several he was not sure he got at the time the air battles occurred.

Walks Out on Doctors.

Rickenbacker probably is carried as A. W. O. L. even now in an AEF record. While in the American hospital in Paris, where his eyes were being treated, he thought the doctors were too slow in giving him the green light, so he walked out without leave and arrived at his squadron saying: "I guess they won't court martial anybody if he is going toward the front."

Rickenbacker never intended to be Gen. John J. Pershing's chauffeur as has often been reported. He accepted the job with his usual foresight. He knew that if he could get in contact with the general staff personnel in Paris he could clear the way for his dream—a place in the air service of the AEF despite his lack of a college education, an early requirement for pilots in World War I.

His Combat Ambition Realized.

He had been in Paris only a short time until he had made enough acquaintances to engineer his transfer to the air service.

Incidentally, when he made his first address to the 94th squadron, his grammar was abominable. Many of the pilots hung their heads in embarrassment. At the time he was strictly a "dese" and "dose" talker, and his fame was based only on his victories as a driver of racing cars.

Rickenbacker knew this limitation full well and after the war, when he earned financial success, began his self-education with the thoroness that has characterized his whole life. He became a forceful and facile public speaker, so much so that one of his war pilots, who heard him later and recalled his virile but ungrammatical orations to the squadron in 1918, exclaimed: "It can't be the same man."

Blast Destroys Navy Patrol Boat

Wreckage of the super-structure of navy patrol boat (foreground) litters water of Chicago river after explosion. The hull sank. Three other boats (in background) which were anchored alongside were damaged.

1 DEAD AS BLAST SMASHES NAVY CRAFT ON RIVER

Four Sailors Injured in Chicago Explosion.

One sailor was killed and four were injured yesterday when an explosion destroyed a 100 foot navy patrol boat in a turning basin in the north branch of the Chicago river at North and Magnolia avenues. Windows were shattered for a block around.

The craft, the YP-557, was formerly the yacht Annlo, the navy said. The superstructure was blown off and the boat was shattered to the water line. The piece of wrecked hull remaining sank in the shallow water of the basin. Three other boats, also converted yachts, anchored with the YP-557, were badly damaged in the blast and the fire that followed.

Name of Victim Undisclosed.

The name of the dead sailor, a cook, cannot be disclosed until next of kin have been notified, navy officials said. The injured, all of whom have been removed to the United States Marine hospital:

Harold G. Steeno, 21 years old, fireman, critically burned, skull injury.

Harold Dobscha, 26, burned on face and hands, skull injury.

Clifford Olson, 26, shock and burns.

G. D. Olive, 18, shock and burns.

The navy said the cause of the explosion had not yet been determined.

Only a few persons were in factories and warehouses which line the river bank just north of Goose Island, where the boats were anchored, when the blast ripped the little craft apart at 12:40 p. m. It was the boat anchored closest to the shore.

Seven Men on Boat.

There were seven men on the demolished boat, and 11 on the other three. The three damaged boats drifted to the center of the basin, where the fire that spread to them was extinguished.

Fire trucks, police squads, and ambulances rushed to the scene. Police and navy officials placed guards around the area to keep spectators out and facilitate rescue of the injured.

James E. McMahon, 37, of 905 Concord place, watchman in the Procter & Gamble Manufacturing company plant, 1232 North avenue, said the blast knocked him to the ground as he was walking into his shanty 200 feet from the patrol boat. He said débris flew 150 feet into the air. The flames soared skyward, he said, and at first he thought all boats had been destroyed.

Navy Begins Inquiry.

Windows in the Procter & Gamble plant as high up as the 10th floor as well as those in many nearby buildings were broken. The sluggish water in the basin was covered with débris from the wrecked boat.

Rear Adm. John Downes, commandant of the 9th naval district, appointed a board headed by Comm. J. M. Ross of navy headquarters, who was in charge at the scene, to investigate the blast. The board will meet today.

The basin is the anchorage where for many years after the World war 15 subchasers were moored.

WINE AND CIGARETS STOLEN.

Louis Allis, owner of a tavern at 2252 Madison street, reported to police yesterday that 10 gallons of wine and 15 cartons of cigarets were stolen by thieves who smashed the front door.

MICHIGAN EDITORS RIP U. S. SUIT AGAINST AP AS PERIL TO FREEDOM

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Michigan Press association in a resolution today opposed the government's trust suit against the Associated Press, describing the action as "a violation of the constitutional property rights" of citizens "and a direct threat to freedom of speech and of the press."

The association, composed of daily and weekly newspapers, some of whom are members of the Associated Press, directed that copies of the resolution be sent to Atty. Gen. Francis Biddle and the Associated Press board of directors.

CIO CHIEF BLASTS RICK ON APPEAL FOR BOYS AT WAR

Raps Plea to Protect Them from Unions.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 23 [Special].—Philip Murray, Congress of Industrial organizations' president, today attacked Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker for his remarks here yesterday advocating legislation to protect returning soldiers and sailors from labor union job monopolies.

Philip Murray [top], and R. J. Thomas.

In an angry reaction to the famous flyer's comments on labor's contribution to winning the war, the CIO chieftain said in a press conference that it is "regrettable" Rickenbacker should "permit himself to become involved in discussions about matters on which he is either misinformed or does not understand."

Urges Laws at Once.

Rickenbacker, who toured war plants and spoke on the radio here, proposed immediate passage of laws providing that returning fighters may be employed by any company without having to join any labor union, with equal voting rights in any employé-management plan, and with seniority in relation to other employés of draft age dating from enlistment or induction.

R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers of America [CIO], advanced the view that "some manufacturing groups" had misinformed Rickenbacker, who was rescued recently after he and seven companions were forced down on a Pacific flight.

"If he had chosen," Thomas said, "Capt. Rickenbacker could have found out the attitude of union labor in this country from Sergt. Bartek, a member of the CIO Textile Workers' union, who was on the same raft."

Stresses Troops' Sacrifices.

Sergt. John Bartek was one of Rickenbacker's companions in the 21 day ordeal at sea.

Rickenbacker was cheered by war plant workers as he strolled along production lines and reiterated his contention that no efforts by workers on the home front can equal the sacrifices of soldiers.

He said that when the war ends, more "rugged individualists" than America ever has known will come home, and they "will not accept regimentation of their lives."

REDUCE HEATING GAS, USE 25 PCT., NELSON ADVISES TWO STATES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the war production board today asked residential users of heating gas in western and southern New York and northern Pennsylvania to cut their gas consumption during the next 10 weeks by 25 per cent to assure adequate delivery of gas to war plants.

Nelson issued a statement saying, in part:

"A serious shortage of natural gas now exists in western and southern New York, and northern Pennsylvania. This gas is necessary to the operation of vital war plants and essential civilian services. The shortage threatens continued operation of these plants and services. Already some war plants in this area have been forced to curtail consumption for lack of gas during the recent severe weather."

Nelson suggested holding temperatures to 65 degrees.

W-G-N PRESENTS OPERA 'MARTHA' IN AIR THEATER

Von Flotow's best known opera, "Martha," and the second in a series of talks by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, on encroachments on the freedoms of men, featured last night's performance of the Chicago Theater of the Air. The program was heard over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.

Marion Claire, W-G-N soprano, in the rôle of Lady Harriet, and Eugene Conley, tenor, cast as the farmer, Lionel, were starred. The musical background was supplied by the W-G-N symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber. Kenneth MacGregor, chief of production, prepared the radio version of the opera.

JAIL WOMAN WINDOW SMASHER.

Police yesterday arrested Miss Evelyn Clippinger, 30 years old, 1743 Warren boulevard, on a malicious mischief complaint signed by William Sianis, owner of a tavern at 1855 Madison street. Sianis charged Miss Clippinger threw a coffee cup thru the plate glass window of his tavern after a quarrel in which he had evicted her from the tavern.

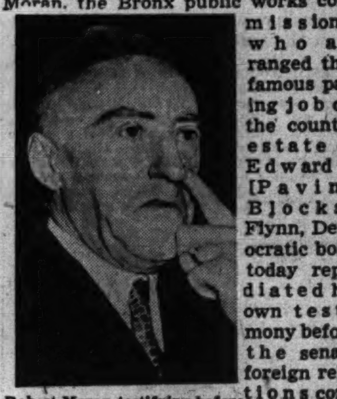
FLYNN DEFENDER REPUDIATES OWN STORY OF PAVING

Admits to Senate He Knew City Supplied Blocks.

BY JOHN FISHER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Robert Moran, the Bronx public works commissioner who arranged that famous paving job on the country estate of Edward J. [Paving Blocks] Flynn, Democratic boss, today repudiated his own testimony before the senate foreign relations committee as to when he first learned that the 8,000 granite blocks used on the Flynn estate were city property.



Robert Moran testifying before senate committee yesterday.
[Acme Telephoto.]

At the conclusion of today's testimony, Chairman Tom Connally [D., Tex.], of the foreign relations committee announced the hearing was closed and that the committee would meet next Wednesday to vote on whether to recommend confirmation of President Roosevelt's nomination of Flynn as minister to Australia, a $10,000 a year job.

Moran, a little man with a sharp nose and red hair, angrily denied charges at the inquiry into Flynn's fitness for the job that Flynn had knowingly appropriated city property and city labor for his private benefit.

Workers "On Vacation."

Moran declared that:

There was never an intention that the work should be done free. "Flynn was never my sponsor," he said. "I owe nothing to Mr. Flynn."

The paving blocks were "virtually worthless." Contractors frequently dumped them into swamps just to get rid of them. He had not known they were taken from a city yard.

Private trucks were used to haul the blocks.

Moran told the committee there had never been any criticism of him before in 28 years in public office, but that the incident had caused him so much "embarrassment" that he had retired last year on a pension.

This embarrassment, he added, had followed him in his efforts, as a family man with seven children, to find private employment.

"Politics in New York is not any place now for a decent man," he observed with mournful face.

At first Moran told the committee he knew nothing about city owned blocks being used in the paving in November, 1941, of what he and Flynn called merely a parking lot—Flynn's accusers say it was an antique Belgian courtyard—until March, 1942, when the story of an investigation broke in the newspapers.

Altho Flynn had approached him on getting a private contractor to do the work, Moran testified that he turned the arrangements over to Fred Dennerlein, a construction foreman under his jurisdiction, and that Dennerlein, without Moran's knowledge, used city materials and city owned station wagons to transport city employés to do the job.

Workers Paid by City.

He admitted knowing in advance that some city employés would be used for laying the blocks on the property but said it was agreed they should do it on their time off and be paid later. Moran admitted the employés were paid by the city while doing the private work for Flynn and denied knowledge of New York City regulations against city employés engaging in private employment.

Under sharp questioning by Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] Moran withdrew his statement that he didn't know until March that the blocks were city property.

Vandenberg read from previous testimony by Monroe Goldwater, Flynn's law partner, that Moran came to him late in January, 1942, "confused and excited" and said, "I'm afraid I've got Ed in a bad spot. I don't know how I've been so stupid."

Moran's Face Reddens.

"If you didn't know until March that they were city blocks how could you tell Goldwater that 'the blocks were taken from the city yard—that's the silliest part of it'?" pressed Vandenberg.

Moran paused for a moment, his face reddening, and replied:

"I want to correct the testimony that I didn't know when I saw Goldwater that city blocks were used. Dennerlein told me about this when he returned from Kern's office." [Paul J. Kern, New York civil service commissioner, had instituted the investigation, subpenaing witnesses, and it was after this that Moran came to Goldwater, saying that the bills should be cleaned up, according to the testimony.]

Does that account for your being confused and excited when you saw Mr. Goldwater?" said Vandenberg.

"I deny that I was confused and excited," the witness replied.

"Why, if there was nothing improper, were you so concerned when you went to see Goldwater?" asked Sen. Guy M. Gillette [D., Ia.]

"I wanted Mr. Flynn to know about the investigation by Kern," said Moran. "I felt it was my duty to tell Mr. Flynn about it. I went first to the Biltmore but he wasn't there. I then went to see Goldwater."

"You had received information that the subpenas already had been issued in the Kern investigation?"

"Correct."

Moran also firmly denied telling Goldwater that he had been "stupid."

"I wouldn't admit that to anybody!" declared the witness.

"You don't have to admit it to me, either, Mr. Moran, because I don't think you are," commented Vandenberg.

Flynn Used Official Cars.

Moran denied participating in the "doctoring," as charged, of pay roll records to show that the city employés were on vacation time when engaged in the paving job. Altho most of these records were altered, he said, it was common practice to make changes in the records after various foremen checked on their gangs. He said charges that the job was to be a "gesture to Ed" free of charge were absolutely false.

He also defended Flynn's use of official cars around the Bronx, saying it had been a common practice for city owned cars to be used for private purposes by officials and that in Flynn's case, altho the party leader, he had a long record as a public official. He said Flynn never abused this use of an official car, placed at his disposal by the borough president.

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York then took the stand and said that because of long standing political bitterness between himself and Flynn he did not feel qualified to offer an unprejudiced opinion concerning Flynn's qualifications to be minister to Australia.

La Guardia said all he knew about the case had been related yesterday by William B. Herlands, New York City commissioner of investigations.

Friend of F. D. R. 20 Years.

Flynn returned to the stand briefly to deny that he ever had anything to do with one of his law firm's clients, Serge Rubinstein, getting invited to the White House. The Bronx boss said he has been a close personal friend of the President for more than 20 years, and added:

"I would never have let him send my name to this body for confirmation if I had any fear that something would be shown in my life which was dishonest."

Goldwater also appeared briefly to deny "categorically and without qualification" that either he or Flynn ever represented Rubinstein, mystery figure who bobbed up in the proceedings, in any attempt to get a fraudulent passport. Rubinstein, a Russian, was accused in yesterday's testimony of being in this country illegally. Rubinstein issued a statement today, after the committee refused to hear him, denying charges that he had attempted to defraud the British government out of $1,300,000, or that he had entered the country illegally, or that he was once friendly with the Japanese government.

Aerial Nurse

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 23 [Special].—Rita Westerman of 1643 Normandy avenue, Chicago, first graduate of St. Ann's school of nursing to enter the service, is in training at Bowman field preparing to become a flying nurse with the first air evacuation unit of the army air forces.

As a member of this new division of the air forces, Lt. Westerman will face more responsibilities than the average army nurse. She will be both doctor and nurse on a hospital plane evacuating wounded from "as far forward as possible to as far to the rear as possible."

Lt. Westerman, who is 26 years old, was born in Newark, N. J., but has lived in Chicago most of her life. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Westerman. She outranks her brother, Fred Jr., the only other member of the family. He is a corporal in the air forces ground service at Miami Beach, Fla.

Miss Westerman was graduated from St. Rita grade school and Alvernia High school in Chicago and was graduated from St. Ann's, a division of Loyola university, in 1939. She was an active member of St. Giles' church in Oak Park.

After private duty and some modeling and clerical work for a year she was employed for 18 months as an industrial nurse at the Western Electric company plant in metropolitan Chicago. She entered army service Oct. 4 and was at Chanute field, Illinois, until she reported at Bowman field here Dec. 20.

ARMY MARCHES ON 15,000 TONS OF FOOD A DAY

Soldier Eats Twice as Much as Civilian.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Approximately 15,000 tons of food are purchased daily to operate the largest boarding house in the world—the United States army, the war department reported today.

The average soldier eats approximately 5½ pounds of food a day—about twice as much as the average civilian. The soldier's diet has a caloric value of 4,500.

The army of 5 million men eats approximately 27½ million pounds of food a day. This represents only daily food consumption and does not include quantities of food which must be stored in this country and at foreign bases for future use.

Daily Bill $2,800,000.

The daily food bill is approximately $2,800,000. The cost for each man is 56 cents a day or $204.40 a year. Five and a half pounds of food a day for 56 cents is an achievement of mass buying which the housewife must envy.

A ration is the allowance of food which the government provides for one soldier for one day. [Officers are not entitled to rations but must pay for their own food.] The field ration, which has superseded the garrison ration, consists of the following types and quantities of food:

Meat, poultry, fish, or meat substitute, 16 ounces; eggs, 1; butter and other fats, 2½ ounces; grain products and cereals, 12 ounces; milk, 1 pint; Irish potatoes, 12 ounces; tomatoes and citrus fruits, 4 ounces; leafy, green, and yellow vegetables, 7 ounces; other fruits and vegetables, 12 ounces; sugar, slightly less than 3 ounces. Breads, desserts, and salads make up the remainder of the 5½ pound allowance.

Coffee 40 Times in 30 Days.

A soldier receives coffee 40 times each 30 days. Coffee is brewed on the basis of 3 pounds for each 100 men. Eight pounds of butter are allowed for 100 men each day.

The army's quartermaster general, buying trainloads of food every day, sometimes takes an entire season's output of a certain article of food to assure the army of an adequate supply for immediate or near future needs. He can, in fact, buy unlimited amounts of any food product in the country, and he is as discriminating about his purchases as any housewife, but, unlike her, he must keep a weather eye eternally on supply and demand.

Under the program of coördinating army and navy purchases of war materials and supplies, the army handles the purchase of the most of the service food supplies. In the procurement of perishables the navy is using the army market system in a large measure.

Problem Termed Complicated.

The problem of army feeding is not one of shifting home markets and dinner tables to army commissaries of the quartermaster corps and army mess halls, the war department said, but is one complicated by a variety of requirements and conditions.

These are chiefly the fact that a soldier eats almost twice as much as a civilian, the army must provide a scientifically balanced diet, and the army must accumulate reserves of food sufficient for large demands and long periods at strategic points. These and other problems are being met so successfully that the American army is the best fed in the world, it was said.

"Mass buying and all other features of the army quartermaster corps program are directed toward maintenance of American standards of living both in our homes and in our army," the war department said. "Regulation, economies, and conservation required of the civilian have their counterparts in our armed forces.

Food Shipped Where Needed.

"Nor was that reputation gained at the expense of foreign countries in which our troops are based or which they have invaded. In lands where food is short we ship the supplies needed by our men. We do not follow the practice of the axis in occupied territory by living off the country and starving the inhabitants.

"Finally, the army's procurement of food is being accomplished in the face of, yet without prejudice to, the demands of lend-lease for food to be shipped abroad."

The war department said meat purchases are made chiefly in Chicago, altho the quartermaster buying market operates in food markets thruout the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto De Jong, 5939 South Sacramento avenue, were notified by the war department yesterday that their son, Sergt. Otto De Jong Jr., 24 years old, was a Japanese prisoner in the Philippines. Sergt. De Jong who enlisted in the army chemical warfare service in June, 1941, had been stationed at Clark field near Manila and was reported missing last April. A letter dated in March but received in July said he had been shifted to Corregidor. Before enlisting, he attended Harper High school and worked for his father, a building contractor.

SUBMARINE WAR CALLED GRAVEST PROBLEM OF U. S.

Limits Forces Which Can Be Sent Abroad.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—The submarine war of attrition on shipping is continuing to make serious inroads on America's offensive capacity. It is still regarded by the army and navy high command as the most serious problem of the war.

Since Pearl Harbor, some 600 merchant vessels have been sunk in the western Atlantic alone. Most of these vessels were of American registry or American owned.

This compilation of losses does not include Nazi sub operations in the middle and eastern Atlantic and in the Arctic ocean on supply routes to England and Russia and Africa. It also does not include operations of Jap subs along the Australian supply route or Italian subs on the African route.

Doubt Building Offsets Toll.

Considering all theaters of war, ship sinkings during 1942 are considered to have been greater than American ship construction. By building 746 ships in the year American shipyards exceeded President Roosevelt's goal, but did not surpass the toll of undersea craft.

At the time the 1942 shipping total was announced, Elmer Davis, head of the office of war information, said that ship production had been brought to a rate of production of four ships a day, more than the rate of sub sinkings. However, he did not say that the number of vessels produced exceeded the number sunk.

Rear Adm. Emory S. Land, head of war shipping administration, at the same time said that the submarine menace is still substantial and that this country will never have enough merchant ships as long as the war continues.

Calls Subs Greatest Enemy.

Adm. Harold R. Stark, former chief of naval operations and now commander of the United States naval forces in European waters, recently declared that allied victory rests on ships. He said the greatest enemy of the allies is the submarine because it is taking a heavy toll of shipping vital to transport of troops and war supplies.

The army and navy high commands frankly acknowledge the merchant marine is not large enough to transport and maintain abroad the army of 10 million men planned for the United States in 1943.

At present the United States has 1½ million men abroad in the army, navy, marines, and coast guard. It is estimated that the shipment and maintenance of these men has taken the bulk of the 8,134,890 tons of merchant shipping the United States had at the outbreak of the war.

Brig. Gen. R. W. Littlejohn, as quarter master general of American forces in the British Isles, estimated that each American soldier sent to England required 10.5 tons of original shipping and 1.5 tons of supplies each month. This meant that each man required 28.5 tons of ship space to be sent and maintained abroad for a year of routine duty. For actual combat duty supply demands would rise sharply depending upon the nature of the action.

Gen. Littlejohn's is the only official estimate on shipping needs of troops. Another estimate widely quoted in military circles fixed the transportation requirements of each soldier at 17 tons of shipping and the amount of shipping needed for maintaining supplies at 3.4 tons per man per year. Both estimates are made for moving and maintaining troops over a distance of 3,000 miles. As the distance of transportation increases, the amount of shipping needed rises.

On the basis of the general's estimate 4¾ million tons of shipping in constant operations would be required to ship and maintain a million men abroad for a year. This estimate assumes a supply line 3,000 miles long and that each ship would make six round trips a year.

Number Abroad Increasing.

On the basis of the estimate of 17 tons of shipping to transport a man 3,000 miles and 3.4 tons for supplies, shipping needs would approximate 6.2 million tons for each million men abroad during a year.

The United States has 1½ million men at 65 acknowledged points around the world and is increasing that number constantly. For some of the more distant outposts ships can make but two or three round trips in a year. Maintenance of these men abroad and the supplying of allies is taxing the nation's maritime resources to the full. Each time a soldier is sent abroad more tonnage must be taken away from transport duty to go into maintenance duty.

GERMAN BROADCAST SAYS U-BOATS RUN ON COMPRESSED OXYGEN

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The German radio tonight reported that the Nazis are building a new type of submarine operating on compressed oxygen. The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, followed reports printed in this country some months ago that the Germans were building such a submarine.

The advantage of the new invention, the radio said, is that U-boats can use their Diesel motors beneath the surface, and thus gain speed and cruising radius. An invention by a German named Andre permits oxygen to be compressed to a degree 400 times greater than heretofore possible, the broadcast said.

Submarines normally operate beneath the water on electric batteries, and surface to recharge their batteries with their Diesel engines. They cruise on the surface with the Diesels. No electrical battery plant is necessary in the new submarines and 60 tons in weight are saved and more space made available for torpedo load, food, and ammunition stores, the broadcast said.

FURNITURE PLANT AND 3 RESIDENCES DAMAGED BY FIRE

Damage of $50,000 was caused by fire yesterday in the two story factory of the Chicago Novelty Furniture company, 1750 North Campbell avenue. The blaze set fire to the roofs of three frame houses south of the factory, but firemen were able to extinguish these fires quickly. Fireman Lester Clark, 36 years old, 4056 North Central avenue, a member of engine company No. 35, was injured when a valve fitting of the engine blew off and struck him.

F. D. R. BLOCKED AIR EXPANSION, BOOK DECLARES

Report Army Colonel Real Author of Attack.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—A newly published book, "The Fight for Air Power," in which President Roosevelt and Adm. Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet, are blamed for the country's air weakness before Pearl Harbor, has official Washington in a dither.

The work, which spills a wealth of purported war and navy department secrets pertaining to the sidetracking of the long range bomber program by the President and the army and navy brass hats and to the punishment of the air force enthusiasts, is by William Bradford Huie. However, the real author is said to be Col. Hugh J. Knerr, formerly of the army air force, who was ordered out of retirement to active duty last fall in order to stop his criticism of army and navy administration.

When recalled to duty by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Knerr was about to deliver an address at Milwaukee, Wis., on a book he planned to publish, entitled "The Fight for Air Power." When returned to duty he was muzzled and prevented from publishing his book.

Believe Statements His.

However, he figures prominently in the Huie book of the same title, and numerous quotations of an unidentified officer charging sabotage of the military aviation program by the administration are suspected of being Knerr's statements.

The lack of interest in developing air defense which the Huie book ascribes to the President contrasts sharply with warnings Mr. Roosevelt was uttering for several years before Pearl Harbor on the ease with which the axis could attack the United States from the air.

Huie says that in 1937 the house committee on military affairs began considering the Wolcox air corps bill, backed by Gen. Frank M. Andrews, and was ready to report the measure favorably "when the President's personal representative, Charles West, appeared and handed a note to Rep. [now Sen.] Lister Hill, chairman of the committee and an administration supporter. The President informed Mr. Hill that he wanted action on the air corps bill postponed until further notice.

"'Further notice' never came and Gen. Andrews' effort died 'by Presidential decree.' It didn't suit Secretary Woodring [Harry Woodring, former secretary of war]; it didn't suit the admirals, and it didn't suit the President."

Adm. William D. Leahy, Mr. Roosevelt's chief of staff, is named as another who minimized air power. The author quotes anonymously a member of the air corps procurement board describing the rejection of the program to build 108 Flying Fortresses in 1937. Knerr at that time was a member of the board.

The program was rejected because Woodring wanted lighter, less expensive planes "capable of going not more than 300 miles beyond the coast line."

King is quoted as saying that "army aviation should end at the shore line! I shall do what I can to make it so!"

Pearl Harbor Brings Action.

According to Huie, it took Pearl Harbor to shock the President and high command into realization of the value of land based long range aviation. Then began a frenzied attempt to repair the blunders of four years.

In neither the Coral sea nor the Midway battle did surface warships get within 100 miles of the enemy or fire any but anti-aircraft guns.

Huie describes the exile and reduction in ranks meted out to officers who supported the bill he says was killed by the President. Gen. Andrews at the time the bill was presented was commanding general of the G. H. Q. air force.

Andrews Staff Broken Up.

"Shortly thereafter," says Huie, "the general staff moved in to punish Gen. Andrews and the air corps 'visionaries.' Gen. [George C.] Kenney, a member of Gen. Andrews' staff and now a major general in command of air forces in the southwest Pacific, was ordered to an infantry school. Follett Bradley, another member of the staff, now a major general in Russia, was ordered to Puerto Rico. Joe McNarney, now a lieutenant general and deputy chief of staff, was ordered to the west coast. Col. Knerr was ordered to San Antonio [Tex.], the 'exile post' to which Billy Mitchell was sent prior to his crucifixion."

Huie relates that Andrews' staff was dispersed and that he shortly was reduced from major general to colonel. Soon Col. Knerr was retired, and Andrews was sent to San Antonio to relieve him as air officer of the 8th corps area. Huie adds:

"Thanks to the bitter-end opposition, we came up to the brink of war with 19 underdeveloped Flying Fortresses, a few trained crews, a starved organization for air power, and no law defining where navy responsibility began and army responsibility left off."

Michael F. Mulcahy, area director of the office of price administration, announced yesterday that the sale of 698 passenger car tires and 907 truck tires was permitted during the week ending Jan. 22 by local rationing boards in Chicago. In the same period, the boards authorized the sale of 54 automobiles to Chicagoans who could qualify under the OPA code. Other sales of rationed items during the week were: Passenger auto tire tubes, 391; truck tire tubes, 722; passenger auto tire retreads, 279; truck tire retreads, 792, and bicycles, 14.

CHINESE CAPTAIN SAYS HIS NATION NEEDS BIG GUNS

Capt. Wei-chow Fu.

Capt. Wei-chow Fu, 26 years old, Chinese army officer who spent three years on the Hankow front against the Japanese, after his graduation from the Chinese military academy, was in Chicago yesterday after a plane trip from Fort Benning, Ga., where he is studying American military methods.

The young officer was selected with two others to attend American officers' training schools. He was flown from China to India, where he boarded a transport which sailed for the United States.

"China needs more big guns and many more officers," he said. "To meet the need for officers the government has set up eight training schools and when a junior officer or second lieutenant is graduated he is immediately sent to the front."

CHINESE MISSION GOING HOME 'VERY DISAPPOINTED'

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 23 [Special].—Maj. Gen. Dai-Fung King, member of the Chinese military mission to Washington, D. C., said here today, en route back to Chungking, that he and his associates were "returning home very disappointed."

"We know nothing of the general strategy and we have nothing to tell our people at home," he added.

Gen. Dai said military leaders of China believed it unnecessary to defeat Japan by taking back one after another of the South Pacific islands lost to it.

"To bomb the Japanese production centers, which are highly concentrated in a few cities, and to destroy the Japanese line of transportation by sea with planes and submarines, would probably by the quickest way to break Japan's morale," he asserted.

FLEES POLICEMAN; SHOT.

Freddy Smith, 17 years old, a Negro, 615 East 50th street, was shot in the left hip yesterday morning when he attempted to flee from a pool hall at 350 East 47th street, as he was being questioned by Policeman Alvin Fauntleroy of the Wabash avenue station.

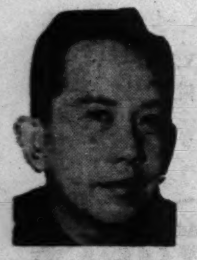
FILIPINO COLONEL TELLS WHY ISLES FIGHT FOR U. S.

Romulo's Book a Stirring Tribute to Democracy.

BY KERMIT HOLT.



Col. Carlos P. Romulo.

When the Japanese sent their armies into Malaya, the natives greeted their new conquerors with cheers and garlands of flowers. It was the same story in Burma, the Dutch East Indies, French Indo-China and Thailand.

But when they invaded the Philippines, the natives greeted them with knives and bullets and home made bombs.

The reason lies in the difference between British, Dutch and French imperialism and American democracy.

That is the thesis of a stirring book, "I Saw the Fall of the Philippines," by Col. Carlos P. Romulo, personal aide to Gen. MacArthur and the last man out of Bataan.

Without propaganda or flag waving the people of the Philippines fought the Japanese—and are still fighting—for the United States. Of all conquered countries the Philippines alone sprang without question to the aid of its conquerer—America.

Tours Subject Lands in Asia.

Just before Pearl Harbor, Col. Romulo, then editor and publisher of a Philippine newspaper chain, made a tour of Asia to find what attitude the subject peoples were taking toward the sovereign nations.

The articles won him the Pulitzer prize, but, as Col. Romulo admits in his book:

"I can tell you now that those articles would never have won the Pulitzer prize if I had told all my experiences in the Orient. I held back a lot because as a writer I knew hatred is created by incidents. I am a Rotarian standing for good will between nations. So I did not write then of incidents in Hongkong, Chungking, Burma, Thailand, French Indo-China, British Malaya, and Japan."

Everywhere Col. Romulo found a hatred for British, Dutch and French imperialism. Most leaders were openly pro-Japanese.

"Any Rule Better Than Dutch."

He met a beautiful and cultured Indonesian girl in Batavia, Java, whom he invited to dine with him in a large hotel. "We are not welcome there," she told him.

"Anything is better for us," she told Col. Romulo, "than life under the Dutch."

He talked with several Burmese newspaper editors in Rangoon, Burma. They confessed they were anti-British and pro-Japanese. "Any situation," they said, "is better than to be under the British."

Outside a theater in Hongkong, Col. Romulo waited to see the inauguration of a new British governor general. The crowd scuffed the red carpet before the entrance, and British trained police went thru the crowd smashing Chinese heads with their billies.

"When I presented my official ticket," Col. Romulo wrote, "I was waved back, 'British first!'"

"I left without seeing the ceremony. I was used to democracy, in America, and in the Philippines under the American and Filipino flags."

"The Filipino would not be a worthy pupil of Americanism if he did not know that his independence and self-respect spring from what he learned from America," Col. Romulo said.

Filipino Nationalists Aid U. S.

Nationalist leaders in Burma and Java sympathized with the Japanese because of their hatred of European imperialism, Col. Romulo wrote. In the Philippines, Nationalists came to the aid of the United States.

"I am a Nationalist," Col. Romulo declared, "because from my earliest childhood I was impressed by my father's participation in the Philippine struggle for freedom. And I am a Nationalist because I was educated in America and have absorbed the principles of democracy and liberty that are so thoroly a part of America."

"Democracy—freedom—these may be only words to Americans who have always possessed them. But to me, because I have seen life without them, they are words to die for.

"They hold me free to worship at any church, to criticize and have a voice in my government, to write of what I believe in, and advocate the principles I want upheld. They hold me free to travel unhampered by stupid restrictions and without undergoing humiliating experiences, and to talk to my friends and neighbors without going to a concentration camp."

Tragedy of Philippines Defense.

Col. Romulo described in detail the tragedy and horror of the battle for the Philippines, the story of 7,000 American soldiers and 75,000 Filipinos against 250,000 Japanese.

Gen. MacArthur commissioned Romulo a major in the public relations department the day after Japan struck. He twice was cited for outstanding performance of duty in action, and was the last man to leave Bataan. An antique navy amphibian plane carried Col. Romulo from a small airfield a few hours before its fall after Gen. MacArthur ordered him to Australia.

RUSSIANS RETAKE ARMAVIR, KEY TO VITAL OIL FIELDS

Capture 12,000, Smash 17 Axis Divisions.

MOSCOW, Jan. 24 [Sunday]—(AP).—Russia's armies driving swiftly westward across the southern fronts scored notable advances yesterday, according to two soviet communiques. 153 The Reds' main prize, according to a special communique, was Armavir, rail gateway to the Caucasian oil fields of Maikop, 160 miles southeast of Rostov.

On the Donetz front, south of Voronezh, the Russians captured Volokonovka, only 50 miles from the big German base of Belgorod on the Kursk-Kharkov railway, the special communique said. It also reported the capture of 12,000 prisoners for a nine day total of 64,000 on the Voronezh front and said 17 axis divisions had been smashed in this area since mid-January.

In the sector south of Stalingrad, Volga citadel which today entered its 153d day of siege, the Russians announced the capture of Izobilnoye, 55 miles northeast of the important Caucasian railway junction of Kropotkin.

Encircle Donetz Capital.

The Red army, hurling the axis forces back over terrain where the Nazis swept eastward last summer, now is 80 miles west of the Moscow-Voronez-Rostov railway. It apparently is aiming for Belgorod, about midway between Kursk and Kharkov on the trunkline. Volokonovka is 78 miles northeast of Kharkov.

To the south Russian units were encircling Voroshilovgrad, Donetz industrial capital, in an apparent attempt to reach the Sea of Azov and encircle Rostov, feeder point for all Nazi forces in the Caucasus.

The Russians are well on their way toward wiping out all the German gains scored last year in Russia. Last summer's axis line, high-water mark of the 1941 push, extended from a point east of Kursk and Kharkov down to Taganrog on the Sea of Azov.

Seize Key to Nazis' Position.

Capture of Armavir was a great strategic victory for the Russians for Armavir is the pivot for the entire German position in the Kuban river region in the Caucasus. A rail line runs west from it to Tuapse, Black sea port, and in between lie the Maikop oil fields with a normal annual output of 2,500,000 tons.

Rostov, key to the whole German southern front, already is menaced by the Red army on three sides. On the north the Russians are only 70 miles away; on the east the Red army yesterday took Konstantinovskaya, on the lower Don river, and were reported within 56 miles of Rostov. One hundred miles to the southeast the Red army has taken Salsk, which is connected by rail with Rostov.

New Threat to Rostov.

Now a fourth threat to the Germans at Rostov has developed in the Voroshilovgrad sector. The Russians reported the capture yesterday of a point only 10 miles east of Voroshilovgrad and a place 12 miles to the northwest. Capture of the Donetz industrial center would put the Russians on a railway winding south to Taganrog, west of Rostov.

[The German communique yesterday spoke of the Nazi retreat in the north Caucasus as a "disengagement movement proceeding according to plan." The army trapped at Stalingrad was said to have halted the "deep enemy breach" in its western line.]

3 AXIS SUPPLY SHIPS DESTROYED BY BRITISH SUB

ALLIED HDQ., North Africa, Jan. 23 (AP).—A British submarine "operating in Tyrrhenian seaports" destroyed two enemy merchant ships and a schooner and drove an armed trawler ashore in sinking condition in attacks on a convoy southbound to Tunisia, a naval communique said today.

The submarine first attacked the southbound convoy of two 6,000 ton ships under escort of three destroyers. A torpedo in one of the merchantmen damaged and stopped her and the next day the submarine finished off the wounded ship despite a surrounding cover of rescue tugs and destroyers. The other merchant ship accompanied by one destroyer retired.

Three days later, the same submarine attacked the schooner, trawler, and a 2,000 ton merchant ship with torpedo and gunfire while along the east coast of Sardinia.

HEART ATTACK IS FATAL.

VANDEGRIFT SAYS TROOPS ARE SAFE ON GUADALCANAL

Marine General Gives Up Command.

AN ADVANCED SOUTH PACIFIC BASE, Jan. 23 (AP).—Ten Japs have been killed on Guadalcanal for every American soldier lost, and their air losses in the Solomons have been seven to our one, Maj. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift of the United States marine corps said today.

"The Jap is a good fighting man, and any one who says differently is mistaken," he said. "But he is no superman by any means, and he can be killed the same as any one else."

Relieved of Command.

Gen. Vandegrift conferred with Adm. William F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific fleet. He has been relieved of his command on Guadalcanal after months of hard fighting.

"I feel Guadalcanal is secure to us," he said.

Without citing figures, he said American troops were taking a terrific toll of Japanese in the Solomons fighting aside from many thousands of the enemy aboard troopships which have been sunk.

Gen. Vandegrift has turned over his command to Maj. Gen. Alexander Patch, who had been commanding an advance base since March.

"The situation is in good hands," he said.

Continue Mopping Up.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Today's navy communique included a single line reference to fighting in the Solomons, indicating comparative quiet on that front. "United States forces on Guadalcanal continue mopping up and patrol operations," the communique said.

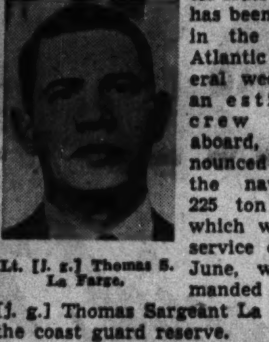
4 SHIPS AND 53 JAP PLANES SCORE OF ONE FLYING FORTRESS UNIT

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 23 (AP).—One American Flying Fortress squadron has flown more than 1,000,000 miles on 630 missions in the last six months, during which it has destroyed 33 Japanese fighters in combat and more than 20 aground, and sunk a heavy cruiser, two merchant ships and a transport.

The disclosure was made in Sydney today by Sergt. Pilot Mervyn Bell of the Australian air force, co-pilot of one of the planes in the squadron. Bell was enthusiastic about his American flying mates, declaring: "The Yanks are the greatest team I've ever been with."

ARTIST SKIPPER OF MISSING U. S. PATROL CUTTER

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The presumed loss of the coast guard cutter Natsek, which has been overdue in the North Atlantic for several weeks with an estimated crew of 30 aboard, was announced today by the navy. The 225 ton Natsek, which went into service only last June, was commanded by Lt. [j. g.] Thomas Sargeant La Farge of the coast guard reserve.



Lt. [j. g.] Thomas S. La Farge.

A grandson of the famous artist, John La Farge, and son of the late Bancel La Farge, Lt. La Farge was described by the navy as well known for his murals, stained glasses, and mosaics. His works include frescoes in the New York Hospital and in the New York World's fair, and murals in the New London, Conn., postoffice. He also has frescoes and mosiacs in St. Matthew's cathedral at Washington and mosaics at Trinity college, Washington.

JAPS RE-ENFORCE RABAUL DESPITE 26 ALLIED RAIDS

Bulk of Their Shipping Concentrated There.

THE "ONE-SHIP NAVY."

On the first page of the Graphic section of today's Chicago Sunday Tribune appears an illustrated story of the United States light cruiser Boise—popularly known as the "one-ship navy." The cruiser sank six Jap warcraft off Guadalcanal. Damaged in battle, it returned to Philadelphia under its own power.

BY JACK TURCOTT.

[By Wireless to the New York News and The Chicago Tribune.]

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA, Jan. 24 [Sunday].—Japan's continued ability to maintain a large concentration of merchant and naval shipping at Rabaul despite repeated successful allied bombing raids leads to the conclusion that the enemy has drawn the bulk of his seagoing strength, except capital ships, to within a few hundred mile radius in the Bismarck archipelago.

This means that the Japanese probably have withdrawn the major portion of Nipponese transports, cargo vessels, and lesser warships from Asiatic coastal waters as well as from the numerous conquered islands south of the Philippines and west from Sumatra. This would seem to be good enemy strategy, since any allied naval attack against these points would first have to face Japan's advance outpost aerial bases.

The allies are unable to attack from the air any points in the area the Japs may leave unprotected by their naval forces because they do not have bases within suitable bomber range.

Most Important Jap Base.

Japan's concentrations around Rabaul are an old story. Even before the American invasion of the Solomons began, Aug. 8, allied reconnaissance from Port Moresby indicated that the enemy had a sizable fleet based at Rabaul. The exact number of ships there fluctuated daily, but that wasn't unusual since Rabaul has been Japan's most important base south of the equator since the enemy seized it a year ago today.

Also it is not surprising that the Japs increased their strength there as soon as the Americans invaded Guadalcanal. For Rabaul was the natural place for distributing naval and aerial strength for repulsing attacks in the Solomons as well as for continuing the war against Gen. MacArthur's forces in New Guinea.

What is unusual, however, is that the Japs continued to maintain Rabaul's strength despite successive devastating airplane raids from Port Moresby and despite heavy losses during the battles with American planes and task fleets in the Solomons.

Attacked 26 Times.

Since Nov. 15, when the last big naval battle occurred off the Solomons, clinching American possession of the Guadalcanal beachhead, MacArthur's planes have attacked Nipponese shipping in the Bismarck area at least 26 times. This includes attacks against convoys bound for Buna and Lae, includable because a majority of the convoys came from Rabaul.

Within this period of less than 10 weeks MacArthur's heavy bombing planes sank at least 4 cruisers, 9 destroyers, and 30 transports and merchantmen, the merchant ships alone having a total aggregate tonnage of more than 250,000. Also they at least seriously damaged and possibly destroyed 3 more destroyers and 18 additional transports and cargo ships totaling another 120,000 tons.

CAPTURE 117 JAPS AS FIGHTING ENDS IN PAPUA JUNGLE

U. S. Bombers Hit Two More Jap Ships.

ALLIED HDQ. IN AUSTRALIA, Jan. 24 [Sunday]—(AP).—At the end of their rope in New Guinea's Papuan jungle, 117 Japanese chose surrender yesterday instead of fighting to the death as hundreds of others had done. Thus the campaign against a Jap army which once totaled 15,000 came to an end.

"Liquidation has been completed with heavy casualties to the enemy. One hundred seventeen prisoners were taken yesterday. Ground fighting in Papua has ceased," says today's communique.

The number of prisoners taken was unusually large. Only a few isolated snipers remained to be shot out of trees and other perches.

Two Ships Hit at Rabaul.

On the spreading aerial front, two waves of night bombers, raiding on the first anniversary of Japan's capture of Rabaul, blasted at airdromes and ships in that New Britain sector. Afterward, a reconnaissance bomber scored a direct hit and damaged a 12,000 ton transport, then brought an 8,000 ton vessel to a standstill near Rabaul with two near hits. Only yesterday, Gen. Douglas MacArthur had told of the destruction of four Jap ships, totaling 24,000 tons, at Rabaul.

While other planes raided Fuiloro and Koepang in Timor, Madang, Finschhaven, Lae, and Salamaua in New Guinea, Port Moresby on New Guinea's southeast shore underwent its 100 night Jap attack, but there was no damage.

Five Jap Zero planes were downed in dog-fighting during the latest Rabaul raid.

Convoy Is Bombed.

"Our heavy bombers attacked the harbor before dawn," the communique said, "striking at shipping and airdromes. A fuel dump at Vunakanau was hit and left burning furiously with numerous explosions visible for 75 miles; other bombs fell in the dispersal areas and blast bays. Vessels at anchor and a convoy approaching the harbor were bombed but searchlight glare was such that results could not be observed.

"During the day, one of our heavy bombers on armed reconnaissance over the area seriously damaged a 12,000 ton transport in the harbor with a direct hit and five near misses and scored two near hits on an 8,000 ton ship north of Rabaul which came to a standstill. Twelve enemy fighters intercepted the bomber in a running fight lasting one hour and five minutes, five enemy planes were destroyed and two damaged. Our bomber got home safely."

Proving as did the bombers over Rabaul that allied bombers can hold their own against superior numbers of Jap planes, a heavy bomber in the vicinity of Wewak, New Guinea, shot down three Jap Zeros for certain and probably got two others out of a swarm of 18 which engaged it in a running fight of one hour and 35 minutes. The bomber got home safely.

Social Democrats Demand Finnish Cabinet Shakeup

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Social Democrats, representing Finland's working class, have begun a press clamor for a greater voice in the coalition cabinet headed by Premier Jukha Rangell and Foreign Minister Rolf Johan Witting, suggesting that a shakeup be made after the presidential election Feb. 15. The Social Democrats pointed out that their members hold only one-fourth of the cabinet seats whereas they have nearly half the seats in the parliament.

FORTRESSES RIP 2 GERMAN U-BOAT BASES IN FRANCE

Lorient, Brest Attacked by Yanks in Day Raid.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Jan. 24 [Sunday]—(AP).—British bombers were over enemy territory again last night, it was announced today.

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—American Flying Fortress bombers blasted at submarine pens at Lorient and Brest today and American made R. A. F. Mustangs struck at Nazi inland transportation in double daylight blows at German occupied Europe.

Five Fortresses were lost in the smash at the submarine bases in France in the Americans' third raid of this month. It was the third attack on Lorient and the second on Brest since the United States air forces came to Britain.

Visibility over the targets was good and excellent results were observed, a joint communique by United States headquarters and the British air ministry said. The Forts shot down several enemy fighters.

27 Trains Attacked.

The R. A. F., meanwhile, hammered at troops, trains, barges, and tugs farther inland, and more R. A. F. planes swarmed over the channel this evening. Explosions were heard from the French coast.

The Mustangs attacked 27 trains during the day, the air ministry reported. Pilots of one squadron said that in 50 minutes they inflicted many casualties on a company of German troops, attacked six trains, and shot up several vessels.

Squadrons of allied fighters conducted the Flying Fortresses to Brittanny and then carried out supporting operations. Spitfires swept Brittany for four hours to pin down the Nazi air force and then escorted the big bombers home.

Reuters news agency reported the Berlin radio went off the air tonight, indicating the Nazi capital might have feared another raid.

The daylight raids followed a second successive night attack on western Germany, which includes the industrial Ruhr valley.

German planes struck at England by day and some persons were killed in two southeast coast towns.

North American Billy Mitchell B-25 medium bombers, the type that bombed Tokio, participated in yesterday's daylight attacks on axis targets in occupied Europe. This was the first mention of the use of Billy Mitchells in this war theater.

100,000 POLISH TROOPS ARRIVE IN PERSIAN PORT

Gen. Wladyslaw Anders.

LONDON, Jan. 24 [Sunday]—(AP).—More than 100,000 Poles have arrived at a Persian port from Russia to bolster the Polish army in the near east under Gen. Wladyslaw Anders, the India office announced today.

The force was sent from Russia under an agreement between the soviet government and the Polish government-in-exile at London, reached in November, 1941, to release Polish war prisoners for service with other Polish forces against the axis. A reception camp covering three square miles has been built to house the Polish force, which is supplied with British food and clothing and Russian arms.

The latest contingent to arrive completes the movement of these troops to the near east, it was said.

BANDITS LOOT SAFE OF $400.

Four armed robbers who forced four employés at the Novy real estate office, 3339 Jackson boulevard, to surrender their jewelery and lie on the floor while the safe was looted of $400, were being sought yesterday by police.

NEW BRITISH SUB 'TRAVELER' WITH 53 ABOARD LOST

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—The admiralty announced today that the submarine Traveller was overdue and presumed lost. The Traveller was of the same class as the Thunderbolt, formerly the Thetis, and the Triton, and was completed since the war began.

The Thetis was sunk in a pre-war practice dive off Liverpool in 1939 with the loss of 99 lives and later raised and renamed the Thunderbolt. By last May it had sunk two Italian submarines and five supply ships.

The Triton was given up as lost by the admiralty a year ago. Ships of this class were of 1,579 tons and carried 53 men.

BRITISH BUREAUS SUPPRESS NEWS, WRITERS CHARGE

Censors Also Accused by Correspondents.

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—The council of the Empire Press Union, representing correspondents from all parts of the empire, complained in its annual report today that virtually all news of any value had to be "squeezed out" of government press bureaus.

"Valuable as some of these offices are, it can hardly be said their output of usable press material had been proportionate to the expansion of the public relations staff," asserted the report, which also sharply critized British cable censorship.

Material Held Up.

Declaring the union's problem in 1942 had been to ensure that the British overseas press received a fair share of the "scanty" news facilities available, the report accused the public relations staffs of the fighting services—especially the admiralty—of reluctance to release material that could, without risk of aiding the enemy, contribute to the war activities of the press.

Altho cable censorship was said to be in the main a matter of smooth cooperation between correspondent and censor, the report said misunderstandings had arisen over censoring of material which correspondents regarded as legitimate expressions of opinion.

Ministry Is Blamed.

These misunderstandings it attributed to the ministry of information's order to stop dispatches calculated to produce ill-felling among the allies or betwen them and a neutral country.

Retention of such censorship, the union said in a memorandum submitted to Brendan Bracken, minister of information, "would undermine confidence in our war effort and create mistrust of actual news given out from this country."

Hear Vichy Police Find Arms Caches at Lyons

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Berlin radio, broadcasting a DNB [German news agency] dispatch from Paris, said today political police of the Vichy French government had discovered eight tons of arms in two secret depots at Lyons yesterday, and had also made some arrests at Marseilles.

A PASTURE TURNS INTO SHIPYARD IN JUST 8 MONTHS!

Chicago Firm Builds Big Tank Landing Boats.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

On the banks of the Illinois river near Seneca, some 90 miles from Chicago, a vast shipyard has sprung up almost as if by magic.

Eight months ago the spot was just pasture land. It was spring, the dandelions were beginning to yellow, and here and there a violet pushed up its head among the green. Larks sang overhead, gentle breezes swayed the lush grass, sweet peace lay all around.

But all is changed now. Today there sounds the clang of steel on steel. The glare of innumerable welding torches lights the scene. Some 6,800 men are busy there 18 hours of the day and night—and 2,000 more skilled mechanics are urgently needed.

In the river stand two of the completed ships—the navy's new all-steel tank landing craft—and on the grounds rise the gray hulls of several more, all in various stages of construction.

Carry Tanks to Strange Shores.

These are the ships that are carrying America's fighting tanks to the far corners of the world. From their decks the flaming monsters run down ramps to push their way into the jungles of Guadalcanal or over the sands of North Africa or into the firing lines of a score of battle fronts in as many distant lands.

The yards are those of the Chicago Bridge and Iron company and the ships are being produced under the supervision of its president, George T. Horton, and its two executive vice presidents, C. S. Pillsbury and Merle J. Trees. The plant covers 192 acres and tanklanders are being built while some of its buildings are still under construction. The first spade of earth for its beginning was turned last May 15.

It took months to get the great works into operation, as may be judged by the fact the first craft was not launched until Dec. 13. But it's picking up speed now, for the second vessel was launched, 90 per cent complete, last Sunday. It, too, will be delivered to the navy within a few days. The ultimate rate of production is, of course, a military secret.

Scaffolding Is Absent.

A unique feature of the big new shipyard is that one sees no intricate scaffolding around rising hulls as in other yards. Vast steel parts are set in place by giant cranes. Then they are welded together into one massive fabric of steel. As the hulls rise, workers with flaring torches move their work scaffolds up the steel sides.

At the beginning, the company officials say, they had to feel their way along. They had only a few blueprints; they could get no skilled marine engineers or shipbuilders. The first men employed were owners and operators of small machine shops, garage mechanics, foremen, and boss builders, said Clarence W. Hines, general manager and the only company official who had ever helped build a ship. What these assorted mechanics had to learn, he added, was to apply their technical knowledge to ships. Once they learned to do that, they were able to teach others. At least three months had passed before the blueprints for the complete craft were delivered.

However, sound technical knowledge and a "will to do" began to get results. The hull of the first tanklander began to rise and take form, the intricate piping and wiring to find their proper places. The company had started from scratch, from a pasture by the river, but the yards were taking form, the personnel was daily increasing, and more and more men were learning what to do and how to do it. Soon the first completed ship was rolled down the tracks sidewise into the river and launched. And when the navy inspected it, the vessel passed muster 100 per cent.

Steel Milling Done Elsewhere.

None of the steel sections for the tank carriers is milled on the ground. All come by rail from the company's plants in Chicago, Greenville, Pa., and Birmingham, Ala.

These boats are the largest ocean going tank carriers yet devised. They are flat bottomed so they may be run up on a beach to land the tanks. Once aground a few levers are pulled, a ramp in the bow drops onto the beach and the tanks roar off the ship directly onto the fighting terrain, ready for battle, their crews inside.

Before running ashore, the ship drops powerful anchors astern. After the tanks have landed, the hawsers attached to the anchors are rewound, thus pulling the lightened ship back into deep water. There it "ups anchor" and "steams" away under its powerful diesel engines.

Housing Project Built Nearby.

Near the yards 96 federal housing project homes have been completed for workers. Near by, 596 other units are under construction. These rent in one, two, and three room apartments, for $24, $27, and $30 a month. Meantime Seneca has grown from a village of 1,200 to a small city of 10,000.

All the workers belong to American Federation of Labor unions. The boilermakers' local is in charge and represents all other crafts, having collected $80,000 in dues, and $120,000 in initiation fees since the yard opened. Officials say there has been no union trouble.

Wages have been fixed by the government at $1.20 an hour for skilled men, 83 cents an hour for those who are learning. All work 9 hours a day, 6 days a week, a total of 54 hours. For this they are paid, in order to include the overtime, for 61 hours. This brings the pay of the skilled men to $76.25 a week, that of the others to $50.63.

Two Chicagoans were listed in promotions in the Illinois Reserve militia announced yesterday in Springfield by Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, adjutant general. Maj. George J. This has been made possible in countless cases by the New Symphonic Acousticon, the hearing aid based on the findings of the U. S. Government Deafness Survey.

Deafened people interested in obtaining a war industry job, or in doing civilian defense work, are invited to ask us for further information. Ask also for your copy of our FREE booklet entitled, "Government Attacks Deafness."

NAVY NURSE JAPS FREED TELLS OF GUAM'S CAPTURE

Praises Heroism of U. S. Women in Bombing.

The story of a gallant little group of navy nurses who stuck to their posts in the navy hospital at Guam during two days of heavy bombing and of their later experiences in Japanese internment camps was told yesterday by Lt. [j. g.] Leona Jackson of Washington, D. C., while visiting Chicago.

"We had just heard the news of the attack on Pearl Harbor," she related, "when Japanese bombers came over our island and left their calling cards. They bombed the island intermittently for two days."

Capture Isle on Third Day.

"The Japanese could have taken the island on the first day, but they didn't know that. They just kept bombing and bombing, and finally, on the third day, they came in.

"The worst moment of my life came when I looked out the hospital doorway and saw the Stars and Stripes being hauled down and the rising sun of Japan being sent up in its place.

"After two months of internment on Guam the Japs took us to Japan."

Asked about the treatment of prisoners, Lt. Jackson refused to comment, saying only, "The treatment of prisoners depends upon who is in charge in the camp. I prefer not to speak of that—there are too many prisoners there."

Thrills to Statue of Liberty.

In May rumors of possible repatriation began to hum thru the camp. It was not until June, however, that the five nurses, Miss Jackson among them, were put aboard a Japanese ship to be exchanged for Jap prisoners.

"I've always wanted to travel," Miss Jackson recalled, "but I never expected that my first 'round the world trip would be under the auspices of the Japanese government and the United States navy. I've never seen a better sight than I did when the Gripsholm [the exchange ship] came into New York harbor and I saw the lady with a lamp" [Statue of Liberty].

Soldiers Killed

Lt. J. H. Dyer (left) and Corp. Edward Gillings.

Deaths of two Lake county men, Corp. Edward Gillings, 33 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gillings of Gurnee, and Lt. James H. Dyer, 22, brother of Mrs. Werner Lerm, 332 Douglas avenue, Waukegan, were reported to the families yesterday.

Parents of Gillings were notified by telegram from Secretary of War Stimson that their son died Jan. 22 in northwest Africa from injuries, which were not described. Gillings graduated in 1928 from Warren Township High school, where he was a football and basketball star, and later worked in the township highway department.

Mrs. Lerm heard from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Worth Dyer, Grand Rapids, Mich., that her brother, an army bombardier, was killed Jan. 8 in a plane crash on the Texas-Oklahoma border. He made his home with Mrs. Lerm and operated a restaurant at 1735 North Sheridan road, Waukegan, before enlisting Jan. 5, 1942.

AMERICA WASTES THIRD OF FOOD, SCIENTIST SAYS

Fears Rise in Prices May Cause Malnutrition.

Dr. Anton J. Carlson, emeritus professor of physiology at the University of Chicago, gave Americans a scientific dressing down yesterday for their wastefulness with food and bad dietary habits. Dr. Carlson was one of four noted educators who addressed the Chicago College club and guests on the closing day of a three day alumnae college conference to study war and post-war issues in relation to institutions of liberal education.

Nowhere in the world, "not even in France and England, where in times of peace and prosperity there was much overeating," Dr. Carlson declared, was there ever the waste of food that there is in this country, even now. One-third of our food, he estimated, is wasted in the kitchens and at the tables in this country.

Assails Ordering Too Much.

"Why in the name of heaven," he demanded, "when you are dining in a public place, must you order more than you can eat, if it is not for the silly superstition that this is a mark of culture and superiority? Let me tell you that it is a badge of ignorance, waste, and a lack of thought for society."

One of the government's worst mistakes in the nutrition program, Dr. Carlson believed, has been the failure to mill its wheat nearly whole as is done in England.

Fears Foods May Be Too Costly.

As the rationing program now stands, Dr. Carlson said, all essential foods for a nutritive diet are still procurable, but he feared that the rising cost of food, despite price ceilings, with the salaries of millions of Americans remaining stationary, would produce a poverty that would result in widespread malnutrition.

The other speakers were Dean J. Roscoe Miller of the Northwestern university medical school, Paul Swain Havens, president of Wilson college, Chambersburg, Pa.; and Clarence H. Faust, dean of the college at the University of Chicago.

3 YOUNG YANKEES GO AWOL JUST TO SEE SOME ACTION

Hike 800 Miles to Reach New Tunisian Base.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH AN AMERICAN TASK FORCE IN TUNISIA, Jan. 18 [Delayed].—After hitch-hiking more than 800 miles across North Africa, three 19 year old American infantry privates showed up here tonight looking for the "fighting." They had left their own outfit, 11 days ago, thru the mud, to get into action.

The men, Frank M. Lueck of Austin, Minn., William S. Hopkins, Conneaut, O., and George Odom, Columbus, Ga., knew they were AWOL, but banked on one ace in the hole. "We figured they needed fighting men at the front," Lueck said.

All Had Same Idea.

"We all had the same idea," said Hopkins, who had served with Odom in the Canadian army before transferring to the American army last July. "We were sure our outfit would sit out the war right where it was. And I wanted to see action. That's why we volunteered for the Canadian army in the first place."

From their camp, which they had left at mess time, the adventurers proceeded by freight train to a town near Constantine and then continued down here by thumbing rides on military trucks.

"We ate three meals a day," said Odom. "Twice we were fed by the British. But every time all we said was that we were engineers going up to our outfit. We told the truth the first time when we left the train and encountered an ordnance major, who recommended that if we were seeking action to continue on down to Lt. Col. John W. Bowen's outfit."

This fitted in with the boys' own ideas, which was to join part of the same regiment.

Put in Heavy Weapons Company.

"You certainly went AWOL in the right direction," said the executive officer, Maj. John T. Corley. Then, to an aide, he said:

"Attach them to the heavy weapons company; give them arms and food."

Turning to the boys again, Corley said:

"We can use fighting men here, altho we can't condone your offense."

Lueck's lament was that wherever they had passed, they always had missed action. "Nothing," he said, "ever happens where we are."

Doughboys who had been in heavy night patrol fights assured the three newcomers that they had come to the right place.

BURY YANKS IN AFRICA

BY JOHN THOMPSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH A UNITED STATES TASK FORCE IN TUNISIA, Jan. 19 [Delayed].—We buried our dead today in the still quiet of the hot Tunisian sunshine outside the walls of a tiny French cemetery. We buried them with full military honors while watching the cloudless sky for enemy planes which had been over this morning.

It was a simple ceremony, but impressive to every one there. The American and French soldiers and civilians in this little town know that for every battle, every engagement, every skirmish, every advance, there will be dead.

There were nine simple, wooden coffins tilted against nine mounds of gray, dry earth. Arab workmen lowered them to the earth and then we had only broken clay and sand before us when sharp against the quiet came the bark of heavy machine guns getting their daily test.

Attacked at Night.

Nine men do not make a large casualty list in modern wars where entire divisions are lost. Actually these nine men didn't have a chance to return the enemy's fire. They were part of an anti-aircraft battery and infantry outpost which was attacked at night by enemy soldiers who crept in and rolled hand grenades into the position the Americans were digging.

So we stood beside Col. Edson D. Raff, our task force commander; Lt. Col. John W. Bowen, infantry commander, and Capt. Henry Nelson, of Minneapolis, Minn., of anti-aircraft, and beside us were officers and men and our French allies.

Soldiers Fire Salute.

Chaplain Richard E. Chase of Providence, R. I., wearing a dress uniform and the croix de guerre won at a mountain pass battle, read from the Bible.

A squad of tired and dusty soldiers, their helmets camouflaged with Tunisian mud, fired a salute while a French squads presented arms.

The day after the death of the nine men their mates on anti-aircraft guns knocked down an ME-109 [Messerschmitt fighter plane] and a Stuka dive bomber, and probably accounted for two other Stukas.

British Press On After Capture of Tripoli

Captions and arrows on the map explain developments in the fighting in Libya and in Tunisia.

GEN. ALEXANDER WINS BRITISH ACCLAIM FOR STRATEGY IN AFRICA

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—Lifted to the forefront of popular acclaim by the fall of Tripoli, Gen. Harold Alexander, commander in chief of allied forces in the middle east, is regarded by many here as the logical man to command the next offensive of the allied nations, wherever it may fall. By his desert campaign, he has won firm recognition as one of Britain's most capable strategists.

Thruout the campaign military authorities stressed the fact that it basically was Alexander's show, even tho Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery was more in the limelight as battlefront executor of his chief's grand stategy.

Now the public is remembering again that the 51 year old Alexander won fame in the last war and was the "last man off the beach at Dunkirk" in the present conflict.

Alexander also organized the present realistic battle school training methods in Britain and directed the British army's retreat out of Burma.

FALL OF TRIPOLI MORAL BLOW TO ITALY, SAY NAZIS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The fall of Tripoli was more of a "moral than a military or economic" blow to the Italian people, said a German broadcast recorded yesterday by the Associated Press.

"Tripolitania had lost its importance since the beginning of the war, and was less valuable economically than the fertile Cyrenaica," the broadcast said, and "since the occupation of Tunisia by the axis Tripolitania has almost completely lost its military importance."

The Rome radio earlier had declared that "the great struggle which Italy has been waging for 23 months in North Africa is coming to an end, "but added that "in war the loss of territory is not the end of maneuver. On the other hand, the loss of all these territories cannot prevent ultimate victory."

British radio estimates placed Italy's losses in man power in the war at approximately 500,000—450,000 of them in Africa, including 250,000 in British hands as prisoners.

BOLIVIAN MINISTER RESIGNS.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Jan. 23 (AP).—Alberto Crespo resigned as minister of economics yesterday to accept appointment as president of the Bolivian Development corporation, which will handle United States credits.

force their rule over the French or that their policies conflict with the American program of refusing recognition to their national committee in London as the government of France so that the French people may eventually select their own leader.

These developments occurred simultaneously with reports that Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, and Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, leader of the French in North Africa, were conferring. Secretary Hull indicated that the state department has received reports concerning these exchanges, but would give no details.

TALK OF NEW INVASION

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Stockholm reports reaching here today said there is open discussion among Germans in Norway and Denmark regarding what is described as "massing of allied shipping, invasion barges, and troops in Scotland and Iceland."

This supposedly prompted the Swedish prime minister, Per Albin Hansson, to order partial mobilization of the Swedish army.

Stockholm dispatches declared that, altho the Germans are fortifying coastal areas against a possible allied invasion, they have sent 80 per cent of their original air strength —which had been harassing convoys bound for Russia—to Africa for the battle pending there.

What Sweden could do to resist an invasion is uncertain. According to British correspondents in Stockholm, she has little ability to resist military pressure from Germany, having virtually no fleet, a weak air force, and being seriously short of fuel.

One correspondent, Ossian Coulding of the Daily Telegraph, however, suggests that in the event of a German invasion, Sweden may attempt to break thru central Norway to the Atlantic coast to welcome American and British forces and establish a line of supplies.

New R. A. F. Middle East Chief Replaces Tedder

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 23 (AP).—Air Chief Marshal William Sholto Douglas assumed command today of the Royal Air force in the Middle East, succeeding Air Marshal Arthur William Tedder. Announcement of the impending change, made in London Nov. 28, said Tedder would become vice chief of staff of the air forces.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA IS BIG AID TO ALLIES IN WAR

Exports Large Supplies of Food for Troops.

BY GAIL COMPTON.

Convoys plying the sea from the United States and Britain, around Africa to the middle east and Australia, stop at Cape Town and Durban in the Union of South Africa to take on tremendous supplies of food.

This is one of the important contributions the union is making to the war. It is expanding its surplus food crops to supply not only the convoys, but also the allied nations' troops in North Africa and the middle east. Without this help the problem of supply and food for the troops would fall even more heavily upon the United States.

Most of Surplus Exported.

Almost every ounce of its surplus foods are exported, H. M. Moolman, South African legation publicity director in New York, said yesterday. The union is exploiting the country's resources as never before to help meet the huge requirements of the troops and convoys.

A new canning industry is being developed in the union under the pressure of the war, Moolman reported. South African tin mines are being worked to capacity to supply the metal, and most of the output of these new food processors goes to troops.

Altho export figures are a war secret, Moolman said, large supplies are being diverted to the war. It is impossible for the union, however, to fill all the food requirements of the allied armies in North Africa, he said.

Maize Is Chief Food Product.

The chief food product of the union is maize [corn]. Much of it goes into a standard "war loaf" made of maize and wheat flour which the union has been making almost since the start of the war.

Dairy products are second in importance in the union's food production. Large quantities of butter and cheese are exported to troops and supplied to the convoys. When shipping space permits, the union also sends large quantities of these products to Britain.

Meat production is limited and before the war was exported only in small quantities. Lack of uniformity in types of meat animals retards the output, Moolman said.

Before the war the union exported large quantities of fresh fruits. Latest published figures showed 5 million cases of deciduous fruits such as peaches, plums, and grapes, and 5 million cases of citrus fruits sent to Britain.

Wheat production in the union is low because the climate is unfavorable. Only approximately 75 per cent of the union's needs are produced, and the rest normally is imported from Canada. The union grows soft wheat, and usually imports from 1 to 1½ million bags of hard wheat from Canada.

No Surplus Wheat in India.

The union has a population of more than 2½ million white persons and 8 million Negroes. About 10 per cent of the white men now are in the army serving for the most part in the middle east and north Africa.

Altho India is geographically situated to supply wheat to allied troops in north Africa, its production is barely sufficient for home needs and none is exported. India produces from 350 to 364 million bushels of wheat a year. In years of low production, wheat is imported from Australia. In 1939 approximately 45,000 tons of Australian wheat were brought in to meet a shortage.

WOMEN . . . and MEN too!

During 1942, I successfully advised hundreds of men and women how and what to do to qualify for high paid jobs in war production work. I am happy to say there are many who have taken the training I advised and are now drawing big pay in defense plants.

In order to give more men and women in the Chicago area an opportunity to know their qualifications, where and how to apply for employment and where and how to get training in the proper use of shop and hand tools, I will be at Hotel Morrison, Chicago, from 9 A. M. to 9. P. M. tomorrow, and I will gladly advise all who call how to learn the skills necessary to big-pay war production jobs.

All should share in victory as high paid workers. If you are qualified, it is your duty to apply at the nearest war plant. If not, stop holding your hands and complaining that you don't know how or what to do. You can have advice without obligation, on what training you need—a key to higher wages, security, and future career by calling or writing.

TRANSIT MERGER REPORT BY AIDS OF ICC DUE SOON

Final Decision Expected Within 3 Weeks.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

What has been heralded as a "critical report" on the proposed 179 million dollar Chicago traction unification scheme will be made public in a few days—possibly tomorrow—by the Illinois commerce commission.

It is expected that the final decision of the five commissioners on a request for permission to carry thru the consolidation will be rendered within three weeks. Altho the report, drawn up by Examiners Leslie E. Salter and Fred Kleinman, will not recommend either an approval or disapproval of the proposition, it will analyze the evidence in the case and certainly will have considerable weight with the commissioners.

Because the merger is of importance to every street car and elevated railroad rider, and possibly because it has become a political issue in the mayoralty campaign, the commission has adopted an unprecedented procedure in its handling of the case—one that will guarantee full publicity.

Period for Filing Exceptions.

Customarily the reports of commission examiners are submitted to the commission only. But Chairman John D. Biggs has ordered that the unification report be sent to the parties interested, including the city, all to be allowed 10 days to file exceptions.

When the legal briefs are in the commissioners will begin their deliberations.

Kleinman, who is chief accountant for the commission and a holdover from a former Democratic administration, referred to the coming report as "something to shoot at."

"There are more than 5,000 pages in the record, taken in the series of hearings that began in July," he said, "and more than a hundred exhibits. We are going thru all the testimony, for and against unification, and taking for our report the sections that seem most significant. Our task is the marshaling of the facts, not the drawing of a decision; that is the commissioners' task."

Broad Outline of Plan.

In broad outline the plan contemplates:

1. The unification, financial and operating, of the surface and elevated lines. The Chicago Motor Coach company would be left out.

2. A system of universal transfers.

3. The city's grant of a terminable [some people call it a perpetual] franchise to the Chicago Transit company, as the absorbing corporation would be called.

4. Issuance of 80 million dollars of bonds and about 100 millions of junior securities to acquire the "L" and surface lines from the present security owners.

5. The spending of 102 million dollars over eight years for improvements in service. Admittedly this spending must wait until after the war.

6. Turning over of the regulatory powers of the ICC to a board of three members appointed by the mayor of Chicago.

Duties Defined by Law.

The state utility act closely defines the powers and duties of the commission. It is ordered, in cases like the present one, to make its own investigation of the financial soundness of the merged company and to see that the securities issued are not in excess of the fair value of the physical properties.

Also, the commission must find that the consolidation is in the public interest, that it will be able to earn an adequate amount with a "reasonable" rate of fare, and that it will be able to carry out the modernization program.

Agitation for traction unity is not new. It began long before 1900, after enterprisers had built up a number of local transportation companies in different sections and purchased franchises from the city.

Lines in Receivership.

From 1907 to 1927 the surface lines enjoyed a franchise and were operated as a unit. When the franchise expired the four financial units making up the street car system were thrown into receivership and are still there. Since 1931 these lines have been unable to pay any compensation to the city [up to that time they had poured into the city's traction fund some 40 million dollars]. They have, however, paid the interest on first mortgage bonds—about $3,600,000 a year.

The elevated has long been in receivership and in recent years has not earned operating expenses. The present unity scheme has been growing since 1935. The city passed a new franchise ordinance and had it approved by referendum, with some 250,000 voters participating.

Commission's Approval Sought.

Judge Michael L. Igoe of the federal District court, in charge of the receiverships, last June ordered five attorneys to go before the commission to ask its approval of the merger. Most of the work of presenting evidence was handled by Attorneys William J. Friedman and Thomas L. Marshall.

Much of the testimony was on valuation, on the earnings prospects of the proposed company, and on the rate of fare. There were widely different views on these subjects, many of them purely speculative. The examiners were pointedly critical of the 179 million valuation figure during the hearings.

Blast Wrecks Filling Station

Ignited by Spark

Exploding gasoline fumes yesterday caused $1,000 damage to a filling station at 87th street and Ashland avenue, blowing out a part of the roof, the rear wall, and the front doors.

Raymond Watkins, 22 years old, of 1619 West 87th street, an attendant, who was alone in the station, was unhurt by the blast. Watkins had been repairing a carburetor in the station's greasing pit.

Fire Chief Harry Scheckel of the fifth division said that the explosion was caused when a spark ignited fumes.

Tack in Throat of Baby Removed Without Injury

A tack which Richard Laymon, 4 months old, swallowed yesterday at his home at 4045 Wellington street, was removed a short time later at the Children's Memorial hospital, without injury to the child. The tack, which fastened the lining of the baby's crib came loose and was lodged in his throat. His mother, Mrs. Margaret Laymon, 29, took him first to the Belmont hospital and then to the Children's Memorial hospital.

TWO HURT AS TROLLEYS CRASH.

Two persons were injured yesterday when two street cars collided at Washington and Dearborn streets. Minor injuries were suffered by Mrs. Agatha Jankowski, 38 years old, 3055 Farrell street, and Miss Jane Cendrowski, 29, of 2311 Marshall boulevard.

REVEAL REITMAN, STRICKEN ILL IN AIR, SAVED PLANE

Army officers at Chanute field, Rantoul, Ill., told yesterday of the heroism displayed by Lt. Ben Reitman, son of Dr. Ben L. Reitman, Chicago radical who died last November, in landing and thus saving a valuable army pursuit plane when he was suddenly stricken with the illness that later cost his life.

Lt. Reitman died Thursday in the Rantoul hospital of spinal meningitis. The malady struck him suddenly as he flew in formation with other officers of the ferry command near Danville, Ill.

Fellow pilots saw Lt. Reitman's pursuit plane waver and fall out of formation. In preference to parachuting to safety, he brought the swift plane to earth on a cow pasture airport whose runways were not designed for the high speed landings of army planes.

Lt. Reitman managed to reach a nearby farmhouse and phoned Chanute field for an ambulance. He was unconscious when the ambulance arrived.

Funeral services for the flyer will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow in the chapel at 2115 West 95th street.

75 Oak Park Autoists Get Tickets; Lacked 1943 Tags

Oak Park police yesterday issued between 75 and 100 summonses to motorists who had failed to buy their 1943 village vehicle tax tags before the Friday deadline. Many of them paid $1 fines and $1 costs to a police desk sergeant. Approximately 10 policemen were busy issuing the summonses yesterday.

WHY NORTH AFRICA REMAINS FRENCH.

Col. Conrad H. Lanza, writing in the Field Artillery Journal, explains why more than 15 million natives in North Africa have been content to remain under French rule even after France had become a broken nation. When any movement for native independence threatened to gain headway, he says, all the French had to do was point out to the Moslem population that if Frenchmen were ejected Germans and Italians would soon move in.

French rule in Morocco, Algeria, and Tunis has been relatively liberal. There was no interference with native customs, laws, and religion. A considerable measure of self-government is permitted the natives and Algeria has representation in the French chamber of deputies and the senate. The sultan of Morocco and the bey of Tunis have been left undisturbed on their thrones. France has also improved the economy of the countries greatly.

The natives had no difficulty perceiving that under German or Italian rule their lot would be much worse than it is under the tolerant French. They were sufficiently acquainted with the record of European imperialism in Africa to know that no native state could hope for long to remain independent. They did not love the French, perhaps, but if it was necessary to submit to suzerainty at all they preferred to keep the foreigners with whom they had learned to get along.

In this manner about 1,135,000 Frenchmen have been able to control more than 15 million natives and have managed to keep out of difficulties even after France became a conquered nation. French rule has existed largely by sufferance since 1940, but it nevertheless was effective and it had to be recognized by Gen. Eisenhower when he brought the American Expeditionary Force in North Africa. The attitude of 15 million natives and more than a million Frenchmen was a force to be reckoned with, and Eisenhower logically made his arrangements with the men who control these multitudes.

The natives, traditionally suspicious of all strangers, especially when they come as an invading army, have apparently been kept in line. That is an accomplishment of the first order, for it freed Eisenhower's hands and made it possible for him to concentrate his forces against the Germans and Italians rather than to be diverted into a costly and profitless series of guerrilla campaigns against the Arabs. The meddlers both here and in Britain have shown a persistent inability to comprehend the fact that the kind of French rule recognized by Eisenhower, while it may be far from ideal, is the kind the North Africans themselves have elected to accept.

To use an American army to force the unwanted De Gaullists upon the people of North Africa might bring on catastrophe. Yet that is the very thing that a certain type of master mind in far away council chambers, drawing rooms, and editorial sanctums seems bent upon accomplishing.

THE FACTS OF LIFE FOR TANNERS.

The magazine Hide and Leather and Shoes takes violent exception to our editorial of Jan. 12, in which we pointed out that while the national objective has been to increase our output of things essential for the war, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard had urged as the 1942 program for the beef cattle industry the slaughtering of aged cows and other she-stock. We pointed out that "if anything would be certain to bring about a beef, fats, and leather shortage Secretary Wickard's program was that."

If the editor of Hide and Leather and Shoes thinks that it is possible to kill off the female of any species and still have a large future production, he needs to have the facts of life explained to him. No one questions that there was a large slaughter of beef in 1942, and that this resulted in a large supply of hides. But to the extent that Wickard's plan of killing off the females was followed, the present large supply made certain that in uncertain future years there will be fewer cattle and therefore less meat and less leather than we would otherwise have. In September, October, and November, the last three months for which there are figures, there were 106,000 fewer steers slaughtered under federal inspection than in the corresponding period in 1941, but in the 1942 period 471,000 more head of she-stock were slaughtered.

This trend must not be permitted to continue or in succeeding years—if not in 1943, then in 1944 or 1945—the supply of beef and of hides is going to be inadequate if the war continues to restrict imports. The secretary of agriculture has no right to gamble on the war being over in 1943. No such assumption is being made in the other war preparations.

Tanners with whom we have talked do not contemplate the future with the same equanimity as the editor of Hide and Leather and Shoes. A survey of the leather and shoe industries for 1943 by Standard and Poor's corporation concludes that tanning operations will decline because of a shortage of materials. When the award of the leather medal is made to Secretary Wickard for the silliest thing done during the war, Editor Bryan of Hide and Leather and Shoes ought to receive some sort of mention.

THE BUROCRAT AT WORK.

Harold L. Ickes, as petroleum administrator has issued an order limiting the hours per day and per week gasoline stations may be open and the number of hours they may sell gasoline to the holders of the alphabetical cards. Stations must choose between staying open no more than 72 hours per week or staying open all the time.

It has to be one or the other. Fourteen hours or 16 hours per day is out. Moreover, no matter how long the station is open, gasoline is to be made available to holders of A, B, or C cards only 12 hours in any one day, or 72 hours in any week. The stations on the longer schedules may serve only commercial vehicles.

The station operators with few exceptions find no fault with the order, as they are on a 12 hour day already. A few, however, have been ready to meet the needs of drivers forced to go out in the middle of the night because of emergencies, and to serve the large numbers of night workers. During the cold wave, it often was impossible to get cabs by phoning for them at night. Those who had to rush to hospitals or to make other unforeseen trips have had to depend upon private cars. The Ickes order will make it impossible to go out at night if you have not been forehanded in filling the gas tank. It will make it difficult for war workers on the night shifts to get gasoline and have their cars serviced.

Transportation now presents serious difficulties. The Ickes order will add to them without producing any benefits at all so far as the general public is concerned.

SHARP PRACTICE.

The people expect of every national administration that it will administer the laws of the country fairly and in keeping with the purpose of congress in enacting them. It is for the government itself to set the example in fair dealing. Subterfuge, chiseling, and soaking have no place in government administration. Some recent acts of the treasury department have violated these standards.

In section 901 of the social security act, approved Aug. 14, congress sought to induce states to pass unemployment insurance laws. The law provided for a tax starting at 1 per cent in 1936 and running up to 3 per cent after 1937 upon the pay rolls of employers of 8 or more persons. Those who had 7 workers or less were exempt from the tax. The law provided that in states which adopted unemployment insurance measures, meeting certain standards, the employers can offset up to 90 per cent of the federal tax, by contributions to the state insurance fund.

Illinois adopted an unemployment insurance law in 1935 which was approved by the federal security board. The law applied, as did the federal act, to employers of 8 or more. Employers of 7 or less were not subject to either the federal or the state tax. Such smaller employers were not permitted to insure their employés against unemployment.

In 1940 the coverage of the Illinois unemployment compensation law was changed so as to take in employers of 6 or more.

A small corporation in Chicago has had 6 employés from 1935 to this date, never less and never more. It paid neither a federal nor a state tax from 1935 to 1940, but since the Illinois act was amended to cover employés of 6 or more, it has made its contributions as required to the Illinois unemployment insurance fund.

A few weeks ago a representative of the treasury department visited the office of this corporation and demanded that it make payments of the 1, 2, and 3 per cent tax to the federal government from 1935 to 1940. The government man said that tho there were never more than 6 persons actually at work or receiving pay from the little Illinois company, it had 8 employés for the purposes of the act. The government insisted that two dummy officers, who never received any compensation from the company and never did any work for it, were employés. The treasury demanded payment of the tax, with penalties and interest.

The little Illinois company, figuring that if the two dummies, who never did a day's work or received a cent's compensation, were employés to the federal government they must also be employés to Illinois. The company thereupon offered to make contributions to the state unemployment insurance fund for the years following 1935. If the state were to accept the tax, then the employés of the company would be eligible to benefits on the basis of its contributions. But the state said 6 plus 2 noughts make 6 and not 8 and refused to accept the tax.

Having been told that it had 8 employés for purposes of the federal unemployment insurance tax, the company inquired whether it was covered by the federal salary freezing order, applicable to employers of 8 or more. In response to a letter the government has informed this employer that he has only 6 employés and that his employés are not subject to the freeze.

The agent of the treasury department which ordered this employer to pay a tax from which congress meant it to be exempt stated to the employer that he had found 6 other employers that week who were hit the same way. The treasury is chiseling. Another example of treasury chiseling was its assessment of the 5 per cent occupational tax on amounts earned last year which were not paid until 1943. The treasury well knows that the purpose of congress was to collect on 1943 earnings. But if twisting the language will enable it to get a few extra pennies, the treasury is willing to do the twisting. Maybe Sen. Murray's little business committee should look into this.

VOICES FROM THE CATACOMBS.

[Topeka Daily Capital.]

Christian voices still speak from the catacombs of a Europe dominated by the Nazi anti-Christ and splotched with the blood of innocents, says Pathfinder magazine. From Württemberg, Bishop Wurm of the Evangelical church is reported to have written a letter to Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels protesting the silencing of the Christian press thru paper restrictions. Carrying his argument farther, he commented: "One violent deed follows another against church property, educational institutions, and nursing institutions. Yet in the state one hears the cry of distress for those who are oppressed. Unfortunately, while for a long time there can be no abatement of economic distress or personal sacrifice, the maniacal weltanschauung's [world philosophy] attack against the Christian faith, the silencing of the church, and the oppression of many Christian consciences, can be changed."

Meantime in Italy Cardinal Rocca, archbishop of Bologna, has issued a letter in which he hints that Italy should consider making peace. "If, as good citizens and good soldiers," said the cardinal, "we desire that the situation does not grow worse, but may soon come to a good end, this does not mean lack of patriotism, but, on the contrary, glorious love of the fatherland. This attitude of reconciliation is not wickedness, but is sublime Italian and Catholic wisdom."

Cardinal Rocca compared the world to a family. "It can happen in a numerous family that, in spite of the father's goodness, a fight starts among brothers. It may last for years and lead to difficult situations. Are these children no more brothers? . . . No, certainly not. Without doubt here [in a struggle among peoples] brotherhood does not cease and is not destroyed by war. . . . The practical and safe way is not to deny brotherhood and condemn brotherly love; the safe way is to recognize them and to try to restore them. . . ."

AMERICAN INTERNEES.

[General Electric Graphic News.]

No direct word has seeped thru concerning the status of Frank Corliss and his family, following the fall of Manila. Frank is well remembered in the General Electric retailing field. After experience in several countries, settled in the Philippine capital. Now he is one of 3,000 American civilians interned by the Japanese.

According to a release from the office of war information, based on unofficial reports from those who have returned from the Philippines, those interned are quartered on the 30 acre campus of Santo Tomas university, the oldest college in the orient. Here they have organized themselves into a self-governing community, with suborganizations covering their varied activities. The report lists an electrical committee, which "consists of men, a number of them former General Electric employés, who put up lights, repair damaged wiring, and fix fuses." Unquestionably, Frank is general consultant.

We hope that these Americans are receiving treatment comparable to that given interned Japanese nationals in this country. On a recent trip to the west, a large packing house was pointed out to us. For years it had been famed for the excellence of its bacon and other pork products. The entire output of this plant is given over to supplying Japanese internment communities. Yet the American citizen now finds bacon a luxury seldom to be obtained in his store! There are many sermons to be found in this fact.

EARLY AMERICAN RIGHTS

[The following address was delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, on the Chicago Theater of the Air, over W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. M'CORMICK.

Last week I spoke on the rights of Englishmen, quoting from the original documents.

Tonight I will begin a discussion of the much more comprehensive rights of Americans and the efforts made by our forefathers to preserve them for us.

Those of you who were listening last year may remember that I recounted the settlement of the 13 colonies, and that the settlers were, for the most part, refugees from persecution.

Because of the prominence given by Massachusetts historians to the Pilgrims, it is quite commonly believed that most of the settlers were refugees from Jacobite oppression. Such is far from the case. The families of the men to whom we owe most for our Constitution and Bill of Rights fled from the long parliament and Cromwell; the forebears of western Pennsylvania and Virginia, from William III.

After the Hanoverian succession, there were Jacobite refugees from the fury of the duke of Cumberland. There were Huguenot refugees from France, refugees from northern Italy, Switzerland, and Germans from the Palatinate. These last found conditions so superior to what they had known at home that during the Revolution they were the most loyal subjects of the British crown.

With the outbreak of the Revolution and the expulsion of the royal governors and judges, the citizens were automatically restored the common law rights of Englishmen, but they were far from satisfied with them.

The Declaration of Independence adopted by the second continental congress sought its authority in the rights of man as conceived by the great political philosophers of the 18th century of whom the greatest was George Mason of Virginia.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident," wrote Thomas Jefferson, "that all men are created equal and that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

He then lists the offenses of the king and Great Britain against the colonies. Most of these evils passed with the Revolution, but certain of them were dealt with in subsequent instruments and some of them are not yet cured.

He wrote, I quote:

"He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their office, and the amount and payment of their salaries. He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

"For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury: for transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offences."

Then came the most momentous statement in history: "We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in general congress, assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name, and by authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states."

The congress then advised the states to adopt constitutions. Under Mason's leadership Virginia was the first state to act, and adopted the first Bill of Rights in 1776, all of which Mason wrote excepting the reference to religious freedom, which was written by Patrick Henry.

The first constitution of Massachusetts, written in 1780, which did not include a bill of rights, was overwhelmingly rejected, and the second one was adopted in 1782, after a bill of rights of 32 paragraphs, written by John Adams, who had been in the company of the great Virginian philosophers for seven years, had been added.

It is interesting to observe that while this bill of rights provided for freedom of religious worship, it also provided for a Protestant state church which, however, was never set up.

We may observe in passing that years later congress passed a law for a national church, but President Madison vetoed it as violating the Bill of Rights.

One by one each of the 13 states adopted a bill of rights and every state that was subsequently admitted to the Union has done so; so did the Republic of Texas; so did the Confederacy in 1861. I cannot conceive that congress will admit another state into the Union that does not have a bill of rights as the heart of its constitutional law.

If all of the settlers of the colonies had fled the same oppression they would probably have set up a government limited to their own religious belief. Having escaped from different oppressions, the idea of freedom of worship arose early in the colonies. Religion had been free, notably in Rhode Island, Maryland, and Pennsylvania, and religious oppression had been practiced in other states, principally Massachusetts, New York, and Virginia.

Unison against the common enemy compelled toleration of each other's convictions. We find in George Washington's diary that he—a lifelong member of the Church of England—attended services of all of the other churches during the second continental congress, and we find that John Adams, a Congregationalist, moved that an Episcopal minister conduct services for the congress. Catholics were among the signers of the Declaration of Independence and of the constitutional convention.

The states began the Revolutionary war under the feeble direction of the continental congress and in 1778 formed the Confederation. The idea of the Confederation was not novel. There had been the New England federation. There had been Penn's plan of union in 1697. There had been the Albany plan of union proposed by Franklin in 1754, and Galloway's plan of union in 1774, which missed adoption in the first continental congress by only one vote and which John Adams thought would have prevented the Revolutionary war.

The Confederation has been too much criticized. It was an epochal step in the direction of nationhood. It named the nation. It passed the famous ordinance for the governing of the Northwest Territory. It prepared the public mind for a national government, and was an indispensable step in our development, and therefore deserves immortality rather than reprobation from us, its beneficiaries.

How this bloomed into the great Constitution of the United States we will see next week.

COMMON SENSE AND THE BALANCED DIET.

OUR interest in nutrition has been stimulated by the war effort. Rationing and various propaganda pronouncements have made us food conscious. Out of it all much good will ensue, particularly in public education. In fact, the coming generation will profit by improved dietary practices.

We cannot keep going unless the body is supplied with fuel. Choice is influenced by natural instinct, but this is not always a safe guide. When it comes to selecting edibles, human beings are less reliable than animals. All too often appetite is artificial, stimulated by appearance, odor, and flavor. Then, too, many of us are governed wholly by custom.

Now, there need be no undernourishment. There is an adequate quantity of raw materials, and information is available concerning the preparation of every item on the bill of fare. But not enough of us understand that bulky, leafy vegetables, which satisfy hunger, may not provide the balance of nutriments so necessary to well being.

First of all, then, we must keep in mind the important protective articles. These include milk, butter, cheese, eggs, greens, fish, and fresh fruit. We can depend upon cereals for energy but not to furnish a complete meal. While adults may maintain health without some of these basic requirements for weeks or months, the rule does not hold with children. Without them they will fail to develop stalwart frames.

We oldsters do not like to be lectured. We know what we want and we try to procure it. Many of us do not realize that the zest for life would be enhanced immeasurably could we revert to the habits of childhood. Furthermore, we should not insist upon the widest variety. An entire nation could thrive upon milk, mutton, fish, eggs, and potatoes. Can it be that such a program will banish many of our crippling diseases—hardening of the arteries, arthritis, and tooth decay? Civilization's galaxy of flavors, sauces, and gravies—delectable as they are—have not contributed to brawn.

In addition, we must recall that the human digestive tract is attuned to rather concentrated dishes. We are not built to absorb all our required calories if they must come from cabbage, carrots, or spinach. To do so would demand half a dozen stomachs and a greatly elongated alimentary canal.

Left to ourselves, many of us unwittingly deprive our tissues of indispensable elements. True enough, children cannot guard against rickets because they do not plan their own menus. But adults will suffer occasionally from scurvy in the midst of plenty. It is not because they cannot obtain vitamin C foods but they just don't care for them.

Iron, which every one must have, should come via what we eat. For the most part, we can find the proper amount in pork, egg yolk, beans, dates, oatmeal, and certain dried fruits [apricots, peaches, and raisins]. If blood loss from any cause has been excessive, however, this substance can be taken as medicine.

Vitamin reinforcements will seldom be called for. On the other hand, unless we give attention to our daily intake, we may become persistent patrons of drug stores. Unfortunately, it is not possible to store up these essentials to any great degree—any more than we can consume 21 meals [a week's quota] at one sitting.

BOWEL SPASMS.

J. M. writes: A says a spastic bowel is mostly a case of nerves. B says it is organic. Who is right?

REPLY.

Spasms of the colon may come on thru worry, apprehension, etc. On the other hand, irritation within the structure may result in an identical state of affairs. Take your choice.

STRONG CAPILLARIES.

F. R. writes: Why is it that my skin never gets black and blue when I bump myself or fall down?

REPLY.

Your capillaries are unusually resistant to pressure. They refuse to break. Your blood is probably rich in platelets.

RICKENBACKER AS A TEXT.

Elmwood Park, Ill., Jan. 18.—With many other pastors, I used the Rickenbacker story in my sermon yesterday. I hope it will be published in book form and scattered over the nation. How splendid if it were read every week for the next six months in every public schoolroom in the land. How fine if it were put into the public school readers instead of the paganism there now.

What misinterpretation of law, what lack of common sense, to think that nonsectarian religion and such stories as that of Rickenbacker must be kept out of public schools! No wonder crime has become our "second front" as The Tribune cartoon of last Sept. 23 noted. No wonder America is going to secularism, practical atheism, in spite of all we preachers, priests, and rabbis can do. We are reaping exactly what Archbishop Ireland over 50 years ago told us would come, just what Rabbi Hirsch said 35 years ago would result from educating the heads but not the hearts of our boys and girls in the schools of the nation.

I have been a subscriber to and reader of The Tribune for over 50 years, and do not recall a more constructive piece of news I have seen in The Tribune in all that time than the Rickenbacker story.

W. S. Fleming.

LOW PAY IN HOSPITALS.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—After spending approximately two months in one of our best hospitals, I feel the nursing shortage can be laid to three simple causes: [1] underpaid nurses; [2] underpaid interns and student nurses, and [3] underpaid maids and other personnel.

We are paying our hospital bills promptly these days. The hospitals are crowded. The nurses have received the great increase of $5 or $10 a month. I talked to fine, intelligent nurses who are considering defense plant jobs where wages for unskilled work top their professional salaries.

M. J.

YOU HAVE TO GET UP EARLY TO BEAT THESE.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—We think our granddaughter, Carole Ann McGonagle, is probably the youngest war bond owner. She was born July 13, at 12:08 p. m., and her grandfather purchased for her a bond the same day at 2:30 p. m.—two hours and 22 minutes after she was born.

Walter S. Petersen.

Oshkosh, Wis., Jan. 15.—The beginning of the week you ran an article about a woman who believed her son to be the youngest owner of a defense bond. My daughter does not want him to be harboring any false illusion, since she owned a defense bond at 3½ hours of age.

Mrs. Charles Schriber.

PURSE SNATCHER.

Sterling, Ill., Jan. 15.—If the person who took my purse from the telephone shelf in the North Western station on Sunday morning has a conscience, let him read and think.

I traveled in from Sterling to visit my son at Great Lakes, whom I haven't seen in a long time. Every penny I had was in the purse. Of course, my journey ended. Can you visualize the disappointment of my boy, and can you imagine how I got back home?

Mother from Sterling.

HOSPITAL NURSES' VACATIONS.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Several statements made by "R. N." [Sunday Tribune, Jan. 17] are incorrect when applied to hospitals generally, according to information obtained from 82 hospitals in Wisconsin, Indiana, and Illinois in a survey made by the writer several years ago.

Seventy-three of 82 hospitals gave vacations with pay to nurses and other employés. Usually, of course, vacations are given only after several months' employment, in some cases a year. At a meeting of the Chicago Hospital council in the spring of 1942 the question was raised regarding vacations, because of the great shortage of personnel and increased hospital census. It was unanimously agreed that even under these trying circumstances hospitals would make every effort to continue the policy of giving vacations. In the hospital I represent all employés receive vacations. General staff nurses receive three weeks, those nurses in supervisory positions four weeks, annually. One bonus week is given to all employés for each five years' stay. Several nurses have enjoyed their six week vacation during their tenth year of service. At least one other hospital in this area has a similar plan.

Forty-five of 82 hospitals reported sick leave allowed with pay; 20 did not allow sick leaves with pay; the remaining questionnaires could not be tabulated. Seventy-seven of 82 hospitals gave hospital care. Fifty of these gave free care; the remaining number gave special discounts of from 10 per cent to 50 per cent.

There is no reason to believe that policies generally are less liberal now than at a time when unemployment was high. It is true that the nurse in training does not receive compensation, but she receives a valuable education for which in many cases she pays no tuition except service, plus room, board, and laundry.

While at present hospitals cannot compete with salaries paid by government and defense industries, over a period of years the hospital employé has greater security in his position than is true of positions in industry as a whole.

Mabel W. Binner,
Administrator,
Children's Memorial Hospital.

"FORCEFUL AND VITAL SERMON."

Chicago, Jan. 19.—There is no need of my waiting until the story of Lt. James C. Whittaker is completed to express to you my profound appreciation for your publication of this vivid, living story of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker and those brave men at sea.

The good this most forceful and vital sermon will accomplish is immeasurable.

Mrs. George F. Baxter.

NOTHING SACRED IN POLITICAL LABELS.

Palos Park, Ill., Jan. 16.—The interview of Arthur Evans with Gov. Jones of Louisiana opens up the vista of a joint southern and northern movement for putting an end to crackpot theories and practices in government. As Gov. Jones says: "State rights have been thrown into the scrap heap, the tariff is out as an issue, and we have no protection. What sane reason is there for adherence to a party on its traditional foundation when the foundations are gone?"

For sentimental reasons he would keep the name "Democratic" and have their own Democratic party of the south, the name "Republican" by its association with carpetbag government being anathema in the south. So long as the electoral votes of the south and those of like thinking voters of the north are finally joined, this may be the best way to lead the south away from its allegiance to a sentiment which has cost it dearly.

If the voters of the north who have been in the Republican party now will also recognize that there is nothing sacred in a name, Jefferson having been elected by a "Republican party" which later became the Democratic, and will voluntarily adopt a name such as "National" or "Constitutional" which will not carry any associations of the war between the states, the way would be open to link all like thinking men in opposition to the present bizarre aggregation of half-baked experimenters in government.

Evan L. Reed.

THE SMEAR GOES ON THE ROAD.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 18.—We liked the editorial on Clare Hoffman today. This was particularly interesting to us just now because last Friday evening, Leland Stowe, supposed world commentator, gave such a poor excuse for a speech in our town, naming Mr. Hoffman as "rotten," even tho he said he did not know the man. Not hard to guess by whom he might be coached.

Blanch I. Billingham.

THEY CALL IT CREAM.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—I am a housewife. Why must we pay the same price as in the past for a pint of cream after it has now been cut to not much better than milk? Why the same money for something we don't get? Mrs. B. Krause.

REACTION IN TECHNICOLOR.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—I see "Red" when Mrs. Roosevelt presumes to dictate the course of our lives after the war.

FIXTURES.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Are shelves which are attached by screws considered a permanent part of a building? S. P.

On Nov. 4, 1941, committees of the bar association and of the Real Estate board approved rules for closing real estate sales, including the following:

[a] In all sales the following chattels or fixtures are to be included in the conveyance of real estate: Shades and blinds screens, storm doors and windows, stoker and firing tools, electric lighting fixtures, oil burners, gas heating units and hot water heating units, free and clear of liens.

[b] In sales of other than one family dwellings the following chattels or fixtures shall also be included in addition to those listed in paragraph [a]: Hall carpets, refrigerators, gas and electric stoves, lawn mowers, garden hose.

While these committees have no power to create law, their statement is persuasive as to what is customary and will probably be followed by the courts.

As to articles not listed in the statement, which are so attached that they can be removed without material injury, the intent with which they are attached, as evidenced by express agreement or by the surrounding circumstances, will govern. Barbour vs. Lammerts & Mann Co., 277 Ill. App. 613.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NEW RULE FOR THE FLAG.

Chicago, Jan. 16 [Legal Friend of the People].—Is it proper to display two flags against a wall with the unions together, i. e., one having the stars to the right and the other to the left? H. B.

Yes. Under resolution of congress approved Dec. 22, 1942, the requirement of June 22, 1942, that the union be to the observer's left has been omitted. No penalties are specified in either resolution.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DEDUCTIBLE LOSS.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Ten or more years ago I invested $4,000 in mortgage bonds. There was a default in the payment of interest and in payment of the bonds at maturity. In 1942 the property was sold and bondholders received 70 cents on the dollar. I received $2,800; my loss was $1,200. 1. Will I have to declare the $2,800 as income? 2. Can I deduct the $1,200 loss from my 1942 income? A. W.

1. No, you would not have an income and a loss on the same transaction.

2. Yes.

CHARGE AGAINST ESTATE.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—An aged couple receives old age pension from the government. After their deaths, will the government claim from their children the amount paid the parents or place a claim on the children's property or real estate? M. F.

The accumulated payments would be a charge against any estate left by the old persons. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

VICTORY TAX.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I operate a one chair barber shop from which I take in, on the average, from $18 to $40 a week. How can I pay the victory tax? S. T.

Obviously, there can be no pay roll deduction. After the close of the year 1943 you will report your income and will calculate the victory tax with other taxes at that time. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

COURT AND LEGAL COSTS.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I was recently party to a divorce suit in which I paid the court and legal fees. Will the total sum be deductible on my income tax return? T. S.

No, it will not be deductible.

MAN POWER BOG TURNS ALABAMA FROM NEW DEAL

Farmers Assail Waste of Vital Workers.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 23.—The man power problem resulting from burocratic regulations appears to be a field of growing criticism of the New Deal in Alabama, a Democratic stronghold.

Among business men large and small the traveler uncovers resentment against copious questionnaires sent out by Washington departments and bureaus and the maze of regulations, which are the equivalent of laws. In stores and office buildings one gathers a stock opinion, which may be summarized as follows:

"We're conservative down here in the south, and folks are getting tired of being pushed around by the New Deal, which is moving in the opposite direction. Everybody is all-out to help win the war as quickly as possible, but folks are getting an impression of muddling in Washington on the domestic program, which retards the war effort."

Dairy Cows Being Sold.

In talking with farmers one hears resentment against the draining of labor from the farms. Here and there dairy cows are being sold because of lack of labor.

Crops were bounteous last year. The farmers are being praised for doing a grand job in the face of the farm labor shortage. The farmers say food is essential to the war, and with increased production being sought essential farm labor ought to be frozen. The agitation against the 40 hour basic week in industry, which raged in the Democratic press of the south last year, is still heard.

"What gripes the farmer," said one agricultural expert, "is that he works from sunup to sundown with no overtime pay while labor finds its overtime pay in the pay envelope. It is a cause of irritation of long standing."

Waste of Man Power Charged.

Some of the agriculturists contend that man power is being wasted in some defense industrial plants which should be turned into essential farm labor. The Alabama Farm Bureau federation, nonpartisan, with 40,000 members, dwelt on this in its annual resolutions last November.

"The nation faces a serious food shortage," the report said. "Food is as important in winning the war as powder. There will be no possibility of farmers maintaining in 1943 the high rate of production attained this year unless the present drain of man power of the farms is stopped and stopped quickly.

"The drain of man power away from the farm to highly paid industrial jobs is even more serious than the drain resulting from selective service. One remedy for this situation is to make more efficient use of man power in industrial plants. We are convinced that great numbers of industrial plants are flagrantly wasting man power.

Oversupply Termed Curb.

"In many shipbuilding plants and other plants of which our members have personal knowledge, many more men are employed than are needed for the work in hand. A substantial percentage of these men could be released for other jobs and those remaining easily could maintain existing production schedules without any increase in working hours. Under prevailing conditions the superfluous men simply get in the way of the others and actually curtail the productivity of the men who are needed."

The farm federation urged Washington to set an example for the nation by lopping off nonessential federal pay rollers.

"Every federal agency should prune its personnel to the lowest possible figure consistent with efficient operation," the federation said. "Farmers greatly increased their production in 1942 in spite of reduced man power. Federal agencies can do likewise if an effort is made."

Subsidy Plan Opposed.

The farm federation is against the idea, broached in some quarters, that the retail cost of food be kept low to the consumer by government subsidies to producers or processors.

"For the government to subsidize consumers by paying part of their legitimate food bill in these times, when consumers are better able to pay fair prices than ever before, is to set a very bad precedent," the federation said. "If consumers are given subsidies now, they will feel that they are even more entitled to subsidies after the war, when wages will be much lower."

Efforts in Washington to abolish the poll tax as a requisite for voting is another general source of resentment against the New Deal in the Democratic deep south. Alabama has the poll tax in its state constitution of 1901. Political opinion seems to be divided as to whether the state might well abolish it, but opinion is solid here that this is a matter for Alabama to decide.

MRS. SYLVIA CWIK.

Mrs. Sylvia Cwik, 26 years old, who shot and killed her estranged husband, Eugene, 26, in a quarrel in her basement apartment at 3136 Jackson boulevard Friday, was exonerated yesterday by a coroner's jury. The police, however, continued to hold her on a charge of murder.

John J. Phillips, assistant state's attorney, said that despite a verdict of justifiable homicide returned by the jury, evidence against Mrs. Cwik will be presented before the grand jury.

Louis Galambos, 2744 West 23d place, who testified he loved Mrs. Cwik and planned to marry her, was in the apartment when Cwik called and started to quarrel with his wife. Galambos said Cwik threatened her and Mrs. Cwik backed away to avoid him. Mrs. Cwik, Galambos asserted, shot her husband twice.

LEADER OF DRYS CALLS HIS ARREST WET CONSPIRACY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Edward Page Gaston, self-styled commander of the Patriot Guard of America, a dry organization he founded, tonight charged his recent arrest by the federal bureau of investigation for illegally wearing the uniform of an army captain was a conspiracy between corrupt liquor interests and wet administration officials.

After a preliminary hearing at which his case was set for trial Feb. 3, Gaston appealed for a congressional investigation of his arrest. He asserted that as a "well known military staff officer" and national commander of the organization he founded he is entitled to wear a military uniform. Gaston has never served in the army.

"My arrest results from attacks I made upon a high government official for shielding labor outlaws and liquor law violators," he claimed.

Gaston is a brother of the late Lucy Page Gaston, anti-cigaret crusader.

The honorary awards, it was announced, are to be given in recognition of "outstanding contributions to the material and spiritual welfare of the nation."

Matthews recently completed a war mission abroad for the government which took him into all the unoccupied countries. Sen. Brooks was decorated during the World war after suffering seven wounds.

M'KIBBIN OPENS G. O. P. MAYORAL RACE THIS WEEK

Lists Radio Speeches; Announces Slogan.

In announcing yesterday that he will begin a systematic schedule of campaign activities this week, George B. McKibbin, regular Republican candidate for mayor of Chicago, said that his slogan for the approaching battle will be "Win on the Home Front, Too!"

That will be the subject of a radio talk Wednesday evening and it will be the theme of a series of speeches that will continue to the eve of the primary on Feb. 23. McKibbin will speak every Wednesday evening at 7:05 over WIND and at 8:15 over WCFL.

His tour of the wards will begin Thursday night of this week with a meeting in the 10th ward and will continue until he has appeared at least once in each of the 50 wards. In addition, a large number of special events such as civic organization meetings and luncheons are being arranged for him.

Gets Challenge to Debate.

The first challenge to debate, a feature of every campaign, was hurled at McKibbin yesterday by John H. Lyle, one of his opponents. In a telegram Lyle dared the regular organization candidate to debate on his —McKibbin's—eligibility and the propriety of his candidacy in view of "political, financial, social, and family ties with transportation interests."

Arthur F. Albert, another Republican candidate, went on the air last night to poke fun at McKibbin with a nickname, "Sunny Boy," chosen because McKibbin is a son-in-law of B. E. Sunny, former head of the Illinois Bell Telephone company and a figure in traction financing.

Albert charged that Roger Faherty withdrew as a candidate because of charges that there was a deal between Gov. Green and Mayor Kelly to insure the latter's reëlection.

Charge Plot Remained Same.

"But it was too late to change the script and the plot remained the same," said Albert. "What was needed was a more convincing actor with a better shirt front. So the backroom boys agreed that George [Sunny Boy] McKibbin filled the bill because he was a foot and a half taller and had the right connections with the right people."

City Clerk Ludwig D. Schreiber's certification of candidates yesterday emphasized the fact that there is no contest in either party except for the mayoral nomination. Democratic and Republican candidates for city treasurer, city clerk and for a vacancy in the Municipal court are unopposed.

Six Candidates Certified.

Schreiber certified to the election board the names of three mayoral candidates in each party primary. The three Republicans, in the order in which their names will appear on the ballot, are Albert, McKibbin, and Lyle. The three Democrats are Mayor Kelly, Bill Patts, and Ald. John S. Boyle. The name of a fourth Republican who filed, Harrison Parker, was not certified because of a court attack on the sufficiency of his petition. Many of the signatures were reported to be certified by a resident of Oak Park.

BRICKER ASKS BAR TO AID IN WAR ON BUROCRATIC RULE

Calls for Legislation to Restrict Power.

New York, Jan. 23 [Special].—Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio renewed his attack on burocratic government tonight with an address before the New York State Bar association in which he called for legislative curbs on the promulgation of rules and regulations by administrative agencies.

The Ohio Republican chief executive reviewed and expanded the ideas for curbing burocracy which he presented a week ago to the Indiana Bar association.

Tells of Fight on U. S. System.

He said bar members are qualified to take a leading part in the task.

"One of the best solutions to the problem of burocracy is less burocracy," Bricker said. He added that in the last decade many power seekers have attempted to destroy local governments, while others have tried to nullify our system of government by placing bureaus between the people and their elected representatives.

"Unless the trend is stopped, it is obvious that the number of boards, bureaus and commissions will increase many times in the years ahead," he warned.

Urges Faith in Government.

Bricker recalled that Roscoe Pound, dean emeritus of the Harvard law school, once said administrative agencies suffered from such evils as the tendencies to decide matters without hearings, to make no separation of facts and law, to set up policies at variance with statutory or general law, and to delegate decisions to subordinates.

"The greatest need in the world today is faith in the processes of representative government and a practical demonstration of its capacity to meet the needs of modern society," Bricker asserted.

Only by maintaining the right of free men to govern themselves can Americans keep faith with the men at war, he said.

NAB GARY BAKER AS SABOTEUR FOR POLLUTING BREAD

Luther M. Swygert, assistant United States district attorney at Hammond, said yesterday that a Bulgarian born employé of a Gary bakery was being held in Gary pending the filing of a sabotage charge against him in Federal court.

The bakery employé, Stavro Petroff of Gary, was arrested by agents of the Indianapolis office of the federal bureau of investigation who said that Petroff on two occasions had placed a quantity of cleaning compound in a bread blending machine.

Julius Lopez, chief of the Indianapolis FBI office, said that Petroff was detected placing some of the compound in the flour after traces of it had been found previously, and when agents sought to arrest him Petroff attempted to throw the chemical in their faces.

Swygert said that the bakery which employed Petroff supplies bread to the army and navy as well as to many large mills engaged in manufacturing armaments. He said that sabotage charges would be placed against Petroff today.

SET TRIAL NEXT MONTH FOR URSULA PARROTT IN SOLDIER'S ESCAPE

Miami, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP).—Ursula Parrott, the novelist, today was ordered to stand trial Feb. 25 on charges arising from the escape of Pvt. Michael Neely Bryan from an army stockade. Bryan has been court-martialed and sentenced to a year's imprisonment on a charge of desertion.

Michael N. Bryan.

Mrs. Parrott is charged with assisting a soldier to desert, harboring a deserter, and subversive activities by causing insubordination and refusal of duty by a member of the military forces. She is at liberty under $2,000 bond and will be arraigned the morning of the trial, which was ordered by Judge John W. Holland.

Maj. J. W. McRoberts reported that the court martial for Bryan was completed yesterday. In New York yesterday a federal grand jury indicted Bryan, Rose Hoberman, Theodore S. Reig, a night club master of ceremonies, and Joseph Altwerger, on charges of conspiring to violate the marijuana tax act. Federal officials said the four were charged with operating a marijuana rendezvous for soldiers.

BECAUSE OF OPA TENANT ROW IS U.S. COURT CASE

Heat Squabble Develops Into Injunction Suit.

The office of price administration jumped into a squabble yesterday between a landlord and his tenant, and as a result malicious mischief and disorderly conduct accusations against Peter Weck, 50 years old, will be voiced in federal District court tomorrow as well as in Municipal court where such cases normally belong.

Weck owns a two apartment building at 7428 Eberhart avenue, occupying the upper story. He rents the lower floor to Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Leonard. Leonard is an assistant federal court probation officer.

Weck converted his heating plant recently from coal to gas heat. Last December he disconnected the Leonards' dining room radiator. The Leonards hooked it back into the steam line, complaining to the OPA that Weck was interfering with their heat. The OPA investigated, and on Friday sent Weck a letter asking him to give his side of the argument.

Enters Thru Window.

Friday, while Leonard was away, Weck demanded entrance to the Leonard apartment. Mrs. Leonard refused to let him in. So, armed with a screwdriver and a large wrench, Weck entered thru a kitchen window, allegedly knocking over $14 worth of dishes. He disconnected two of the Leonards' radiators and was working on a third when police, summoned by Mrs. Leonard, arrived.

Weck was held at Grand Crossing police station from 1 p. m. Friday until 3 p. m. yesterday. George M. Crane, Weck's attorney, said he was detained "while OPA decided what they were going to do to him." Weck finally was released on $225 bond on malicious mischief and disorderly conduct charges to appear for a Municipal court hearing tomorrow.

OPA Files Petition.

Meanwhile, OPA filed a petition in federal District court for an injunction restraining Weck from violating the federal rent regulations by interfering with his tenant's heat. This case also will be heard tomorrow.

Crane said that Weck's attack on his tenant's radiators was no heat conservation measure but an effort to prevent a possible boiler explosion. Weck had discovered what he thought was an air pocket in the steam line and was attempting to keep the boiler from overheating, Crane said. He disconnected the radiator in December, he said, to "equalize the heat," claiming that the downstairs apartment was 10 degrees warmer than his own, where the thermostat was installed.

Leonard, however, declared that the incident was the culmination of a long standing disagreement. The Leonard apartment, he said, has only two large and two small radiators, with none in the two bedrooms.

$60 a Month for Heat.

Crane said Weck's heating bills have been about $60 a month, while his income from the Leonard apartment is only $50 a month.

Meanwhile, police are guarding the Leonard apartment to prevent any further trouble. Leonard said he asked for the protection.

An OPA spokesman said injunction proceedings were instituted because investigation showed that federal rent regulations apparently were violated. He added that OPA felt that Weck had "no justification for using violence" in trying to regulate the Leonards' heat.

TOMORROW ENDS REGISTERING FOR CITY'S PRIMARY

Tomorrow will be the last day for voter to register for the city primary election Feb. 23. The office of John S. Rusch, chief clerk of the election commissioners, announced that registration will be received in the city's firehouses until 9 p. m. and in the election commissioners' office in the city hall until 5 p. m.

New registrations received in the 137 city firehouses Friday totaled 3,299, of which 1,908 were by women and 1,391 by men. In addition, a total of 1,297 changes of addresses and 323 changes of names were recorded.

Revision of the registration lists will begin Tuesday and the books will not be open again for registration until after the primary when voters then will have three days to register in order to vote in the mayoralty election.

BLAMES COUNTY MONEY STRAITS ON CITY MACHINE

Miller Says Democrats Shunted Bills.

Some of the financial stringency that has become chronic with the Cook county government was blamed yesterday by Commissioner George A. Miller upon the relationship of the county board to the Chicago Democratic machine—the relationship of an unpopular stepchild to a tough foster parent.

At intervals in the last 10 years or so the city of Chicago has used its superior power over votes to pass some of its burdens willy-nilly over to the board.

Miller, a member of the board's legislative committee, recalled that in 1932 the city Democrats succeeded in having the state constitution amended so that the county not only paid jurors' fees in the Municipal court but also had to pay the court costs in cases in which defendants, charged with offenses under state laws, were acquitted or were unable to pay such costs after being convicted.

Top 4 Millions Now.

"These court costs," he said, "mainly the perquisites of clerks and bailiffs, mounted rapidly and about three years ago the city billed the county for $3,100,000. No payment was made and the city obtained a judgment for the full amount. The verdict was approved by the Illinois Supreme court; meanwhile the court cost bill has climbed at the rate of about $450,000 a year and stands today at about $4,400,000."

The $3,100,000 judgment, it was explained, was sold to two fraternal organizations by the city. It bears 5 per cent interest and was regarded as suitable for the investment of insurance funds.

Only one payment of interest was made, in 1940. The holders then sued for a cash payment, and obtained a court order commanding the payment of interest to date and one-tenth of the principal, and also one-tenth of the debt each year thereafter.

Need Legislative Aid.

The county, Miller emphasized, wished, and still wishes, to fund this debt and issue bonds to cover it, but needs enabling legislation from the state. Efforts to get such legislation failed in the last general assembly.

"The city, with a fine cynicism, keeps all the fees litigants must pay to call a jury. The judges of the Circuit court recently recommended that such fees be refunded to the county," he declared.

Besides the city's Municipal court judgment, Miller said the county also owes five millions on unpaid bills, the outgrowth of several years of unbalanced budgets. County credit is so bad that supplies for its institutions must be paid for on delivery. He asserted that the board is trying to reduce its budget a little, but there is no hope for a balance, even if the judgments and past due bills are ignored.

Commissioner Frank Bobrytzke, who is head of the county board's hospital committee, called attention to the city's making the county take over the care of tuberculosis cases.

"Altho the city levies a tax for the support of the tuberculosis sanitarium, it sends those who can't be accommodated by its own facilities to the County hospital, with the result that we have 300 hospitalized," Bobrytzke said.

All U.S. Agencies in City Working 48 Hour Week

Employés in all federal agencies in the Chicago area are working a 48 hour week, in compliance with congressional action late in 1942, the office of war information here reported yesterday. The government pay rollers work eight hours a day, six days a week. Time and one-half for more than 40 hours increases their pay an average of 10 per cent. More than 2,500 persons are employed here by federal war agencies. The 15,000 Chicago postoffice employés also work 48 hours a week.

TRAIN AND TRUCK LADEN WITH GAS CRASH; ONE DEAD

One trainman was burned to death and another man was burned slightly yesterday when a South Shore train collided with a gasoline laden motor truck trailer on the Cline avenue crossing in Gary.

The trailer exploded and rained flaming gas upon the first coach of the train. Altho there was a large number of passengers in the coach, all were able to get out before flames spread the length of the car.

Some reported their luggage was burned. Both the truck and trailer were destroyed and the coach materially damaged.

Four thousand gallons of gasoline went up in flames before the Gary fire department extinguished the fire.

Body Found at Controls.

The dead trainman was identified as William Stork, 64 years old, Roseland, Ind., whose charred body was found near the controls of the train. The other casualty was Edward Mason, 7331 South Bend avenue, Gary, who was treated in Methodist hospital, Gary, for minor burns.

Mason was showered with burning gas as he stood waiting at the crossing for an East Chicago motor bus.

The driver of the truck, Alfond Lindstrom, 7814 Langley avenue, employed by the Rogers Cartage company, Roby, Ind., was unhurt. Lindstrom told police he made a routine stop at the crossing, then drove across without looking at the flasher signals.

Autoist Killed by Engine.

James Zimek, 30 years old, 137 South Porter street, Gary, died in St. Catherine's hospital, East Chicago, from injuries suffered earlier in the day when an automobile in which he was riding was struck by a New York Central railroad switch engine at the Dickey road crossing in East Chicago. James D. Berry, 36, of 1322 West 5th avenue, Gary, driver of the car and three other men in the car were less seriously injured.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 30 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 27 were killed in Chicago, where 710 were injured in traffic accidents during the same period.

Jury Rules Fatal Stabbing of Ex-Convict Justifiable

A verdict of justifiable homicide was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday at an inquest into the death of Fred Bemis, 38 years old. Bemis, an ex-convict, was stabbed fatally Thursday during a fight with Raymond Smith, 60, colored, of 4426 Calumet avenue, in the Astor hotel, 176 North Clark street, where Smith is an elevator operator. Smith testified he stabbed Bemis when the latter was quarrelsome and attacked him in the elevator.

OPA GETS READY FOR RATIONING OF BUTTER, CHEESE

Beginning of New Program Forecast for Spring.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Butter and cheese probably will be rationed next spring, it was indicated today at the office of price administration.

An informed official disclosed that cheese, altho a dairy product, may be rationed along with meat because of its adaptability as a meat substitute.

The official, who could not be quoted by name, said butter for civilians is so scarce now that it cannot be rationed at present. He added that rationing can be undertaken when production increases in spring to the point where retailers can honor ration coupons for butter.

The OPA's "Best Guess."

While emphasizing that alteration of plans is the rule rather than the exception in getting big ration programs under way, officials offered these as their best guesses on other rationing problems:

1. The OPA is shooting at March 1 for start of point rationing for canned, dried, and frozen fruits and vegetables and canned baby foods.

2. Meat [and cheese] rationing should be brought along perhaps a month or so later, the OPA believes, to give time to see how the point system works for canned goods.

3. Rationing of canned milk, jams, jellies, fruit, butter, and relishes probably will not start until some time after meat rationing.

Point Basis Studied.

Under study is a plan to ration butter on a point basis, along with other fats and oils, including oleomargarine, salad oil, peanut oil, and shortening.

Under this system one ration point, for example, would be good for a small quantity of butter, a larger quantity of margarine, or still larger quantities of other fats or oils. By making the other products "cheaper" than butter in terms of ration points which the householder has to spend, it is believed increased use of the more plentiful fats could be encouraged.

Production Rise Expected.

Butter supplies are at a record low. Production will rise from now until July, and before then rationing is expected to be instituted. Enough butter will be withheld from civilian distribution to take care of military and lend-lease needs.

Thirty per cent of all creamery butter now produced must be set aside for government use, and 50 per cent of cold storage supplies in the 35 principal butter markets also is frozen for government use and war time distribution among allied countries.

LOOT OF THIEVES HERE LAST YEAR WORTH $3,081,729

Thieves stole loot totaling $3,081,729 in Chicago last year, a decrease of $110,668 from their 1941 booty of $3,192,397, Capt. William Stapleton of the police bureau of crime information and statistics, reported yesterday to Commissioner Allman.

Cash taken in 1942 amounted to $781,958, of which $87,859 was recovered, compared with the 1941 record of $678,199 taken and $61,893 recovered.

Merchandise valued at $2,299,771 was stolen last year, and police recovered $218,460 of it. In 1941 thieves took $2,514,198 in merchandise, and police got back $237,330 for the owners.

PRICE VIOLATION CHARGED IN MEAT SALE TO HOSPITAL

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 23 [Special].—A complaint was filed today in federal court charging an Indianapolis meat wholesaler with selling meat to the county tuberculosis hospital at Sunnyside at prices in excess of ceilings.

The office of price administration filed the complaint. Petitions for a restraining order and injunction asked that Louis J. Seyffert, doing business at Kuhn's market, be prohibited from offering meat for sale at prices above the ceilings, and Judge Robert C. Baltzell this afternoon issued the restraining order.

In another phase of hospital buying problems, Golden Guernsey Farms, Inc., which provides dairy products for the institution, has been ordered to appear before the state board of health Monday to show cause why formal charges of "watering" milk should not be filed against it.

SEEK EX-OFFICER OF CREDIT UNION TO START TERM

Harry W. Burmeister, 46 years old, former treasurer of the Associated Credit union, made up of more than 700 employés of the Commonwealth Edison company, was being sought yesterday to begin serving a 1 to 10 year penitentiary sentence for embezzlement.

Burmeister, accused of embezzling $47,845, was at liberty on two stays of mittimus following his conviction by a jury in the Criminal court of Judge Donald S. McKinlay Oct. 26. The stays granted Burmeister time to settle his affairs and visit a son in the army.

Assistant State's Attorney Clement Cody, who prosecuted the case, said that no appeal had been filed when the last stay expired at midnight Friday, and he consequently directed the bailiff's office to draft a penitentiary mittimus to be sent to the sheriff's office as a warrant for Burmeister's arrest.

Beginning "The Chinese Shawl," New Daily Mystery Serial

By Popular Demand the Tribune Today Resumes Daily Continued Story Dropped to Save Paper

Start It Here and Continue It Tomorrow in the Chicago Daily Tribune

"The Chinese Shawl," a never-before-published story by Patricia Wentworth, one of the most popular English mystery writers, was scheduled for publication in the Tribune, starting Monday, January 4.

Meanwhile, the war production board ordered all newspapers to curtail their use of paper 10 per cent under that used in 1941. In its efforts to comply with the order, the Tribune decided to drop the daily serial as one measure in its paper-saving plans.

Because readers in large numbers continue to register their disapproval of this omission of a long-established feature of the daily Tribune, the daily serial story is being resumed, and the paper on which to print it will be saved by other means which do not so seriously impair reader interest.

Presented here are the opening chapters of the story scheduled to begin January 4. Catch up on it today and continue it tomorrow and every week day in the Tribune.

TANIS LYLE had ruined the romance between Petra North and Alistair Maxwell. She was doing her utmost to separate Laura Fane and Carey Desborough. She was making a pretty successful play for Tim Madison in front of his wife, Sylvia. The house party at the Priory was not going too well on the night Tanis Lyle was murdered.

THE CHINESE SHAWL

by PATRICIA WENTWORTH

"THE CHINESE SHAWL"

By Patricia Wentworth

Copyright: 1943: By Patricia Wentworth Turnbull.

Laura Fane came up to London in the third week in January. It had to be that time because of her 21st birthday and having to see Mr. Metcalf, who was the family lawyer and her trustee, about Priory farm and management of the estate.

She stayed with one of her Ferrers relations, old Miss Sophy Ferrers, who was an invalid and never went out. She welcomed Laura with great kindness, and insisted that she should make the most of her holiday.

"The Douglas Maxwells have asked you for tonight. Robin and Alistair are on leave. I hope you have brought a pretty frock, my dear. Robin is calling for you at a quarter to eight."

The Maxwells were connections—Helen and Douglas, a nice friendly couple in the middle thirties, Douglas at the war office, Robin and Alistair both in the air force and unmarried. Laura had met them once or twice. She felt warm and pleased. It was a delightful beginning to her visit.

She put on a black dress, and hoped it would pass muster. She frowned at herself in the glass. There was a jade pendant which Oliver Fane had brought from China for his wife, Lillian, a peach with two leaves, and a little winged creature crawling on it. Laura pulled it out of her handkerchief case and slipped the black silk cord over her head. The bright green fruit hung down nearly to her waist. The cord made her neck look very white. She threw her Chinese shawl across her shoulders, and felt the momentary thrill it always gave her.

She went downstairs and showed herself to Cousin Sophy.

"You look very nice, my dear, but black seems so—so inappropriate for a young girl."

"I know, darling—it ought to be white satin and pearls, like the picture of my mother in her coming-out dress, and I ought to have golden hair and blue eyes like hers."

Miss Ferrers smiled.

"She was a lovely creature, my dear, and she turned all the young men's heads. Your father fell in love with her at first sight. He was engaged to his cousin, Agnes Fane, and it would have been such a convenient marriage because of the property, but once he had seen Lillian it was no good, he couldn't do it. But it wouldn't have been a happy thing for either of them if he had married Agnes."

Then the door bell rang, and Robin Maxwell was there to fetch her.

The old, sad story slipped away into the past. Robin was a cheerful young man determined to make the most of every moment of his leave. He never stopped talking all the way to the Luxe.

Helen and Douglas Maxwell were waiting for them in the lounge, both tall and fair, and treating Laura as if she were a real relation instead of a very distant family connection.

The rest of the party began to arrive—Alistair Maxwell with a vivacious little thing called Petra North who laughed, and chattered, and laughed again when the three tall brothers teased her.

They all stood there waiting for Tanis Lyle and Carey Desborough. Laura liked his name. The Maxwells were talking about him now. He had had a bad smash and wasn't flying again yet.

"Tanis is always late," said Petra North. She looked at Alistair, but he was watching the door.

Petra whisked round on Laura. "Do you know Tanis? O, but of course you do—she's your cousin."

Laura nodded.

"She's my cousin, but I don't know her. We've never met."

Petra laughed.

"O, yes—there's a family feud—your father didn't marry her aunt, or something like that. She told me. Too medieval!"

"Here she comes. Perfect entrance, isn't it?"

It was. The floor of the lounge might have been cleared for it. There was an open lane between them and the big door, and up this lane there came the two people for whom they had been waiting.

Laura saw them as you see people in a picture. They arrested and held her attention. She saw Tanis Lyle and a tall, dark man, and then she only saw Tanis Lyle, because Tanis was like that—she filled the room.

She wasn't beautiful—that was Laura's first astonished thought. She put across an effect of beauty, but it was an effort without bone and substance behind it.

Laura thought, "What a perfectly lovely figure." The dark green dress set it off—skin-tight to midway between hip and knee, and then flaring full.

As Tanis came up to Laura and said in her rather deep voice, "You must be Laura. I'm so glad to meet you," all the details, all the things which you can make into an inventory, were submerged. Because it wasn't what Tanis looked like that counted, it was what she was.

And then Carey Desborough was being introduced, and she looked up at a lean, tanned face, and thought, "Why does he look like that?" The odd part of it was that the very next moment she didn't know at all what she had seen to make her have that thought. It was something that hurt, but she didn't know what it was.

When dinner was over they danced in the famous Gold room.

Robin laughed.

"Don't you want to dance?"

Laura gave a long, happy sigh.

"I want to dance, and I want to watch, and I want to talk to every one."

"You are a comic kid!"

"I'm 21. I'm grown up. I'm of age."

She pulled Robin out into the dance again. They went by quite close to Alistair and Petra. Laura said:

"I like her so much. Who is she? Have you known her a long time? Is she engaged to Alistair?"

Robin's frown seemed to have come to stay. He answered only the last of her questions.

"Not officially. As a matter of fact, he's gone a bit off the deep end about Tanis. She takes people that way. Not me, you know—I'm a cautious bird."

"O, Robin, how horrid of you! She isn't like that!"

"You just wait. She specializes in other girls' boy friends."

"It sounds revolting."

"Not a bit of it—it's all done with kindness. I've watched her at it for years. What do we want to talk about that woman for? She'll get herself murdered some day. She makes me see red!"

Laura danced next with Alistair, who did nothing but talk about Tanis—how wonderful she was—"She's just been making the most marvelous film"—how beautiful, how extraordinarily kind and unselfish.

Laura was fascinated and interested. He told her all about how much Cousin Agnes adored Tanis—"She and Lucy brought her up, you know. They both adore her—but who wouldn't? And then she went on the stage——"

Laura gathered that Cousin Agnes had been rather narrow minded about this, and that the stage career hadn't been quite the glowing success which was Tanis' due. It appeared that Tanis had glided into the pleasanter rôle of the gifted amateur with professional experience. Then she had been seen by Isadore Levinstein and given, first a test, and then a marvelous part in a marvelous film. She had been working herself to death on it, but now it was finished and she was resting.

It was after her third dance with Carey Desborough that he took Laura to sit out on one of the small alcoves off the dancing floor. She saw him looking at her with an expression which she could not interpret—searching, quizzical—she didn't know.

They fell to talking about herself, and she told him about being Tanis' cousin, how she had never met her before, and was so thrilled at doing so, and about the Maxwells being miles further up on the family tree, before the feud which followed her father's marriage to her mother instead of to the girl his family had selected for him. She told him, too, how her parents had died when she was five and that her mother's sister, kind but strict, had raised her. When he asked what she did, she told him she worked as secretary to a home for convalescent soldiers.

When Laura's eyes met Carey's she blushed. He laughed. "I haven't seen a girl blush for years!"

Then he asked her to have lunch with him the next day, and she agreed to meet him after her scheduled conference with Mr. Metcalf, the family lawyer.

From the remainder of the evening two things stood out. They kept coming back into Laura's mind while she was undressing and later when she had put out the light and lay there on Cousin Sophy's spare room bed. She remembered Tanis smiling at her and saying, "I haven't really seen you at all. We must meet. Come and lunch with me tomorrow." She could see herself standing there and coloring like a schoolgirl. "I'm afraid I can't tomorrow." Then Carey Desborough said, "She's lunching with me," and that made it worse. But why—why? It was such an ordinary thing. Why was there that dreadful feeling of strain, as if she had made some terrible gaffe? Nothing could have been easier than Carey's voice. Nothing could have been sweeter than Tanis' smile. She had turned it on both of them, but especially on Carey. "Ah, but how nice of you! It's her first visit to London—isn't it, Laura—and we've got to give her as good a time as we can. But what about making a party of it—Alistair, and you, and me, and Laura?" Her glance went round the circle. "Robin and Petra, too, if they're not doing anything else."

Robin and Petra—but it was Alistair and Petra who were "not officially engaged." The picture kept on coming back—all of them standing there together in the lounge saying goodnight, and Tanis just blotting out an unofficial engagement with half a dozen effortless words and one of those brilliant smiles.

It was Carey Desborough who spoke. He laughed quite casually and said, "O, I don't think so—not tomorrow. We're doing a show, and we don't want to be late."

And then the goodnights were really said. The party broke up. Petra put her hand on Robin's arm and said with smiling lips, "Wouldn't you like to take me home?" They were so close that she couldn't help knowing that Petra's fingers were not just resting lightly on the black coat sleeve but gripping the arm inside it.

Alistair took Laura home and he never stopped talking about Tanis.

When he had departed, Laura chatted with Sophy a while and then went to bed. Laura slipped into a dream. She was in a place she had never seen before, but she knew that it was a ruined aisle of the old Priory church. There was green grass underneath and a bright blue sky above. There were fallen blocks of masonry amongst the grass, and a lovely springing arch against the sky. She was standing at the bottom of a flight of narrow, curving steps which went up to a door in what looked like a solid wall.

The sun was shining, and a great level shaft ran slanting down to Laura's feet. The sun shone, and a bird was singing. And then all of a sudden like a thunderclap it was dark—everything gone, color, and sight, and sound. It was dreadfully cold. A hand came out of the dark and plucked her shawl away. Her feet were bare on the stone. She went groping up to the door in the wall, and it was locked against her. She beat on it and tried to cry out, but her voice was choked in her throat. She woke up, beating against the headboard of the spare room bed. It took her a minute or two to realize where she was. Even after she had switched on the light she felt as if part of her had been left behind in that dark ruined place. What a horrid dream.

She made the bed, drank some water—and then lay down again. She went to sleep almost at once, and slept without dreams until the morning.

Chapter II.

Mr. Metcalf was a pleasant elderly gentleman with the kind of fatherly manner which hints at authority as well as kindness.

"Well now, Miss Laura, I have quite a lot of business for you, and a very important proposal."

"Proposal?" She could have killed herself for it, but she changed color. Mr. Metcalf smiled indulgently.

"O, it's not a proposal of marriage, but it deserves your very serious consideration. It is a proposal from Miss Agnes Fane——" He paused, scanning Laura's face. "Before I tell you about it, would you mind telling me just how much you know about the breach which arose out of your father's marriage?"

Laura met his look frankly.

"I know that my father was engaged to Cousin Agnes, and that he ran away with my mother. That was what the quarrel was about, wasn't it?"

"Yes, but there was a little more to it than that. I don't know if you're quite clear about your relations."

"Not very. You see, I've never met any of them except Tanis Lyle."

"O, you know Miss Lyle?"

"I met her last night. I don't know any of the others."

He took up a slip of paper and handed it her.

"Well then, perhaps this will help you to get them straight."

Laura looked at the paper with interest. It displayed a neatly typed family tree.

Mr. Metcalf began to expound on the subject, giving the complete relationships. "Mrs. William Fane had been a considerable heiress, and the whole of her fortune passed to Miss Agnes. It seemed to be a most suitable arrangement.

"Your father instructed us to give her a 21 year lease to the Priory from a date 3 months ahead. Now perhaps you see what I am coming to. You were born about a month after he gave us those instructions. The 21 year lease runs out in about 2 months from now."

Mr. Metcalf frowned thoughtfully at the pencil. "In point of fact, she is anxious to buy."

Something pricked Laura sharply. She sat up and said, "O, no!" in a tone of dismay.

Mr. Metcalf then told Laura she would do well to consider the proposal, remembering that Agnes Fane had improved the house and grounds at her own expense. Laura was puzzled, knowing that Miss Fane was a wheel chair invalid, with no children, and wondered what she would want with such extensive property. "It isn't as if she had children to leave it to," said Laura. "Why does she want to buy the Priory?"

"O, she wants to leave it to Miss Tanis Lyle," said Mr. Metcalf.

After the interview, Laura met Carey Desborough, who was waiting for her. She protested that she would be a horrid luncheon companion, because the business conference had made her temper rise. Carey asked if she'd like to talk about it, and she said she would, "but I don't know whether I'd better. I don't know how well you know Tanis. Are you in love with her? Are you going to marry her?"

Carey said, "You can put that in past tense, my dear."

Then Laura asked: "Will she marry Alistair?"

Carey seemed to have scrapped all his rules, too. He said: "She won't marry any one. Not yet. Not for a long time. Not as long as she can get what she wants without paying for it."

They walked for a while and finally found a taxi. Laura saw Carey watching her, and before she knew what she was going to say, she said: "Why did we say those things about Tanis?"

Carey replied: "I shouldn't be surprised if it meant that we were falling in love."

At that inopportune moment the taxi drew up and they went in to a wonderful luncheon and Laura realized she was very hungry. Carey made a charming host. He looked at her as if he loved her, but he talked of commonplace things, safe things. It was over the coffee that she told him why she had been angry after the interview with Mr. Metcalf. The price Agnes Fane offered was 12,000 pounds. Carey said it was a fancy sum and that before refusing it Laura should go down to the country estate, the Priory, to visit it.

"I couldn't unless Cousin Agnes asked me," she said. "I think she's going to."

"Of course you must go," said Carey. "For one thing, it will smash this feud business, and for another, don't you see, you may simply loathe the place, and then it's too easy."

The afternoon went by, they saw a play, but in each of them thought and feeling ran too strong to leave any but surface attention free.

After the play, they came out into the dark and found a taxi. It was then that Carey told Laura: "They don't know whether I shall be able to fly again." There was bitterness in his voice, which hurt Laura. "It's something about my sight, after the crash. I can't judge distance any more."

"You'll be all right. I know you will." Laura brushed his arm with her hand, and suddenly he was holding it to his face, kissing it. "Nobody knows but you," he said. Laura thought of Tanis, and of how she hadn't given Carey a chance, and she came near to hating her.

Carey left her at her cousin Sophy's. Wrapped in many shawls, that elderly lady was waiting for Laura with the news that Agnes Fane had called and had invited Laura to the Priory. "I think you ought to go, my dear. She was very nice about it. Rather grand in her manner, as she always is, but very nice," said Sophy.

Laura was glad when Sophy launched on a long monologue about Agnes' personal history. She didn't care to talk, and it was fun to listen.

It was just 7 o'clock when the parlor maid opened the door to admit Tanis, very grand in a clinging frock which made Laura feel countryish by contrast. Sophy invited her to stay to dinner, and Tanis went to Laura's bedroom with her while she dressed, and while Sophy had her elaborate evening toilette.

Tanis sat on the bed. "I hope you're going to the Priory," she said. Laura replied that she wasn't sure, inasmuch as she hadn't made up her mind to sell the property to Agnes and it might give the wrong impression. When Tanis assured her that it would be a gay party, an end of the family feud, and a chance for the aunts to see her, Laura agreed to call Agnes and accept. After dinner in the living room, a practice to accommodate the invalid Sophy, Laura did call the Priory, heard the dominant and assured voice of Agnes, and said she would be down.

When Tanis mentioned that Carey would be in the party, Laura's heart beat hard. "Carey's a charmer, isn't he?" asked Tanis, sweetly. "But don't take him seriously. He's taken a fancy to you, but he's never serious."

"You aren't engaged to him, are you, Tanis?" Laura asked. The simplicity of her question was disconcerting, but only momentarily. Tanis replied: "Well, not exactly."

When Tanis departed, and Sophy had gone to bed, the phone rang and Laura answered it. It was Carey, asking if she were going down to the Priory. When she replied in the affirmative, he suggested driving her down, and picking up Petra and Robin.

"Have you seen Tanis?" he went on.

"Yes," answered Laura.

"What warning did she give you about me?" he asked.

"She said you were never serious," replied Laura.

"She didn't suggest, by any chance, that I was engaged to her?"

"She said, 'Not exactly,'" Laura answered.

"What a convenient phrase!" said Carey bitterly. "Believe me, Laura, that's been over for six months, and when I met you last night . . ."

"Yes, Carey?"

"Listen. My intentions are serious, honorable, and dreadfully premature. Good night!"

Chapter III.

Four people and their luggage were a tight fit in Carey's car. Petra sat behind with Laura, because she wanted to talk. "Tanis is going down with Alistair. I expect you know all about it. Every one does." There was a note of defiance in Petra's voice. "I'm a fool to play her game, provide her with an audience, but she tortures him, and I can't bear it. I could give him up if she really wanted him, but she doesn't, except to play with. She's had enough of being married."

Laura exclaimed: "I didn't know Tanis had been married, Petra!"

"It was when she was on the stage. He was a man named Hazelton, once quite well known. They were divorced about six years ago, and he swears he'll get even with her some day."

Finally they reached the Priory. Laura fell in love with it at first sight. As they were all getting out of the car she had a moment to stand and look at the building and grounds before the door opened and they were admitted into the hall. In a moment there was brilliant light, from high up. Tanis Lyle was coming slowly down the staircase from the right. She reached the half-landing, smiled, put out both hands, and ran down the rest of the way. Laura was certain the entrance had been planned, even the costume, which suggested the gracious country hostess, a high necked cinnamon jumper and a rough tweed skirt to match.

Laura found herself crossing the hall with a guiding hand upon her arm. "The aunts are longing to see you," said Tanis. "Come along before the others disentangle themselves."

Tanis conducted Laura into a long room. At either side of the marble hearth sat two women, but Laura was aware only of Agnes Fane in her invalid's chair. There was no appearance of invalidism about Agnes. She was a fine, erect figure, gowned in a wine colored tea dress and corduroy coat to match. She put her hand out slowly as Laura approached. It was a cold hand. The dark eyes which regarded her steadily were as cold as the hand.

Her voice was the voice on the telephone, grave and deep and rather chill. Something in Laura admired its dignity and restraint. It was introducing her to cousin Lucy Adams, who had lived with Agnes and Tanis for years. Lucy was plump and middle aged, and looked as stupid as cousin Sophy had said she was.

Then Tanis took her on a short tour of the house, to her room, which was a charming one, but had nothing to do with Laura Fane. Like the rest of the house, it dejected her. She tidied herself in a hurry and went down to tea. The drawing room was full of people, but a place had been reserved for her beside Agnes Fane. It was a little alarming, because Laura had the strong feeling of being explored, weighed, brought up for judgment. Presently Agnes was talking about Tanis.

"She has been very glad to meet you. I am pleased that you were able to come down. It seemed such a good opportunity, as the Maxwells and Petra were already coming and, of course, Carey Desborough, but we hardly count him as a visitor. He is the son of a dear old friend and we hope he and Tanis will be announcing their engagement soon. I don't know if Tanis told you, but there really is no reason it should be kept a secret."

Laura's color rose and fell. She had the sudden sickening sense of the trap into which she had walked. Lillian Ferrers had taken Oliver from Agnes Fane. Laura saw herself pushed onto a lighted stage where she was to enact her mother's part.

"And now I would like to talk to Alistair Maxwell for a while. Will you tell him?" asked Agnes, smiling still.

Laura drifted from one of the company to another, including the Edwardian looking Miss Silvers, who had once been a governess and had known Laura's parents. Miss Silvers told her about the two portraits of Laura's mother and father, which hung in Agnes' room. Laura thought it a grim thing.

Presently Carey joined her. She said, low and quickly: "Carey, it's dreadful. Cousin Agnes thinks you and Tanis are engaged."

He laughed, but his eyes were angry. "She'll have to think again!" Then he added, quickly, "Don't get worked up." At this point, he publicly conducted her to a window to see the landscape by night, and the draperies fell behind them. In a loud voice, he carried on a description of the view, but in softer tones, for her alone, he said: "You're not to worry, do you hear? It's going to be all right. Tanis has got us into this mess and she must do something about it. I'll have it out with her tonight." His hand came down under Laura's chin and his lips pressed hers in a long kiss. When he let her go, he whispered: "That's to remember me by. I'd kill any one who came between us. You're mine, and don't you forget it."

Then they left the window and rejoined the group. Carey walked straight to Tanis and said he wanted to talk to her. "But I was just going to sing!" she exclaimed. He told her that would have to wait, and they went out together.

In Tanis' small sitting room, she turned on all her charming affectations, but Carey came straight to the point. He told her she must clear up a misunderstanding, tell Agnes Fane they were not engaged. Tanis was rigid with anger. Her expression was like that of a cat, and her smile was a mean one. "I believe you'd like to murder me," she said. And Carey replied, evenly: "It would be a pleasure."

Slowly and clearly she said: "You have a nerve, Carey, haven't you—even if you've lost it for flying?"

There was a moment of silence before he said: "Thank you, Tanis. I think that's about enough." Then he went out and shut the door.

Chapter IV.

When the events of the evening were raked over, there was a curious changing of values. Few things remained what they seemed. Laura's and Carey's kiss behind the curtains, being known only to themselves, was unimportant in the general picture. The fact that the door between Tanis' sitting room and the ground floor of the octagon tower had been carefully closed by the maid was to assume terrible importance. The bit of gossip which Petra brought to Laura when she was dressing for dinner maintained its significance.

"May I come in?" Petra asked Laura when she was dressing for dinner. "Guess who's here!" Her gray eyes were round and dancing. "Jeff Hazelton, Tanis' husband, only of course he isn't now—well, he's here! I don't mean here in the house, I mean down in the village. He's staying at the Angel. The boys were in the village and they saw him drinking himself blind. Robin says he wouldn't put it past him to come along up here and crash the gate. Don't you hope he does?"

Laura looked appalled. "O, no!"

"Wouldn't you like to see Tanis taken down a peg or two, up to her knees in mud?"

"I'd simply hate it," said Laura frankly, "and so would you. And we're both going to be late if we don't hurry and dress."

Dinner went along smoothly. Agnes told Laura about the evacuees who occupied the north wing, and were no trouble at all. Tanis talked animatedly about this and that, enough for the rest of them, who were moody or silent, for reasons of their own. Then Dean, the butler, came to the door and asked to speak to Tanis. She got up, and had almost reached the door when there appeared the tall, shaking figure of Hazelton. He made a forward lunge, but Dean stood his ground and when Tanis reached the door she said: "How do you do, Jeff?" and to Dean, "That will do. You needn't wait." The group she had left saw the butler step aside, saw her put a hand on Hazelton's shaking arm, and saw no more. The door closed.

Suddenly there was a loud crash in the hall, the sound of a shot and ringing of breaking glass. Lucy Adams screamed. Miss Silvers dropped her knitting, and reached the door just behind the three men, Laura and Petra behind. The hall was brightly lighted. It smelled of smoke. There was the glitter of shivered crystal on the parquet floor. Tanis stood in the middle of the open space and Jeff Hazelton was swaying and shaking, with a pistol hanging limply from his hand.

"Told you I'd do it—and I've done it—haven't I? Who says—I can't shoot straight!"

Tanis said sweetly: "Don't be a fool, Jeff! I'm not talking to any one who's flourishing a gun." She was within arm's reach of him when he reached out, caught her shoulder, and pressed the muzzle of the gun hard against her breast. Nobody dared move, for fear that the nervous man would pull the trigger. Tanis looked at Jeff steadily.

"Jeff, darling—how silly!" She smiled and put her hand up to the one holding the pistol. All at once he broke, his hand wavered, and the pistol fell to the floor. He sobbed in a bewildered way: "Tanis, Tanis, Tanis!"

Then the men were on him and took him away. Tanis had never been more beautiful. She had had her big scene with Jeff and had played him right off the stage. Then she picked up the pistol, said it was hers, since Jeff had had a pair and given her one, and took it away to put it in her bureau drawer.

After the exhausting scene, the party broke up and Laura went up to bed. She was about to stretch out her hand and put out the bedside light, when Tanis came in. "I just want to talk, and thought you wouldn't be asleep yet." What Tanis wanted to talk about was selling the Priory to Agnes Fane. Laura insisted she hadn't made up her mind.

"O," said Tanis directly, "you want to talk it over with Carey Desborough. You needn't fence, my dear. He seems to have fallen for you, but it doesn't mean anything. His affairs never do. But I don't suppose he's told you he has quite a good income. Old Desborough was in iron and steel. In fact, Carey is quite a catch. I suppose you were prepared to love him for himself alone. Too romantic! What a pity that he's engaged to me."

Laura said nothing. Her eyes spoke for her, and they gave Tanis the lie.

"If I say we are engaged, every one will believe me," said Tanis, "and the aunts will swear to it. If Carey backs out, there will be a scandal and your name, my dear, will be mud. I don't think you're that stupid. Don't try to break my engagement. I'm warning you."

"Tanis!"

"Don't go up in smoke, Laura. The matter is in my hands. If you want Carey you can have him, but you'll have to do something for me. You can have Carey if you promise not to sell the Priory to Aunt Agnes."

Laura was overcome with surprise.

"Is it a deal?" asked Tanis. Laura said no, and that she wanted first to know why.

"I'd rather have the 12,000 pounds," said Tanis. Then she told Laura that she and Jeff had a child, whom Tanis hadn't seen since it was a month old, and that Agnes wanted the child at the Priory. "If she can't have the Priory, she'll let up on trying to get me married, and having the brat here."

Laura replied that she didn't like deals, and bargains, and goings on behind Agnes' back.

"Squeamish, aren't you?" asked Tanis. "Better think it over. If you sell, you'll get 12,000 pounds and you won't get Carey, unless you steal him and take the consequences, as your mother did. If you don't sell, even the aunts can't say much, because it is your property, and I'll smooth out the Carey business. Think it over. I'm going to bed."

Laura had trouble sleeping, and dreamed a bleak dream about marrying Carey in a desolate church. The next day Tanis took her on a tour of the house, including the wing housing the evacuees. She said Laura wouldn't be interested in the kitchen or Agnes' office opposite the dining room.

Next she opened a huge oak door leading to the Priory church. Laura moved, and found herself at the top of eight or nine steps leading down into the church. Immediately she had the feeling that she had seen that place before. Tanis was saying: "The drop to the church is a bit of a surprise, isn't it? But the house is built up on a plinth to make room for cellars underneath." As she spoke, the telephone rang, and Tanis went to answer it, and Laura could hear her exclaim: "O, Tim Madison. It's you! O, yes, you're going to see me. Come over and dance tonight; we've a houseful. Yes . . . fine . . . give my love to Sylvia."

Then Tanis apparently forgot about Laura and went away, and at that point Carey appeared and told Laura to get her coat and walk around the Priory ruins with him, since he had to talk to her.

As she neared her own room, she was met by Lucy Adams, who insisted on showing Laura her own and Agnes' rooms, altho Laura was reluctant to do so, feeling very much the intruder. When she protested, Lucy said:

"Really, Laura, perhaps you will allow me to know what Agnes would wish."

In Agnes' room, Laura saw the original paintings of her mother and father, and their presence there took her breath away. Agnes, barren and crippled, deserted and betrayed, how had she looked at them thru all the mornings and evenings of 22 years?

Lucy was urging Laura to sell the Priory to Agnes. Laura was embarrassed and, under the embarrassment, angry. "Please, Cousin Lucy! Need we talk about it?"

Making her escape, she hurried for her coat and, when she finally arrived downstairs, found Carey impatiently waiting. "You've been hours," he said.

He took her into the Priory church and told her how much he loved her, and asked her to marry him.

"You don't know me," said Laura.

"I love you," he said. She was looking up at him, letting him read the love in her eyes, and reading the tenderness in his. Their love was very apparent to three watchers from the mansion windows: Agnes Fane, Lucy Adams, and Perry, who had been the cousins' maid for 40 years. All three were thinking the same thing: Like mother, like daughter, Lillian Ferrers again!

I. C. COMMUTER FARES TO GO UP; VOID STATE BAN

Starting tomorrow Illinois Central commuters will pay approximately 10 per cent more in train fares under an injunction granted by Superior Court Judge John F. Bolton to the railroad restraining the Illinois commerce commission from interferring with a fare increase on commutation tickets which became effective last March.

Under similar circumstances a 10 per cent increase for 12 ride weekly and 54 ride monthly tickets will be put into effect on Feb. 1 by the North Western. Increases on 10 ride and 25 ride tickets went into effect last March.

Both roads will establish separate funds for the increased revenue and rebates will be made to passengers if final decision of the litigation is against the railroads.

Delay in commutation increases on the two roads resulted when the Illinois commerce commission rejected the plea of these and other railroads for suburban rate boosts. The office of price administration on Thursday was granted leave by Judge Bolton to intervene in the injunction action. The OPA petition said any increase in fares would have a disruptive effect on the national price structure. The roads have 30 days in which to answer.

With Circus

Miss Grace Hanneford, equestrian with Shrine circus, admires Clyde Van Dyke, performing horse.

More than 20,000 underprivileged children will be guests of Medinah temple at the annual Shrine circus, which opens Friday for a 10 day run in the temple's auditorium, Ohio street and Wabash avenue. The circus will be of the European one ring type, with more than 30 professional acts assembled from leading outdoor circuses of America.

CALDWELL TRIAL VIES WITH ARMY FOR SAVACHKA

U. S. Acts to Get Union Treasurer as Witness.

United States Attorney J. Albert Woll yesterday started removal proceedings against Michael Savachka, former secretary treasurer of the retail clerks' union, whom the government intends to use as a witness against Max Caldwell, ousted business manager of the union.

Caldwell is to go on trial Wednesday in Miami, Fla., accused of helping Savachka evade the draft and of counseling him to register under the alias of Mike Anderson of Miami. Savachka is a co-defendant.

A short time after United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker had issued a warrant for his arrest, Savachka was produced in court yesterday by Attorney Myer H. Gladstone who said Savachka has already been sworn into military service and is to report to draft board 102 at 7:30 a. m. Tuesday to leave for camp.

Because Savachka is resisting removal and is to go into service, it is believed that Caldwell's trial will be postponed until next fall altho Woll said that he would request army officials to have Savachka in Miami Wednesday.

In the hearing before Commissioner Walker, Savachka was released on a $500 bond after Assistant District Attorney Richard G. Finn asked that the removal case be set for tomorrow at which time he hopes to produce witnesses from Miami to testify for the government.

Caldwell was the object of an investigation by the office of State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney after union members had filed suit demanding an accounting of $910,000 in missing union funds.

BARRETT CHARGES UNFOUNDED, SAY U. OF I. PROBERS

Survey by Independent Educators Bared.

The board of trustees of the University of Illinois announced yesterday that an independent commission of educators had exonerated the school of charges made by Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett that the institution was ruled by politics and had been "on the downgrade since 1934."

The trustees said the commission "unanimously and unequivocally states it has not been able to find any evidence to substantiate such a charge." The trustees invited the commission of the American Council on Education to inquire into Barrett's charges last July 25.

Barrett charged that "since 1934 a group of hand picked political puppets have virtually built a political empire at the University of Illinois."

Barrett "Declines to Appear."

The commission began work Sept. 1 and invited Barrett to confer with it, but he declined the invitation, the trustees said. Their statement also asserted that:

"In answer to Mr. Barrett's second charge that 'the university has been on the downgrade since 1934,' the commission summarized its findings under eight subdivisions and finds 'no ground for the sweeping assertion that the university has been on the downgrade since that time,' adding 'not only has no actual deterioration been disclosed but the facts indicate that the university has made in some features noteworthy gains.'"

The commission's survey, however, as made public by the trustees, pointed to several weaknesses in the educational development of the university and urged measures to strengthen it.

Fear Effects of Partisanship.

"The appraisal which the commission has made of the functioning and quality of the educational program of the University of Illinois clearly leads to the conclusion that there is no basis for the indictments made by Atty. Gen. Barrett against the university," the survey said. "But because of what the commission has observed, it is strongly of the opinion that the present situation is fraught with grave dangers for the future of the university.

"Educational issues may become confused with political or partisan consideration—if, indeed, this has not already occurred."

The commission found "undue perpetuation of vested educational interests and of traditional educational programs," and "that part of the faculty which determines policies and programs does not welcome change, and hence proper provisions for adapting programs to new needs are not forthcoming."

Cites "Decline in Faculty."

It also asserted that the quality of the university faculty had deteriorated slightly since 1934, but blamed the condition on "the inability of the administration to pay salaries necessary to attract and keep men of the highest competence, in competition with some other universities."

Conducting the survey were Raymond A. Kent, president of the University of Louisville, chairman; President Charles Edwin Friley of Iowa State college; Thomas R. McConnell, acting dean of the college of science, literature and arts of the University of Minnesota; Earl James McGrath, dean of administration, University of Buffalo, and William E. Wickenden, president of the Case School of Applied Science. John W. Taylor, director of the bureau of educational research, Louisiana State university, served as secretary.

No action was taken by the university trustees on the proposal to establish a University of Southern Illinois at Carbondale, but members expressed disapproval during a brief discussion.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

T. F. G. asks: "Some time ago I heard that there was a place for personnel men in the army and navy. Upon inquiry I was told that everything was closed. Can you tell me if and when opportunities will be open?"

ANSWER: We are advised by the navy that they are now accepting applications from top-flight personnel men who are college graduates and between 30 and 50 years old; who have not less than 12/20 vision in both eyes correctible to 20/20, and who are able to pass the officers' physical examination. To be considered, applicants must have had several years' experience and have been responsible for the senior selection and placement of technicians and executive class of personnel. Persons who have held executive administrative staff positions in personnel placement in large organizations, or college deans, vocational advisors, counselers or placement directors with large colleges and universities may have acquired sufficient background and experience to qualify. Apply at the office of naval officer procurement in your district or at the Board of Trade building, Chicago.

G. W. D. asks: "Have all draft boards been instructed to place all married men who are being reclassified from 3-A to 1-A into class 1-Aa, 1-Ab, 1-Ac, etc., or is this a concoction of my local board? I am registered with Du Page county local board, No. 2. Is it true that a child conceived while the father is in a 3-A classification will count as a dependent if the conception was after Dec. 8, 1941? Does the registrant have access to his file?"

ANSWER: Registrants reclassified from 3-A are officially to be notified and classified 1-A. The designations you mention are unofficial and merely represent a grouping within the 1-A group by your local board and roughly indicate the order in which you may expect your call. A child conceived after Dec. 8, 1941, is not considered as a dependent entitling the registrant to deferment unless the registrant was not registered or required to register. A registrant is not rightfully denied access to his file at any time.

L. H. J. asks: "Under the new postal restrictions, is it possible to send packages to sailors known to be at sea? Are letters mailed to them via air mail carried by air? What about the letters mailed by them?"

ANSWER: Postal order 19687 restructing mail to men overseas does not apply to the personnel of the navy, marines, or coast guard, but the authorities are planning similar restrictions to apply to these branches. If you contemplate sending a package to a sailor you had better do it before new regulations are made. Letters marked "air mail" by men in service are carried by air from mailing point to destination whenever possible, but if such transportation is not available, the letters are carried by the most convenient means of transportation available at the time.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 23 (AP).—Led by Syl Apps, the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Chicago Blackhawks, 5 to 3, tonight before 11,272, to move into second place in the National Hockey league ahead of the Detroit Red Wings. After the game, the Hawks headed back home for an engagement with the league leading Boston Bruins in the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night.

Apps made three goals and missed half a dozen more close range opportunities. Billy Taylor tallied once while Dave [Sweeney] Schriner collected the fifth Toronto marker.

While the Leafs vaulted over the Wings to a spot four points behind the idle Boston Bruins, the Blackhawks lost a point in their struggle for the fourth spot in the Stanley Cup playoffs as the fifth place Montreal Canadiens battled to a 5 to 5 deadlock with the New York Rangers.

Keep Gardiner Busy,

From the outset there was little doubt as to the better team tonight, but while the Leafs wound up firing 51 shots at Goalie Bert Gardiner, compared with 37 mustered by Chicago, the Blackhawk line of Bill Thoms and the Bentley brothers, Doug and Max, was always dangerous.

Robert [Red] Hamill scored two of the three Chicago goals, his 19th and 20th of the season, but the most brilliant tally was scored by Doug Bentley after some fine passing by his line mates.

CANADIENS TIE RANGERS

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Montreal Canadiens tied the New York Rangers, 5 to 5, by scoring in the final 15 seconds of play. Elmer Lach drove in the tally.

Most of the fans already were leaving the arena when Lach connected. The goal followed a faceoff to the left of the New York net and Lach passed the disc out to Charles Sands. He, in turn, moved it to Toe Blake and the latter returned the puck to Lach, who was standing directly in front of the cage.

Montreal built up a 2 to 1 lead in the first period, but Joe Shack, playing his second game for the last place Rangers, powered home two goals in the second period to send the New Yorkers out in front, 4 to 3, as the final session started.

Browns Will Train at Cape Girardeau, Mo.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 23 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns today selected Cape Girardeau, Mo., home of Southeast Missouri State Teachers' college as their spring training site. The choice left only the world champion St. Louis Cardinals and the Phils undecided, altho Philadelphia tentatively is scheduled to train at Swarthmore college in Pennsylvania.

Cape Girardeau is 125 miles south of St. Louis and only 40 miles from Cairo, Ill., which is being inspected by the Cardinals.

William O. Dewitt, vice president of the Browns, said if the Cardinals picked the southern Illinois city as their spring camp the Browns would suggest the possibility of a series of practice games. There is regular bus service between Cairo and Cape Girardeau.

The Browns will start training March 15 and will break camp about April 8, in time for the first of seven games with the Cardinals in St. Louis beginning April 10.

Seek Nearby Spot for Toledo.

Facilities available for the Browns at Cape Girardeau include a baseball park, the city's new arena building for indoor practice, the college's gymnasium, and its football field.

Dewitt said the Browns were trying to find a nearby place for their Toledo farm club and had looked over Carbondale, Ill., where Southern Illinois State Normal university is located.

The Cardinals' search is being led by President Sam Breadon and Manager Billy Southworth, who left today for Cairo and then planned to inspect one or two sites in Missouri before making their decision.

PIRATES OPEN CAMP MARCH 17.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates announced today they would make the 360 mile trip to their new spring training grounds at Muncie, Ind., March 17. Manager Frankie Frisch said workouts, probably two daily, would start the next day.

GIANTS MAIL CONTRACTS.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The New York Giants announced today that they had mailed out contracts to all their players this week with an accompanying letter asking them to begin light training at once.

The note to the players, signed by President Horace Stoneham, said: "We would appreciate your beginning light training at once so as to be in condition to go at top speed as soon as camp opens. You are to plan to report in New York Sunday, March 13, and go to Lakewood, N. J. the following day to be ready to start practice on March 15."

The Giants are the first club in the major leagues to mail out their contracts. Others have held up on the advice of the presidents of the American and National leagues to await a ruling from the director of economic stabilization concerning the effect of salary freezing on baseball contracts.

However, the Giants are proceeding on the basis of approval received from the regional offices of the war labor board and the treasury department here.

The contracts were sent to 33 players and Coaches Adolf Luque and Clarence Jonnard.

A BASKETBALL COACH WILL SHOW REDS HOW TO HIT

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 23 (AP).—Bill Miller, an earnest little fellow noted as a first class basketball coach and a student of muscular coördination, will teach his theories to the Cincinnati Reds next spring in their training camp at Indiana university.

Officials of the National league club, impressed by Miller's recent success in teaching relaxation to cadets who were about to be washed out as flyers, hope the experiment will produce better hitting by the Reds. Miller will give daily classes to the players.

For many years, Miller was coach of the Tulsa D-X Oilers and president of the Missouri Valley A. A. U. league, of which his team was a member. One of his stars was Chuck Hyatt, former Pittsburgh player.

Chicago's best amateur fighters will clash for the city Golden Gloves championships Feb. 11 in the Armory, 16th street and Michigan avenue.

CREIGHTON'S STREAK ENDED BY GREAT LAKES

Falls, 63-55; De Paul Triumphs, 45-37.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

De Paul's basketball team won its 13th victory in 14 games last night, but Creighton university of Omaha, another collegiate leader, enjoyed no such prosperity in the Stadium. The Nebraskans were unbeaten when they took the floor against Great Lakes, but lost, 63 to 55, after a brilliant stand. It was Great Lakes' 16th triumph in 18 games. De Paul's victim was Michigan State and the score was 45 to 37, the Blue Demons pulling away in the second half.

Five thousand spectators watched last night's double header. De Paul, which next Saturday meets Notre Dame on the same court, at no time was at top form on attack, but had a tremendous height advantage under the board. With this aid, George Mikan, 6 foot 8 inches tall, pivoted for three of his five goals in the second half. John Jorgenson, who replaced Mel Frailey, also got three goals in the half and a total of four for the game.

Demons' Guards on the Job.

As usual, Tony Kelly and Dick Starzyk, De Paul guards, steadied the attack and worked the ball into Mikan, Jorgenson, and Jimmy Cominsky.

Michigan State trailed three times by one point in the first nine minutes, the last time at 9 to 8. Then the Demons opened up an 18 to 11 advantage only to falter before the Spartans' closing rally. De Paul led, 20 to 18, at the intermission. John Cawood, center, was the howitzer of the Spartans' drive. He got four goals in this time, all on brilliant follow-up shots or from the pivot 10 feet out in the court.

Roy Diehl, Oliver White, and Carl Petroski finally came to Cawood's assistance and it was on their work and Cawood's fourth field goal that the Spartans pulled up within two points at the rest period.

It's Tied Only Briefly.

Cawood tied up the contest in the second half with a shot near the board. Kelly's two pointer put the Demons back in front. Mikan committed three personals in a row, but Michigan State got only one point on the three. Mikan shoved in two goals in a row on short pivot plays and the Demons led, 29 to 21.

After Diehl's long goal, De Paul piled up seven consecutive points and took a 36 to 23 lead with 11 minutes to play. Petroski and Dan Pjesky rallied for State, but with their advantage cut to eight points the Demons countered and went to the front, 43 to 30, with five minutes to play, then coasted to the end.

Sailors Get Straightened Out.

Great Lakes' starting quintet played the type of game Creighton liked, a slow passing, set shot affair, and as a result the Bluejackets trailed only 11 to 9 at the end of 10 minutes.

Then came the quintet whose attack is based on speed. Bob Davies and Eddie Riska paired with Forrest Sprowl to flash floor work seldom seen in any basketball contest. The other players of this group were George Glamack and George Hamburg. Davies' passing was well nigh perfect and Riska began a string of goals that eventually totaled 18 points, the best mark of the night.

After seven minutes, Great Lakes had a 29 to 19 lead, many of the points being scored on quick breaks which Creighton's tall, slow men were physically unable to stop. During this spurt Davies also acquired four personal fouls. Gilbert Huffman came in at guard and Sprowl replaced Davies. Great Lakes moved along smoothly, altho not with the same flashy style, and held a 32 to 26 margin at the half.

The second period was replete with brilliant shots, but after the first five minutes, when the Bluejackets led 45 to 34, the result was easily forecast.

George Mikan, De Paul's 6 foot 8 inch center, stretching into the air for a rebound during last night's 45 to 37 victory over Michigan State in the Stadium. George didn't need any help, but it was available. Teammates Dick Starzyk (34), Capt. Tony Kelly (25), and Mel Frailey (8), were in the vicinity. So was Oliver White (6), of Michigan State. It was De Paul's 13th triumph in 14 games. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

W. Michigan Wins, 56 to 40, from Chicago

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 23 [Special].—Harold Ellman broke loose in a scoring spree for the University of Chicago tonight, but his 19 points were not enough and the Western Michigan college basketball squad handed the Maroons their 30th straight defeat, 56 to 40.

The Maroons started fast and during the first 10 minutes stayed with the Broncos and led on several occasions.

GOLDEN GLOVES OPENING A WEEK AWAY; SOUTH SIDERS HIT FIRST

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago's Golden Glovers will begin their qualifying trials a week from tomorrow night in the south side tournament in the St. Sabina gymnasium, 78th street and Racine avenue. This tournament, however, is by no means the first signal for the 1943 parade of amateur boxers.

A score of cities in the middle west and south are beginning their annual task of selecting eight champions. These boys will converge on Chicago for the 16th Tournament of Champions which will be staged in the Stadium Feb. 22, 23, and 24. The road to the Stadium is the same for each of these Golden Gloves centers.

Qualify for City Tourney.

In Chicago, two tournaments will determine sectional champions in both Open and Novice classes. The St. Sabina tournament will be held Feb. 1 and 2 and the north side meet opens immediately afterward on Feb. 3, 4, and 5.

There is no advance sale for the Chicago sectional tournaments. General admission is 75 cents. The doors will open a half hour before each session and early comers will sit at ringside. Thirty-two boys will qualify at St. Sabina and Loyola for the city tournament Feb. 11. In other words, 16 boxers from the south side, eight novices and eight experienced fighters, will meet 16 boxers from the north side.

While established organizations such as the C. Y. O., Midwest A. C., Savoy A. C., will provide the bulk of entries in the Chicago tournaments, the list is increased by many service men. Several have entered from the United States coast guard, Fort Sheridan, and the Navy Pier, where boxing is a part of conditioning, will be represented by a score of boxers. The Navy Pier squad is coached by Joe Walker, brother of Mickey Walker, one time middleweight champion of the world.

The city tournament, customarily held in the Coliseum, has been moved to the Armory, Michigan avenue and 16th street, since the federal government has taken over the former building. You now may reserve seats for the 16 championship fights in the Armory Feb. 11. Tickets are $1.65 and $1.10. Mail your check or money order to Golden Gloves Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

Examinations Tuesday.

Preliminary details of the Chicago sectional tournaments will be completed this week. The first physical examination was held Friday night and the C. Y. O. boxers will report Tuesday evening from 6:30 to 8 p. m. in the C. Y. O. gymnasium for examinations. The last examination is scheduled next Friday night in Trafton's gymnasium, 180 West Randolph street.

Notre Dame Loses, 60-55, to Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 23 [Special].—Relying on long shots, Kentucky handed Notre Dame its first basketball defeat of the season, 60 to 55, tonight in the Jefferson county armory before 7,000.

Led by Akers, with 17 points, and Ticco, with 16, Kentucky poured in baskets from out on the court to overcome a 10 point Notre Dame lead early in the second half. Leading 33 to 27 at the half, the Irish ran this lead to 37 to 27 in the opening minutes of the second half when Bob Rensberger grabbed the ball to score an open setup shot and Charlie Butler made an under the basket shot.

The Wildcats hawked the ball and took a 50 to 49 lead midway of the half. They clung to this lead and in the closing minutes ran up their winning margin.

Frank Curran and Johnny Niemiera of Notre Dame, and Akers, Ticco and Rollings of Kentucky left the game on personal fouls. Rensberger scored 17 points for Notre Dame. Lineup:

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 23 [Special].—Indiana university's basketball team tonight set a new Big Ten scoring record as it defeated Iowa, 71 to 55, to tie Illinois for the Western conference lead with four victories.

The Hoosiers, who might have added even more points to the old mark of 69 shared by Purdue and Northwestern, were well on their way to cracking the record midway in the second period when their fast breaking attack had gained a 25 point lead.

Seizing the lead with the game a little more than a minute old, Indiana rushed to a 37 to 27 advantage at half time. Nearly 7,000 fans watched the struggle.

Hamilton Scores 31 Points.

Ralph Hamilton of Indiana, whose right handed shots hit the nets from all parts of the floor, led the scoring with 31 points, three short of the conference individual scoring mark. Tommy Chapman, Iowa forward, scored 20 points to lead the Hawkeyes.

A game-opening basket by Chapman gave Iowa a momentary lead. Hamilton got three points for the Hoosiers and then Jim O'Brien and Ben Trickey gave Iowa a 5 to 3 margin.

That was the last time the Hawkeyes were out in front. Paced by Hamilton who got 15 points the first period and Irvin Swanson, who made 10, Indiana steadily pulled in front.

Occasionally Indiana's attack stalled in the face of rallies by Iowa's Chapman and Trickey. Three times the Hawkeyes forged to within striking distance of the Hoosiers, but each time Hamilton took charge and Indiana again swept on. Nearly constant control of the rebounds in the first period considerably aided Indiana's cause.

Hoosiers Turn on Power.

In the second half Indiana turned on its full power. With the period a little more than 10 minutes old Indiana held a 25 point margin, chiefly on the strength of Hamilton's shots. The Hoosier forward made seven field goals in those 10 minutes.

Tho Iowa fought back stubbornly the Hawkeyes managed to whittle only nine points from that lead, despite the fact that Indiana used its reserves in the latter part of the game.

Charles Uknes, substitute Iowa sophomore guard, who went in late in the second half, turned in the best floor game of the night. His defensive rebound work broke the Hoosiers' attack time after time. Lineups:

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.

ENTRIES for women's tournaments to be run in Chicago promise to break records, possibly because women's interest in bowling is increasing or perhaps because the W. I. B. C. event is off this year. One of the tournaments which is benefiting is Bowling Lanes' individual classic, women's event comparable to the men's Petersen classic. It takes place next week-end at Bowling Lanes, 5221 Broadway, and an entry well over 150—at $15 each—is anticipated. The woman who shoots the largest total of pins in six games across 12 alleys receives $750. Entries to the event must be in the mail before midnight tonight.

FORT SHERIDAN WAACS WORKING ON BIG PROGRAM

Basketball, Swimming, Bowling Included.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Members of the Women's Army Auxiliary corps who have been assigned to duty at Fort Sheridan, are perfecting plans for ambitious athletic activity to relieve the strain of their military tasks. Under the supervision of Corp. Marion E. Swan, recreational clerk, they will go thru a program which includes basketball, bowling, and swimming.

Corp. Swan, whose home is in Okauchee, Wis., was supervisor of health and physical education in the Rochelle, Ill., public schools before joining the WAAC. During the coming week, she will organize four basketball teams for a series of trial games. The best players then will be selected for competition against Y. W. C. A. and industrial teams. Among the outstanding basketball prospects are the following:

Sarah Mayes of Eldorado, Ark., who played forward with the Arkansas A. and M. at Magnolia in 1941.

Guard from Newark.

Ruth Corby, of Newark, N. J., who played guard for the Prudential Insurance company team in the Newark industrial league. She has a brother, Bill Corby, who is a second class machinist's mate at Great Lakes.

Margaret Lawrence, who was a forward at the University of Cincinnati last season. She has an uncle in the service—Maj. George E. Smith of the signal corps, stationed in Dayton, O.

Emogene Cooper of Rickman, Tenn., who was recognized as all-tournament center in a competition which involved 20 teams of the Upper Cumberland district, while she was playing with the Rickman High school team.

Gwen Weaver of Holliday's Cove, W. Va., who was a guard with the West Liberty college team of West Liberty, W. Va. Before joining the WAAC she was a teacher in the Holliday's Cove public schools.

Six Pin Teams Organized.

Bowling activity also will go into full swing this week among the Fort Sheridan WAACs. Six teams are being organized. One of the officers, Lt. Emily Gray of Sergeant Bluff, Ia., recently rolled a score of 209 on the post alleys. For several seasons she bowled on the Madison, Wis., alleys operated by Connie Schwoegler, who recently won the national individual match game championship. She is a graduate of Beloit college and was a technician in the University hospital in Madison before joining the WAAC.

Lt. Gray will join the company commander, Capt. Edith Davis of Detroit, and Lt. Ellen Leonard of Chicago in competition with men in the officers' bowling league a week from tomorrow.

Before joining the WAAC, Lt. Leonard lived at 7934 May street. She is a graduate of St. Xavier's college. After finishing her school work she was personnel director of a calculating service company. She has a brother, Corp. Edward Leonard, at Camp Crowder, Mo.

Other Contenders.

Among the other contenders for bowling honors are Staff Sergt. Edith Loughlin of Orange, N. J.; Thelma Berry of Lubbock, Tex., and Lorraine Kubiaczyk of Oshkosh, Wis.

Corp. Swan is particularly well qualified for organizing the WAAC swimming team. She won the Wisconsin state women's 100 yard free style championship in 1932. She still holds the 20 and 40 yard free style records for women at La Crosse Teachers college, from which she was graduated in 1933.

The swimmers who are expected to take a leading part in the activity at Fort Sheridan are Kathryn Quigley, who has been a swimming instructor at Farmington, Conn., for three years; Irene Wozniak, long distance swimmer and life guard at the Y. W. C. A. in Cleveland, and Lesley Van Winkle, a New York swimming teacher.

PRIORITIES DELAY SHAUGHNESSY'S PITTSBURGH TRIP

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Priorities on plane transportation appeared today to be the only obstacle to Clark D. Shaughnessy becoming head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh this week-end.

The 49 year old coaching veteran, who has made a specialty of rejuvenating gridiron dynasties, was to have conferred in Pittsburgh today with Athletic Director James Hagan and other Pitt officials, it was learned here, but his seat on a plane was claimed at Washington and the meeting delayed.

There was no doubt that Shaughnessy, at present coach and director of the department of health and physical education at the University of Maryland, was the man Pitt has in mind to succeed Charlie Bowser, whose contract expires in March and who is reportedly headed for the navy.

Margaret Gordon of Windsor, Ill., exhibits her rowing skill. Tho the "boat" is stationary, its occupant gets a good workout.

Moline Snaps Paris Streak at 18, 37 to 34

Moline, Ill., Jan. 23 [Special].—Paris High school's 18 game winning streak was broken here this evening as it suffered a 37 to 34 defeat by Moline before 5,000 fans who packed Wharton fieldhouse. In the other half of the double header Thornton of Harvey defeated East Moline, 26 to 24, in the last two minutes of play.

It was the first defeat for Paris since losing to Centralia, 35 to 33, in the finals of last year's state tournament. The 18 game winning streak rated Paris No. 1 honors in the state so far this season, while prior to the game Moline's record was 10 victories in 12 games, the two defeats being to Freeport and Canton.

Paris was playing under the handicap of not having Dick Foley, star defensive player, in the lineup. Foley was home ill with the mumps.

The game was even for two and a half periods, then Moline hit a brilliant scoring streak and jumped into a 31 to 24 lead at the end of the third quarter. From then on the Maroons maintained a safe lead, altho Paris cut the margin rapidly in the last two minutes.

Cal Anders, big Moline Negro center, and Delbert Glover, Paris ace, tied for high point honors with 13 points apiece. Glover sank six baskets in 12 attempts. Paul Pedersen, substitute for the ailing Foley, fouled out of the game in the second quarter, hampering Paris' defensive play.

DODGERS' CIRCUS SURROUNDINGS DO THINGS TO RICKEY

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Mr. Branch Rickey who, since moving out of staid St. Louis to the circus-like atmosphere of the Brooklyn Dodgers' ball park, has become a most talkative gentleman when newspaper men are present, has said among other things that the player shortage is going to be a real problem for 1943.

The usually suave Rickey laments, in his very best manner, that his Dodgers already are down to 31 men. He can't see how he's going to survive, but the chances are that not only Rickey but the game itself will survive, at least for the time being.

Imagine if you can a big league ball club being down to 31 men. The rules of the game still say that not more, nor less, than nine players can be in the lineup at the same time. So it would seem the Brooklyn executive either is worrying out of turn or has become a headline hunter in order to kill off the charge that things aren't going to be the same around Ebbets' field with loquacious Larry MacPhail gone away.

Rosters Grew and Grew.

Top heavy rosters, like the fancy training trips to sunny climes, just grew in big league circles. Nobody nourished them to make them grow. Neither did anybody, except an unheard of few, make any attempt to keep the player limit within reasonable bounds. The clubs having the fancy farm systems and thus an ample supply of talent always arriving or on the way naturally were greedy about keeping what their own initiative [or money] had developed. The poorer clubs, in the minority, just had to trail along and like it.

A lot of people never have been able to figure why a big league outfit can't get along on 25 players, which is the maximum permitted from about May 15 to Sept. 1. At other times an active list of 40 is legal. A long overdue answer to this little puzzler is bound to be furnished this summer because many of the clubs may discover they can't possibly scrape together more than 20 men. But the game will go on just the same.

May Improve Game.

It not only is possible but probable that the game, from the spectator's standpoint, will improve if there are fewer spares in the various dugouts. The tendency of present day managers is to prove they are wise guys, able to pull base hits out of the water cooler. So they keep pulling the strings on their puppets until there is nothing remaining but a badly mutilated box score. With puppets scarce, the "master minding" will meet a natural but deserved death and the whole show will be more orderly.

The big rosters also have contributed to what in sports is known as "jaking." A guy feigns injury, or makes a big one of a little one, simply to get a few days off. If a player calls up and says, "Won't be out today; got a bellyache," nobody bothers to check up on his story. Trainers in recent years have been given too much leeway. There were always enough healthy men remaining for active duty. But with squads short handed players aren't going to receive much sympathy, as in the recent past, over such trivials as hang nails, corns, growing pains, etc.

Minor league teams seem to get along with as few as 16 or 17 men and that's a far cry from Rickey's current worry.

New York Hears Cronin in Hawaii Talk of Sports

New York, Jan. 23 [Special].—The St. Louis Browns or Cleveland Indians will win the American league pennant this year, predicted Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox, in a special broadcast from Hawaii heard here over the Columbia Broadcasting system this afternoon. In seeing no hope for the New York Yankees, who have won the flag in six of the last seven years, Cronin counted his club among the also-rans, too. He said "the loss of Ted Williams, Dom DiMaggio, and Johnny Pesky to the army and navy will be too much to overcome."

Cronin sees the Cards and Dodgers fighting it out in the National league.

Cronin, on special assignments from the American Red Cross to manage overseas teams, said he found army sports well organized and service men everywhere very sport-minded. He concluded, "The allied nations will win the world series this year—the most important series anywhere."

Ream, squadron athletic adviser, has organized boxing and ju jitsu groups. . . . The squadron also is represented in basketball and bowling competition. . . . The Officers, 7th School, and Medics were the only teams to remain unbeaten as the Chanute bowlers entered the second half of their league play recently. . . . All the contests will be played here. . . . Appointment of a new athletic officer at this camp is forthcoming following Lt. Dee W. Pinneo's transfer to the post intelligence office. . . . Barney Oldham, stocky little cage guard who used to play with Colorado college, currently heads the individual scorers with 158 points in 14 games. . . . Eddie Bogdanski, ex-De Paul player, is third in the standing with 84. . . . Bob March, member of the Post and Headquarters quintets, was a spectator at an intercollegiate contest for the first time when he saw Notre Dame beat Northwestern and De Paul outscore Western Michigan in the Stadium a week ago yesterday. . . . The Mixers defeated the Air Cadets, 38 to 20, a few days ago, the conquest giving the Mixers undisputed possession of first place in the Tower Basketball league. . . . The Medics are in second position, only one game behind. . . . These rivals will clash Tuesday for the second half championship of the Tower circuit.

Great Lakes.

LT. COMM. F. S. MATHEWSON, district welfare and recreation officer whose office is at this station, is making plans to form a Service Men's baseball league this summer. . . . Some games will be played in Wrigley field, it being understood that General Manager James T. Gallagher has said the park will be available at all times. . . . When the Cubs are in town service men contests would be held immediately after the National leaguers finish. . . . Seven Great Lakes boxing championships will be determined in a tournament in the large drill hall Saturday. . . . All recruits undergoing training are eligible to compete. . . . 87th St. Naval Training School.

GROUND school officers of this advanced aviation institution may have several extracurricular activities, but none is more important than the physical training program which Chief Petty Officer Dan Gregg has arranged for them. . . . On Mondays the men are given strenuous calisthenic exercises, Tuesdays and Wednesdays they participate in volleyball and basketball play, Thursdays swimming drills are the main item, and Fridays they engage in their favorite exercises or games. . . . Gregg was athletic chief at the midshipmen's school at Northwestern's downtown school before joining the sports staff at 87th Street. . . . He is a graduate of Normal college of the American Gymnastics union and the University of Indiana.

IF ANGLERS FEEL NEED FOR SLOGAN IT'S FISH FOR FOOD

Sportsmen Urged to Keep Tackle Busy.

BY BOB BECKER.

Fishing tackle manufacturers are so busy turning out products needed in our war effort that they are not manufacturing bait casting plugs, steel rods and other accessories which fishermen use. But as several well known fishing tackle authorities advise us, most of the dealers have pretty good stocks of standard bait casting lures and fly rod lures, so the boys who use casting rods of all types should be able to sally forth with sufficient equipment to get a mess of fish.

And this is the year of years when a creel or stringer decorated with fish is going to be mighty important in the home budget and meal program, what with all kinds of food shortages. So the slogan in 1943: fish for food whenever you can.

Making Nothing New.

We have queried a number of tackle authorities, including "Curly" Moulton, Geneva, O.; Lyle Wooster, Dowagiac, Mich.; Sam Davenport, Garrett, Ind.; Stu Pritchard, South Bend, Ind.; and Bill Cook, Stevens Point, Wis., about what's doing in the production of fishing tackle. Or rather what is "not doing." All of these men with the exception of Cook report that their firms not only are making nothing new in fish foolers, but have stopped making any lures.

Pritchard reports that the demand for tackle still is heavy and calls for rods and lures come from as far away as Florida. But at least one new "war plug" that we know of will make its debut this year—a muskie and bass bait casting lure with no metal in it except the hooks. It rightfully may be called a "war plug" because it has to be made of materials not essential in the manufacture of war goods.

Order Repairs Now.

If any fisherman wants repairs on a reel or rod he'd better get busy with these projects at once instead of waiting until spring. Examine each casting reel carefully for worn parts, pawls, line carriage screws, and bearings. If any of these parts are badly worn, better send in the reel immediately to get replacements. The point is that such parts may not be available much longer, altho for the present manufacturers still are making rod repairs.

Rod repairs can be made as long as finished parts are in stock according to the report from one midwest company. No new material, ferrules, guides, etc. are available.

Urged to Keep Fishing.

At this writing, fishermen have no idea just how much angling they will be able to do in 1943. But in view of meat and other food shortages, there isn't much doubt but what every fisherman should keep his tackle busy whenever he can to get food.

We now try to share our automobile transportation with friends. This year will be one of "share your hook and line catch" with neighbors. In the salt water fishing country along the east coast, communities are being asked by the government to make every surplus pound of fish brought in by sports fishermen available to the public. Very likely this will be the routine everywhere in 1943. Millions of pounds of fish can be utilized in our food economy if anglers "will fish for food and share the catch."

BARNEY ROSS TO MISS NEW YORK WRITERS' DINNER

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Corp. Barney Ross of the United States marines will not be able to be present on Feb. 17 to receive the Edward J. Neil Memorial trophy, awarded him by the New York Boxing Writers' association as the man who did the most for the sport in 1942.

Lt. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the United States marine corps, advised the writers today that Corp. Ross "still is on duty outside the continental limits of the United States, and it is highly unlikely that he will return prior to the evening of your dinner."

Gen. Holcomb said he would designate a ranking marine officer to accept the trophy in behalf of the former lightweight and welterweight champion.

Ross was voted the trophy, named for the former Associated Press sports writer and war correspondent, for his act of heroism on Guadalcanal in November when, with two wounded companions, he was isolated in a fox hole. He held the enemy at bay during the night, killing 10 Japs.

MATCH BETWEEN LEM FRANKLIN, SAVOLD PLANNED

Bout May Be in Stadium on Feb. 5.

Negotiations have been opened by Promoters Irving Schoenwald and Jack Begun for a 10 round bout between Lee Savold, Paterson, N. J., heavyweight, and Lem Franklin of Cleveland for presentation in Chicago Stadium.

Open dates in the west side arena include Feb. 5, 12, 19, and 26. Since the city Golden Gloves finals will be held in the Armory Feb. 11 and the Tournament of Champions will be presented in the Stadium Feb. 22, 23, and 24, it is unlikely the promoters will utilize the latter three dates because they do not want to conflict with the Golden Gloves shows. Thus, Feb. 5 may be their choice.

Both Impressive Victors.

Schoenwald and Begun went to work on the Savold-Franklin match immediately after both fighters scored impressive victories in the Stadium on Friday. Savold knocked out Nate Bolden in the third round, while Franklin floored Altus Allen for the count in the first. Both results came as a surprise to the 10,894 spectators, who contributed to a $28,421 gross gate.

Because Bolden, a light heavyweight, was knocked out by a full fledged heavyweight, the defeat is not expected to hurt his prestige, especially since Nate went down swinging.

Comiskey Is Disappointing.

The only disappointment of Friday's show, if it can be called such, was the showing of Pat Comiskey, giant stablemate of Savold. Clayton Worlds, 1941 city Golden Gloves heavyweight title holder, who is 6 feet 3½ inches tall, outboxed Big Pat in the majority of the 10 rounds. Ring side observers thought the eastern youth used poor ring generalship.

The net receipts were $23,805, assuring the promoters of profits of at least $5,000.

Vince Calzaretto, Palos park heavyweight, who beat Lindy Elliott of New York in a six round preliminary encounter, joined the army yesterday. Allen will report for duty in the same branch of the service Monday, while Comiskey will don a khaki uniform next month. Because they are married and have children, Savold, Franklin, and Bolden are classified 3-A.

Reasoner and Joyce Top Bill in Marigold

Al Reasoner, fast improving lightweight of Hines, Ill., who upset Alvin Gomez in Marigold Gardens on Jan. 4, will return to action in an eight round bout against Jimmy Joyce in the same arena tomorrow.

Reasoner, who is 22 years old, beat his rival from Gary in a previous meeting last November. Since that setback, however, Joyce has scored impressive victories over Bill Parsons of Danville, Ill., and Eddie Scott, Detroit. Scott was a first round knockout victim.

Verne Patterson, 1937 Chicagoland Golden Gloves welterweight champion, is paired with Mike Sopko of Indiana Harbor in an eight round secondary feature tomorrow. Patterson recently made his first Chicago start in four years a successful one by outpointing Zack Robinson. Sopko gained the dubious honor of facing Verne by virtue of a triumph scored over Tommy James in Milwaukee New Year's afternoon.

Ole Olson and Bobby Nelson will meet Jack Zeravich and Charles [Gorilla] Grubmyer in an Australian tag team match heading Promoter Fred Kohler's mat card in White City tomorrow. . . . Chief Petty Officer Harry Hedlund, former inspector of the Illinois Athletic commission, is in town on furlough from the station at Seneca, N. Y., where he is a company commander.

Garden State Raises 1943 Race Purses

Miami, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP).—The country's newest horse racing plant, Garden State track near Camden, N. J., came out today with a richer stake program for next summer in the face of the ban on automobile pleasure driving.

Eugene Mori, president of the track, said 11 important races would be run, instead of the nine held last season. The track barely beat war time construction difficulties in a finish so close that the lettering was being painted on the totaliser board while the horses were circling the new strip in the first race.

Purses Go Up.

The purse total for the 50 day season, July 7 to Sept. 11, will be about $25,000 higher than that of last year, and the minimum for each race will continue at $1,000.

Mori, here for a conference with other Garden State officials, announced today that the track would operate even if present rigid gasoline restrictions are continued.

"We are ideally situated, right on public transportation lines from Camden and Philadelphia," he declared. "In this respect we have a considerable advantage over most of the other tracks in this country.

Not Afraid of Cut.

"We'll go right ahead with our program. That's definite. We figure that 40 per cent of those who came to the track last year got there by means other than private automobiles.

"Why, I'd settle right now for 50 per cent of the 1942 attendance. We had a highly successful meeting then, and we can come out all right with half the attendance.

"We'll operate if we have to use horse drawn cars. But if gas restrictions are lifted, we expect even larger crowds than we had last year."

The daily attendance last season averaged 10,813, and the betting average was $529,880.

GOLDEN GLOVES OPENING IS ONLY ONE WEEK AWAY

South Side Tournament to Start City Action.

ceived a parental consent card is eligible to report on either of these nights. The card must be signed by parent or guardian and presented to the registration clerks. If employment prevents attendance at a preliminary examination, a note to this effect should be mailed with the original application. In this event, a parental consent card will be sent along with a ticket of admission to the nearest tournament. This group of boys will be permitted to report on the night of the bouts.

Each Golden Glover will be awarded a souvenir medal, the last that can be presented during the war because of priorities. The 32 sectional champions, both Novice and Open divisions, will receive gold medals. Golden and silver gloves are the prizes for the city championships in the Armory.

Columbus, O., Enters Team.

The western and southern teams assemble in Chicago in a month. More than a score of cities will be represented altho several of the smaller communities have dropped out of the competition because enlistments and the draft have taken most of their young boxers. The list of out of town tournaments includes Cleveland, O., Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Fort Worth, Tex., Fort Smith, Ark., Oklahoma City, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; Evansville, Fort Wayne, Terre Haute, Muncie, Richmond, and Gary, Ind.; Omaha, Neb., Grand Rapids, Mich., Kansas City, Mo., and Columbus, O. This last center is entering Golden Gloves for the first year. The tournament is promoted by the Columbus Dispatch.

One of the smaller cities, which has been associated with the Tournament of Champions since the inception of the promotion, is Streator, Ill. The Times-Press of that city believes it will have a two night tournament. Streator boxers now are drilling under the supervision of Coaches Steve Klachko and Mike Crowley. Other entrants will come from St. Bede's academy, Ottawa, Peru, Seneca, Ill., shipyards, and from Peoria and Danville, Ill.

The Streator tournament will be held in the high school gymnasium and the dates are Feb. 17 and 18.

Fort Worth Is Texas Center.

Most of the centers outside of Indiana and Illinois are state-wide in scope. Fort Worth is the final tournament for Texas and boxers qualify thru preliminaries in Port Arthur, Houston, San Antonio, Dallas, and Austin. Nashville again will draw from eastern and central Tennessee while Memphis includes western Tennessee, part of Arkansas, and northern Mississippi. Two or three army teams, one of them from Camp Livingston, La., are expected to enter the Tournament of Champions.

Chicago's Open division boxers will qualify for the Tournament of Champions. The eight winners in the final of this class in the Armory on Feb. 11 will constitute the Chicago team. These boys will be outfitted with uniforms and sweaters and trained for the start of the 16th Tournament of Champions on Feb. 22.

Slovaks and Vikings Will Clash Today

BY OFFSIDE.

The long delayed second round national cup soccer game between the Vikings and Slovaks will be played today in Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue. The contest, originally scheduled for Winnemac park, was transferred to Sparta stadium, by the national soccer commission, on recommendation of Fred Netto, Western commissioner.

The Vikings, who have not played since they defeated the Kickers on Thanksgiving day, will put a revised lineup on the field. Roscoe Anderson, goal scoring center forward, is now in the army and Mons Sebby, left Friday for Toronto, Can., to join a Norwegian air corps unit. Their loss will be partially compensated for in the return of Weck Henny to soccer after a year's absence. He was a former Manhattan star and will play at right back for the Vikings.

The Slovaks have only one major change in their lineup for today. They have borrowed Ture Hallquist, fast outside left, from the Linneas for the remainder of the cup series. George Wilson, Philadelphia sailor stationed at Navy pier, will be available having recovered from an attack of influenza. The game, which starts at 2:30 p. m., will be continued until a decision is reached. Jack Maher will be referee. No other soccer games are scheduled today. Probable lineups:

Chicago's December Pay Rolls 24 Per Cent Above Year Ago

Industrial pay rolls in Chicago were 24.1 per cent larger last month than in December, 1941, indices compiled by THE TRIBUNE'S business survey department showed yesterday. The number of persons employed increased 6 per cent in the same period.

Several other indices, including power production and sales by department and apparel stores, were higher, but building permits tumbled 70 per cent under the effect of war time restrictions.

For the entire year of 1942, the trends were similar in most cases to those prevailing in the December comparisons, but the drop in building permits was less severe—38.9 per cent.

The Illinois department of labor reported, meanwhile, that employment in 6,465 establishments of all kinds in Illinois cities averaged 1.8 per cent higher on Dec. 15 than on Nov. 15, and that pay rolls showed a gain of 3.1 per cent. For industrial plants alone, the gains were 1.8 per cent for employment and 4.2 per cent for amount of wages paid.

HARD COAL MINES GET 6 DAY WORK WEEK IN EFFECT

Canadian Steel Strike Is Near Settlement.

Hazleton, Pa., Jan. 23 (AP).—Between 50,000 and 100,000 tons of anthracite were mined today as the Pennsylvania hard coal field generally observed a six day week for the first time.

Almost all collieries in the three districts of the hard coal field in the northeastern section of the state were reported working as the anthracite committee of 12, composed of union and operator representatives, met in Hazleton to interpret the provisions in the United Mine Workers contract covering the six day week.

The committee conferred seven and a half hours, but announced a decision on only one point under consideration. This decision, concerning a day lost during a scheduled six day week, was split, with the majority agreeing that a miner who lost a day because of illness or similar cause is not entitled to time and a half for the sixth scheduled day, but one who reported for work on any one of the scheduled six days and was told there was no work for him, is entitled to rate and a half for sixth day, but no pay for the day he was idle.

Canadian Tieup Near End.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 23 (AP).—The strike which has halted production in three Canadian steel centers more than a week apparently was ended today after further conferences between the government and union officials. The labor minister said: "The way seems clear for resumption of steel production at once."

A total of 13,500 men in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Sydney and Trenton, N. S., has been idle.

Coal Haulers Accept Truce.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 23 (AP).—Striking coal haulers here this afternoon declared a one week truce in their efforts to obtain higher pay and broke the two day strike after a coal shortage crippled flow of heat and power to state buildings and brought complaints from scores of residents with empty bins.

ACT TO PREVENT FURTHER FLOUR PRICE INCREASE

U. S. Wheat Stocks Put on Market.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The government moved today to prevent further price increases in flour, bread, and other wheat products by placing its stocks of wheat on the market at prices designed to check advancing markets.

The Commodity Credit corporation informed buyers that it would sell its milling wheat at parity prices. Altho most types of wheat have been available on the markets at less than parity, some special varieties have not been obtainable, officials said, even above parity.

[Parity is a price calculated by the department of agriculture under a formula contained in the agricultural adjustment act designed to give farmers a return for their products which will be equal in purchasing power to the base period 1909-'14.]

Flour Peg Raised Recently.

Wheat has been advancing steadily for several weeks, causing food authorities concern lest the price go above levels which would permit millers to operate under price ceilings on flour. Several weeks ago flour ceilings were raised because of advancing wheat prices and a price squeeze on millers.

Officials said they expected the wheat offer to have the effect of a price ceiling on wheat, at least as long as government supplies hold out.

The government has been anxious to keep flour and bread prices at present levels. The department of agriculture recently required bakers to eliminate fancy wrappings, slicing, and many varieties of bakery goods to cut costs and enable bakeries to absorb the recent flour price increase.

Holds Large Wheat Supply.

Government holdings of wheat, which were acquired thru liquidation of loans to farmers, amount to about 235 million bushels. In addition 438 million bushels is stored under outstanding grower loans. Some of the government grain is of low quality and is being offered to farmers for live stock feed at prices equivalent to 85 per cent of the parity price of corn.

An estimated 500 million bushels more wheat is held by farmers, elevators, and others. Officials said they expect today's action to start some of this grain to market. They declared that undoubtedly some of this wheat was being held for speculative purposes.

Goverment wheat will be offered at parity at the point of storage. For the purpose of computing the parity sales price, the government will add 23 cents a bushel to the 1942 loan rates which were the equivalent of 85 per cent of parity as of last fall.

WHEAT PRICES REACT

Wheat prices on the Chicago Board of Trade broke about a cent a bushel yesterday from the high point of an early advance following announcement that the Commodity Credit corporation's wheat holdings were being offered for sale at parity price. Altho the law authorizing government loans on grains also authorizes the agency to sell at parity grain it acquires thru loan defaults, the announcement brought in scattered liquidation by holders of futures. Short covering caused a rally late in the session and the close was ¼ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher than Friday's close.

Corn and other grains were affected to some extent by the action of wheat. Rye showed independent strength, however, and closed ¼ to ½ cent higher with the distant deliveries at new seasonal highs. Corn showed an easy undertone and lost ¼ to ⅜ cent.

SUSPEND CHICAGO TO NEW YORK BUS TO SAVE RUBBER

Bus service over three routes of Northern Trails, Inc., of Chicago was suspended yesterday in an agreement between the company and the office of defense transportation. The routes are between New York City and Chicago via Breezewood, Pa., between Pittsburgh and Emmitsburg, Pa., and between Emmitsburg and Chicago via Fort Wayne, Ind.

The company will maintain service to Pittsburgh, and passengers will be carried from there to New York by the All-American Bus lines, Inc., said G. C. Jacobson, president. The suspension, effective until May 15, follows a previous order for general consolidation of service by the two companies to save rubber.

Canadian Ban on Oats Hints of Retaliation

Action of the Canadian wheat board in limiting exporting of oats to the United States because of transportation difficulties was viewed by some Chicago grain traders yesterday as indirect retaliation for the embargo imposed by the United States government on the use of cars for shipment of Canadian wheat to Mexico.

The restriction comes at a time when United States purchases of Canadian oats and other coarse grain have been much increased to meet demands of live stock feeders and industrial users.

Other grain trade spokesmen, however, were "certain" there were no elements of retaliation and that the action last week was based solely on the need to conserve the dominion's rail equipment for essential uses.

Contend Cars Are Needed.

Canadian railroad cars are needed to ship wheat and other grains to eastern Canada, and the board was unwilling to let them be used for long haul export purposes and run the risk of delay in their return to Canada.

According to those who discern at least a hint of retaliation, the following developments could have provided a motive:

Several weeks ago Mexico ordered 10 million bushels of wheat from Canada, of which 2½ million were to be delivered at once. About the same time a half million bushels reached gulf ports, the United States government increased its export subsidy on wheat from 20 to 25 cents a bushel, the increase to expire Jan. 26.

Then, a few days ago, the interstate commerce commission ruled that Canadian wheat could not be shipped in American cars thru the United States to Mexico in the interest of conserving equipment.

U. S. Sells Wheat to Mexico.

Coincident with these developments grain traders reported, sales of United States wheat to Mexico were disclosed. Mexico, able to get delivery on only an additional half million bushels of Canadian wheat which had been loaded before the ICC embargo, turned to the United States to fill its needs. Recent sales are estimated at 4 to 5 million bushels, and as much more is said to be required.

With the aid of the export subsidy, it is understood, United States grain interests are able to offer the wheat to Mexico at the lower Canadian prices.

The Canadian grain trade was said to be annoyed further by reports that the United States railroads, the ICC to the contrary, could have provided the cars to ship the dominion wheat to Mexico.

BARRETT JOINS FIGHT TO PREVENT TERMINAL RAILROAD SCRAPPING

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The Interstate commerce commission today permitted George F. Barrett, attorney general of Illinois, to intervene in opposition to the request of the Illinois Terminal railroad for permission to abandon its lines between Forsyth and Mackinaw and between Decatur and Hilleary, Ill.

Barrett asserted in his petition that the company had suggested requisitioning of the lines by the WPB which did so on the basis of information then available.

"Much of this information," Barrett said, "was furnished by the company itself, which has been most anxious to exploit the national crisis as a pretext for the abandonment of these lines.

"The petitioners honestly believe that, because of the company's failure to make a fair and complete disclosure of highly important matters pertinent to the requisition, the war production board has not been apprised of the consequences which will inevitably result if the divisions in question are removed."

OPERATORS OF TRUCKS WARNED GAS RATION BECOMES STRICT FEB. 1

Walter W. Belson, district manager of the office of defense transportation, last night warned trucking operators that after Jan. 31 they will be compelled to operate strictly on the amount of gasoline allowed them in their ODT certificate of necessity.

Trucking operators have been able to obtain extra gas merely by a request to their local rationing boards—the gas to be deducted from any future ODT grant. After Jan. 31 temporary certificates will be issued any trucker whose case still is pending before ODT, the certificates to be good only for 30 days, and in any case not past April 1.

WPA Wind-up Dates for All States Are Set

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—The works progress administration will wind up in every state by May 1 all operations except the micro-filming of its final accounts, Deputy Commissioner George H. Field said today.

In Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, where WPA rolls are expanding in contrast to their contraction in this country because of widespread unemployment in those territories as a result of the war, operations will continue on a full scale until July 1.

"After that," Field told reporters, "there will be no WPA."

Iowa Jobs End This Week.

Iowa, Kansas, and Nebraska will be added to the previously announced 16 states which will shut down all except accounting operations by the end of next week.

Indiana and Oklahoma will halt operations except for "a very few" projects which will have to be continued a little longer to reach completion of "a useful unit," or stopoff point, Field said.

California, Colorado, Montana, and New Mexico will wind up their work by Feb. 15, and the rest of the states will end their WPA activities—except for completing their records and liquidating administrative workers assigned to them—by May 1.

Sponsored Projects to End.

The 16 states where Feb. 1 closings already were scheduled are Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Maine, Maryland, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, and Wyoming.

The program calls for closing down by Feb. 1 thruout the country all projects sponsored by any government agency, including the army and navy. Any agency wishing to continue such projects will have to do so with its own funds and personnel.

Meanwhile, WPA rolls, which reached a peak with 3,334,594 persons employed on relief in November, 1939, had been chopped to 253,981 in the United States on Jan. 12 compared with 321,229 on Nov 24, which was just before President Roosevelt announced the agency would be liquidated.

Move to Curb SEC Nuisance Rule Develops

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 [Special].—A move to curb the regulatory powers of the securities and exchange commission is developing in the senate and house as a result of what several members regard as the SEC's tendency to exceed the powers that congress intended to grant it in imposing rules on corporations.

Already Sen. Chan Gurney [R., S. D.], incensed by a complaint concerning the SEC's "proxy rule," has introduced a bill to revoke the commission's power to regulate proxies during war time. He expressed willingness to accept a suggestion, advanced by Sen. John A. Danaher [R., Conn.], that his bill be amended to wipe out all regulations prescribed by the SEC after Nov. 1, 1942.

Urges Review of All Powers.

In the house, Rep. Lyle H. Boren [D., Okla.], a member of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, is preparing a bill to curb the SEC's power to pass regulations concerning certain exempt securities. Rep. James W. Wadsworth [R., N.Y.], urged a review of all SEC powers, with elimination of any authority that permits "nuisance" rules.

Senators and representatives who have studied the subject are irked particularly by the fact that the SEC on Dec. 18, three days after congress adjourned, issued a voluminous set of proxy rules and other provisions about which there had been some controversy. They ask why the SEC waited for adjournment of congress.

Asks Why Worry Now.

"The general sentiment around here," Sen. Robert A. Taft [R., O.], another member of the banking and currency committee, said, "is why, for heaven's sake, worry about things like this proxy business in war time?"

None of the senators has yet obtained a legal opinion on just what all phases of the proxy regulations mean, but one of the principal objections, they said, is that a stockholder wishing to advance a proposal of any sort to which the management may object must be allowed 100 words in the proxy form to state his position and that the management is required to circulate the proposal to all its stockholders.

TREASURY ASKS QUICK ACTION ON PAY-AS-YOU-GO

Paul Explains Stand on Tax Principle.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—The treasury favors early enactment of legislation to put income taxes on a pay-as-you-go basis, Randolph Paul, general counsel of the treasury, announced today, saying Secretary Henry Morgenthau had authorized the statement.

Paul disclosed that treasury officials have been conferring with congressional leaders and said studies on adoption of a pay-as-you-go plan are near completion. Such legislation is pending in congress.

"The treasury department is holding itself ready to respond to invitation by the house ways and means committee at any time either to present its own views on this subject or to give its advice on any plans devised by the committee," Paul said.

Wants Early Disposition.

"The department has no desire and has expressed no desire to delay consideration of this subject until general tax legislation can be formulated. On the contrary, it believes that many advantages will accrue from disposal of the pay-as-you-go matter as soon as possible.

"One of the advantages of such consideration would be to refute most effectively the entirely baseless rumors that have been circulating that some form of tax forgiveness would be adopted which would make it unnecessary for taxpayers to meet their March 15 instalments on tax liabilities for the calendar year 1942. Chairman George and Chairman Doughton [respectively heads of the senate finance committee and the house ways and means committee] have both stated that nothing of the sort is in contemplation.

Record Termed Clear.

"On the pay-as-you-go principle as applied to the collection of income taxes the treasury department's record is quite clear. It has long favored putting income tax payments on a more current basis. The need for doing this has become much more acute as the number of taxpayers and the burden of taxes have increased over the last two years.

"More than 14 months ago, in November, 1941, Secretary Morgenthau appeared before the ways and means committee to suggest a plan for current payment thru collection at the source of the major portion of new taxes to be imposed. He advanced a similar suggestion at a public hearing by the committee in March of 1942. The department has taken the position that any plan proposed must be closely scrutinized to determine whether it will result in substantial loss of revenue or inequities as between taxpayers."

Identical bills calling for payment of taxes on a pay-as-you-go basis were introduced in the house by Rep. Frank Carlson [R., Kas.] and in the senate by Sen. Arthur Capper [R., Kas.]. Both are pressing for passage of the legislation by March 15.

Currency Issue Causes Much Concern On Inflation Threat

Daniel W. Bell, who contends banks issued the notes.

The controversy centering on charges that the law was violated in the recent issuance of 600 million dollars of currency kept for about 10 years by the federal reserve banks held the attention of bankers in Chicago yesterday in the absence of new official light on the transaction.

While the administration's defenders asserted that the controversy was out of proportion to the issue involved, critics declared that the manner of handling the issue is another illustration of the use of unorthodox financing measures and may be of major importance as an indication of future policy.

Assert Notes are Not Backed.

As the matter stands, the treasury is accused by critics of the procedure of having put into circulation so-called federal reserve bank notes which falsely bear the statement that the notes are backed by deposits of government bonds or other securities. These critics, including Walter E. Spahr, secretary of the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy and professor of economics at New York university, assert that the notes are not so backed.

Some bankers who had no inclination to criticize the issue said privately that the treasury's method apparently did involve unnecessary technical violation of established procedure which left the treasury open to criticism.

Altho reserve authorities pooh-poohed the idea that anything serious was involved in the note transaction, some of them admitted privately that the issue does not have any collateral backing and that the issuance of that kind of money at this time was particularly unfortunate because of the uneasiness over inflation.

On Dec. 13 the federal reserve board announced that it had authorized the 12 federal reserve banks to issue an existing stock of currency printed in the early 1930s and known as federal reserve bank notes, the purpose being to avoid an estimated $300,000 of expenses for printing new currency and to save labor and materials, including 45 tons of paper.

Spahr Says It's No Excuse.

Of this Spahr said: "This is not a legitimate excuse for issuance of currency in violation of law."

Spahr and others further charged that the notes were issued by the treasury, not by the reserve banks, and that the treasury deposited the 660 million dollars of notes with the reserve banks and received a deposit credit of the same amount. Thus the notes, he said, illegally became the liability of the treasury and not of the bank, as provided by law.

Spahr said that the general counsel of the treasury, when asked how the treasury legally could issue the notes, replied: "It is merely a matter of a technicality."

On the other hand, Daniel W. Bell, undersecretary of the treasury, insisted that the banks, not the treasury, issued the notes.

Along with other critics of the move, Spahr asserted that the treasury, in making the notes a part of the "treasury currency outstanding," also made them lawful money which the banks could use as reserves against deposits, with inflationary effect.

QUEBEC AUTHORITIES SIGN HYDRO-ELECTRIC PACT WITH ONTARIO

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 23.—Premier Gordon Conant of Ontario announced tonight that Quebec authorities had signed the Ontario-Quebec agreement, which gives Antario the right to develop 400,000 hydro-electric horse power on the upper Ottawa river. Signatures on behalf of the Ontario government were affixed last week.

The pact ends discussions which had extended over many years regarding Ottawa river power sites. Past difficulties were based on problems inherent in the joint development of the boundary waterway. Under the decision Ontario gets the northern section and Quebec the Carillon and contributing sites on the lower Ottawa. Carillon, it is said, has potential power of about 375,000 horse power.

The agreement will be submitted to the Ontario legislature when it opens its session on Feb. 9.

CANADA SETS UP MATERIALS PLAN LINKED TO U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 23.—Another step in coördination of North American controls and priority procedures has been taken in Canada's establishing a modified controled materials plan, under which all corporations requiring critical material from the United States must file a requisition with the Canadian government before Feb. 10.

Munitions Minister Clarence D. Howe said Canada has been asked to submit an estimate of total requirements of critical materials to be shipped from the United States during April, May, and June.

APPOINT SWIREN COUNSEL TO SEEK RAIL RATE CUTS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Max Swiren, Chicago attorney, today was appointed special counsel for government economic agencies in their campaign to have the interstate commerce commission to revoke 300 million dollars in annual passenger and freight rate increases given the railroads last year. The ICC has set a hearing for Feb. 2. Swiren will represent James F. Byrnes, director of economic stabilization, and Prentiss M. Brown, new price administrator.

Announcing the appointment of Swiren, a press release said net railway operating income, before federal income taxes, rose from 742 million dollars in 1940 to 1 billion 172 million in 1941, and to 2 billion 236 million in 1942.

Max Swiren is a partner in the law firm of Levinson, Becker, Peebles & Swiren, 1 North La Salle street. He joined the firm soon after obtaining his law degree from the University of Chicago. Swiren is counsel for Hugh M. Morris, trustee for the Midland United company. His home is in Glencoe.

EASE AUTO CURB FOR CIVILIAN USE TO SPOT PLANES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23 (AP).—Automobile rationing regulations were amended today to enable the army to supply transportation for its civilian airplane spotters.

Because of legal technicalities, civilian spotters cannot use cars owned by the army, and it was estimated that about 1,000 leased cars were needed.

Today's amendment allows any one owning a passenger car to lease it to the army air forces aircraft warning service, including the ground observer corps.

SURPLUS MEAT STOCKS PILE UP WITH PACKERS

Lend-Lease Buying Falling Short.

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

While per capita consumption of meat by civilians in recent weeks has fallen to the lowest level on government records, a surplus has been accumulating rapidly in packers' hands. This idle meat supply has resulted from failure of lend-lease authorities to take sufficient tonnage to offset record breaking output in the face of reduced civilian quotas.

Meat piled up in packing plants under federal inspection last month at the fastest rate for any month in two years, and only two months in the last fourteen years showed a larger increase, according to department of agriculture figures.

Packers said yesterday, however, they were not particularly worried about the "unsalable" accumulation and were confident government buying eventually would absorb all they were not permitted to sell to civilians.

Storage Rises 41 Per Cent.

Cold storage plants on Jan. 1 held 736,557,000 pounds of all meats, exclusive of pork, compared with 522,064,000 pounds on Dec. 1, an increase of 41 per cent. Of this total the government owned 13,657,000 pounds of lamb and mutton, 386,000 pounds of beef, and 2,273,000 pounds of pork. The remainder was "frozen" in packers' hands.

The rise in the "unsalable" supply continued this month, incomplete reports from principal packers indicate. Current stocks are the second highest for January since 1937. Pork comprised about 65 per cent of stored meat.

Under normal conditions, packers build up a huge reserve of pork during the winter when hog slaughter is large and prices usually are lowest of the year. They carry this supply

AIRLINES (Imagination Stocks)

1. "Help yourself to the Airlines. Airlines are a cinch for after the War. The stocks have doubled since April. Why should they not rise like General Motors in 1917/19 (from 75 to 400 in 3 years)."
2. Growth stocks? Yes! Total air traffics have risen 500% in 7 years! And yet they still use under 400 planes, and handle only $130 mns. of traffic. (Railroads $7,000 mns.)
3. You can buy up ALL the 5 leading Airlines for under $150 mns. To buy all the Rails would cost you $9 billions.
4. But wait a minute. True, the Airlines have doubled since last April. Dangerously fast work? And do not IMAGINATION STOCKS always fall out of bed? Remember Radio in 1929. It lost its romance, and rudely fell from 114 to 4. Could Airlines do the same?
5. For 1942, the 5 Air Transport Cos. (AMR, PN, EAL, TWA, AL) will earn $25 mns. before taxes, and $14 mns. after—about 10% on the total market value. But Government subsidies in kind are $53 mns.
6. Now start thinking. The industry is a subsidized public utility. Prime Minister Chamberlain, that businessman Conservative, virtually nationalized the English Airlines in 1939 at half the peak price level reached by the stocks in the preceding imagination phase. Can it happen here? (The Government already has started to reduce mail rates pari passu with business expansion. Will further such moves make the stocks cheap for eventual Government purchase in this country?) Watch your step.

AIRCRAFTS (Dreams Being Realized)

7. Meanwhile the Aircraft industry stocks—where early imaginative dreams have now come true—sell to yield 10% (earn. nearer 30%). Total value of all 13 Companies about $300 mns.
   Douglas at 60 probably earned $100 before taxes in '42. The Government takes the last $80. Paid $5. Yield around 9%, with earnings after tax some 4 times higher. Will the Aircrafts, rather than the Airlines, be the "General Motors" of after this War?
8. Query: (1) Would you advise "Short sale 100 Pan American: buy 200 Lockheed"? Would the simultaneous "straddle" be good or bad? (Accompanying chart shows both stocks since 13th April to Jan. 2.)
   Or, (2) Do you prefer Eastern Airlines to Lockheed? You can buy both Companies for around $18 mns. each.
9. In Selection Letter 88, Mr. Rich compares the romantic Airlines with the jilted Aircrafts. Bird in hand vs. bird in bush? You will probably find him not uninteresting. The Letter also contains 8-year Charts of AMR; PN; EAL; TWA; AL; also UR; D; CS; LK; F; BA; and the Dow. (By courtesy Security Charts, 100 Milk Street, Boston.)
10. What is the BIG PICTURE? Be Olympian. It is x-rayed in mid-weekly Stock Selection Letter 88 ($1), entitled, "Airlines vs. Aircrafts." Do some more thinking on these industries. Get the bird's-eye view.

STOCK AVERAGE CLIMBS TO PEAK IN UNEVEN TRADE

Investment Demand Lifts Market After Setback.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—The stock market was hesitant today, but with the aid of scattered "blue chip" investment issues prices managed to finish the week slightly higher, on average.

Dealings were slack and many leaders were unable to shake off losses, but buying based on war developments, investment demand, and other factors was sufficient to keep part of the list higher. After an uneven start, favorites came to the fore and a few recently indifferent rails stiffened toward the close. The long climb from last April's lows, however, brought out further profit cashing.

Average Sets New High.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 0.1 to 42.9, another new top since Oct. 6, 1941, and showed a net advance of 0.2 for the week. Transfers totaled 321,780 shares, against 504,780 last Saturday.

New tops for 1942-'43 were reached by Standard Oil [N. J.], Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, and Zenith Radio. Improvement was retained by Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, General Motors, Anaconda, Sears Roebuck, United States Rubber, General Electric, Pere Marquette prior preferred, New York Central, and Southern Pacific.

Stocks got nowhere Monday, altho some carriers were bid up. The long predicted "technical correction" hit the market Tuesday for the sharpest drop in the averages so far in 1943, tho war news was favorable. There was more resistance Wednesday. The market rallied Thursday. Trade was broad at uneven prices on Friday.

CHICAGO LIST IRREGULAR.

Closing prices were uneven on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday as Consolidated Biscuit, Zenith Radio, Walgreen, and E. L. Bruce rose to 1942-'43 highs. Volume leaders making gains were Midland United preferred, E. L. Bruce, and General American Transportation. Armour & Co. was unchanged and Chicago corporation was lower. Volume was 17,000 shares.

RAILS LEAD BOND RISE.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP).—Low priced rail issues were buoyant in today's bond market, and gains were general in all the principal corporate groups at the close.

Especially strong were obligations of the Missouri Pacific and its affiliate, International Great Northern, as Wall street heard rumors of plans to speed the Missouri Pacific reorganization.

CANADIANS, OPA CONFER ON PRICE FOR NEWSPRINT

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 23 (AP).—Donald Gordon, chairman of the war time prices and trade board, R. L. Weldon, newsprint administrator, and other officials, met with OPA representatives this week to discuss newsprint prices, says a Montreal dispatch to the Financial Post.

"The Canadian delegation went to Washington prepared to "lay on the table particulars of mill costs," said the dispatch. "In the past, refusal of the Canadian mills to divulge such figures effectively blocked attempts to secure approval of the OPA to a price increase.

"Discussions are understood to have resulted in considerable progress. However, there is no indication a change in prices is in immediate prospect. It is assumed the OPA will approve an increase of at least $3 a ton. It is unlikely the rate will be advanced as much as $10 a ton."

[OPA control is effected thru a ceiling on the price at which newsprint can be purchased in the United States, now $50 a ton, New York. Canada provides over 70 per cent of United States newsprint.]

Referring to recent orders designed to curtail paper consumption 10 per cent, the Post says further restrictions are expected, "and by the end of 1943, paper consumption may be 25 per cent to 30 per cent under the 1942 level."

INDICATE CLIMB IN BRITISH WAR SPENDING RATE

Credit Request to Be Hiked by 50 Per Cent.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Discussions of post-war reconstruction, which continued to concern economists and financial observers, were overshadowed this week by a treasury announcement that the chancellor of the exchequer will make an important statement on war finance at the next session of the house of commons.

Indicating expansion of spending, the announcement said he will ask a credit of 900 million pounds [about 3 billion 600 million dollars] to carry thru to the end of fiscal year March 31, instead of the 600 millions [about 2 billion 400 million dollars] expected.

Daily cost of the war, it was estimated, will have been boosted to 14 million pounds from the 12¾ million rate of last October if the larger sum is spent. A second credit of a billion pounds [about 4 billion dollars] is expected to be asked to start the new financial year.

Proposes Two Budgets.

Post-war discussion was concentrated on the new memorandum, "the problem of employment," issued by Lever Bros. and United Lever, Ltd., a combine controlling more than 300 companies dominating the British empire soap and margarine industry, together with raw materials for making these commodities.

Chief interest was aroused by its proposal that the government have two annual budgets. One would cover ordinary expenditures and be balanced yearly. The other would be built up by increased taxation in times of prosperity to cover emergency measures during depressions, to fight unemployment, and to stimulate trade by government investment in public works and remission of taxes.

Would Revise Tax System.

"Under the single budget system," the report said, "taxation is imposed at a higher rate in times of depression and at a lower rate in times of prosperity. The procedure should be reversed. In booms the government's policy should be to stop spending and in slumps to encourage it."

Altho the Lever memorandum is given newspaper space second only to the Beveridge report for "birth to grave" security, it does not lack critics. The question most frequently asked is how its proposals are to be implemented. If some sort of general staff is set up to advise on government economic actions, many foresee the establishment of a financial dictatorship with powers exceeding those of the cabinet.

The memorandum asserts flatly that industry alone will be unable to prevent mass unemployment, but condemns state ownership and insists that industry must continue to be managed by private enterprise.

Investors' Guide

Sunday, Jan. 24, 1943.

MANAGEMENT.

A life insurance company president recently discussed at considerable length, before a group of his agents, the company's policy in making investments. He described the careful investigation made before purchasing a security, and the continuing close watch maintained thereafter lest unfavorable developments should undermine the value of the investment. The most important consideration in any investment, he emphasized, is the quality of the management.

Good management is the most valuable asset possessed by any business, but one will look in vain to find it listed with other assets in the balance sheet, altho it definitely is reflected there and in the income account. Nevertheless, it is possible to appraise this intangible factor with a high degree of accuracy.

Past performance is the soundest criterion of management quality. Some companies over a long period of years always fare better than others in their industry. Investigation will show that these successful concerns are never slow to modernize their product or their selling methods. On the contrary, they usually are the leaders in developing new products and new selling methods.

Invariably the balance sheet of a company boasting good management will show progressive strengthening from year to year. Debt will be reduced and cash resources built up until the company is in a position to weather a serious depression. The company will have a high reputation not only with the public but with others in its industry, and the record of employer-employé relations usually is good. Over the long run superior management will be measured in better than average dividend returns and capital appreciation.

A good record over a fairly long period can sometimes be deceiving, however. This is true when the management has been a one man affair, and this man, usually the founder of the business, has neglected to train executives who will be qualified to take over upon his retirement. One of the best safeguards against this eventuality, of course, is a strong board of directors actively interested in the company's affairs. A capable board will protect stockholders against a break in the management continuity.

Past performance is not an infallible guide, but it has proved reliable over many years.

SURPLUS MEAT STOCKS PILE UP WITH PACKERS

Buying for Lend-Lease Falling Short.

into spring and summer for sale at higher prices.

Packers have no price incentive to store pork this winter, however, and prospects are that spring production will set new all time records as processors seek a quick turnover for both domestic and lend-lease business.

Ceilings on meat prevent packers from charging more if they do carry this large tonnage into the summer, but packers cannot rid themselves of the load without violating some rule in the maze of restrictions or cutting their slaughtering, one meat authority explained. Sale of this tonnage has been blocked almost as effectively as it would have been by specific orders to hold it for the lend-lease, he said.

Live costs of hogs this month average the highest for January in 23 years, and, packers assert, are well above the level warranted by meat ceilings. Packers' inventory losses are being extended by maintaining refrigeration for the "unwanted" stored meat.

Weather Reduces Shipments.

Severe weather cut farm shipments to all markets last week, resulting in substantial price advances. Part of the gains were lost near the end of the week as conditions improved.

Steers and yearlings closed steady with a week earlier, altho the week's average showed a gain of 15 cents a hundred pounds. Cows and calves closed 25 to 50 cents higher, and heifers gained 25 cents.

The six day hog average, up 25 cents to $14.95, stood at a high since early October. Final sales were up 10 to 15 cents for the week. The six day lamb average, at $15.95, showed a 55 cents gain to a 14 week high. Closing sales showed increases of 25 cents.

CAUSE OF SHORTAGE

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 23 (AP).—Harry Coffee, president of the Union stockyards at Omaha, said today that Californians who are experiencing a meat shortage can blame a freight rate "protective tariff" that keeps midwestern packers from shipping to the west coast market.

Coffee said the fresh meat rate to the west coast is $2.68 per hundred pounds, compared with a rate on live stock of $1.06. The rate was adopted to encourage shipment of live hogs to west coast packing plants and keep midwest killed hogs out of the market, Coffee declared.

"Live stock should be slaughtered in the base production area, not shipped live hundred of miles," he said. "Shipping live stock takes far more car space, and is wasteful of precious transportation."

A JEALOUS WIFE LANDS HUBBY AND WOMAN IN JAIL

Adam J. Krainz, 27 years old, and Miss Irene Livingstone, 19, were in the Lake county jail last night because Krainz's wife, Beatrice, was jealous. Mrs. Krainz, who is 25, reported to officials of the North Chicago veterans' hospital that her husband had stolen several articles of clothing from the hospital, where he is an attendant.

The officials obtained a search warrant from Justice of the Peace Harry Hoyt and went to the Krainz home at 1016 Adams street, North Chicago, with two deputy sheriffs. The searchers found several articles stolen from the hospital. Mrs. Krainz then volunteered the information that her husband and Miss Livingstone had gone to Waukegan to try to get a loan on the family furniture.

A Waukegan small loan firm confirmed that Krainz and a woman who signed herself as Mrs. Irene Krainz had arranged to get a $100 loan. Deputy Sheriffs George Stried and Charles Hoskins arrested the pair on a charge of obtaining credit under false pretenses. Justice of the Peace Hoyt fixed their bonds at $2,500 each and ordered them held in jail when they were unable to meet it.

I CAN HELP YOU

As an industrialist and vocational counsellor of many years' experience, I am helping patriotic men to get into important war work in the capacities for which they are best fitted—where they will be of most help to our country, find their jobs most interesting, and best suited to their natural "and perhaps unsuspected" abilities, and earn the most money. I can advise you not only on what kind of work to do but also on where to find the most congenial, best paid employment, and what questions you will be asked by employment managers.

In addition I can tell you how you can quickly learn the use of any tools or instruments for which your natural taste of talents fit you, how and where to get any training you may need. I will be at the La Salle Hotel from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. Sunday, January 24, and Monday, January 25, for free consultation. I have directed hundreds of people to big success in the past two years and will gladly give you my personal analysis, assistance, and advice without obligation of any kind.

This may be the turning point—the "success point" of your life. So call today or tomorrow, or write WITHOUT FAIL.

I CAN HELP YOU
As an industrialist and vocational counsellor of many years' experience, I am helping patriotic women to get into important war jobs in the capacities for which they are best fitted—where they can be of most help to our country, find their jobs most interesting and best suited to their "strength and physical condition," and earn the most money. I can advise you not only on what kind of work to do, but also on where to find the most congenial, best paid employment, and what questions you will be asked by employment managers.

In addition I can tell you how you can quickly learn the use of any tools or instruments for which your natural taste or talents fit you, how and where to get any training you may need.

I will be at the La Salle hotel from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., Sunday, Jan. 24 and Monday, Jan. 25, for free consultation. I have directed hundreds of people to big success in the past two years and will gladly give you my personal analysis, assistance, and advice, without obligation of any kind.

This may be the turning point—the "success point" of your life. So call today or tomorrow or write WITHOUT FAIL.

—By Bessie Felton

Unemployed. Without Experience, She Wins Well-Paid Hotel Position.

"55 and unemployed! No wonder I was discouraged — dissatisfied — afraid of what might happen! I had been a Millinery Buyer, but had to give up my job to be with my mother. When she passed away, I had to get back into the business world. I enrolled for the Lewis Course. I am now Executive Housekeeper in this very attractive hotel, receive a substantial salary and full maintenance. All this is due to my Lewis training. This is one field where both young and mature have equal opportunities."

STEP INTO A WELL-PAID HOTEL POSITION.

Thousands of Lewis-trained women and men from 20 to 60 are winning success in the hotel, club, restaurant and institutional field. They're "making good" as managers, assistant managers, housekeepers, hostesses and in 55 other types of well-paid positions. For 27 years the success of Lewis Graduates has proved previous experience unnecessary. And now the 3-billion-dollar wartime housing, food and recreation program means greater opportunities than before. ## New Tires for Farm Use Pass Tests

Tires made of Ameripol—a synthetic rubber made by the B. F. Goodrich company—for use on farm equipment. J. J. Newman (left), Goodrich vice president, tells Emmett Blood (right), chairman of Wichita's chamber of commerce war board, that tires for farm use will be available after synthetic production has met military requirements. He says the synthetic rubber tires have passed manufacturing and other tests.

NEED FOR PLANE GAS, SYNTHETIC RUBBER EQUAL

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—"The most important demand on the petroleum industry today is for large quantities of aviation gasoline. Almost equal in importance is the demand for synthetic rubber. Both final products are composed of petroleum hydrocarbons."

This quotation is from a volume of material, approved by military press officers, released to newspapers this week by the Standard Oil of New Jersey at the dedication of a large aviation gasoline refinery at Bayway, N. J. The quotation states an opinion of the relative importance of these two programs, aviation gas and synthetic rubber, contrary to an opinion advocated by Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers.

Jeffers has contended that the preference given to aviation gasoline has jeopardized the rubber program, has delayed construction of synthetic plants to a point where the shortage will be critical this fall, endangering civilian transportation and military construction. Both gas refineries and rubber plants lack component parts, such as gauges and valves, for completion. A compromise has been reported in these opposite views on the proper priority for allocations, but it wasn't apparent in this press statement as approved by the military.

Press Statement Vague.

Proponents of rubber construction from grain alcohol, rather than from petroleum, have further contended that the assignment of a large portion of the synthetic program to the oil industry competed with aviation gasoline for a raw material. Technical testimony before an investigation committee headed by Sen. Guy M. Gillette [D., Ia.] has been vague on this point. The censor approved press statement this week also was vague, at least to many readers, due in part to an unavoidable use of chemical names for which there are no common synonyms.

Furthermore, the process is complicated. However, a reader can get a hint about the merits of the alky-oil controversy from some excerpts from the press statement.

"Now, for the first time," the release describes a process incorporated in the new refinery, "a 100 octane aviation gasoline plant is also a source of basic ingredients for synthetic rubber. The process, worked out by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and put into commercial practice by the Standard Oil of New Jersey and the Standard Oil of Louisiana will result in an annual production [but not in 1943] of 600,000 tons of synthetic rubber ingredients. The aviation gasoline figure cannot be released at this time."

Production Being Pushed.

The statement on the eventual capacity of this process [when more plants are completed] to produce synthetic rubber ingredients does not mean that they are going to be used for synthetic rubber at this time, it was indicated. Reading further, the statement points out that some derivatives from crude oil can be used either as a base for synthetic rubber or for aviation gasoline. The production of aviation gas is being pushed.

"The process which enables these two important war needs to be met is called fluid catalyst cracking," reads an excerpt. "It is one of a number of catalytic cracking processes in use. All perform basically the same function—crack, or break up oil [gas oil or fuel oil] into a variety of new hydrocarbon compounds which are collected and used separately or in combinations.

"One constituent, isobutylene, is used to manufacture butyl rubber. Another constituent, normal butylene, is de-hydrogenated into butadiene.

"Strange to the average person is the fact that these same rubber ingredients also are used in the manufacture of 100 octane aviation gasoline. Of course, there are many intermediate steps—in fact, the entire process for making high octane aviation gasoline is both complicated and distinctly different than the manufacture of automobile fuel."

HAYES REVIVES DISCUSSION OF PEDESTRIAN LAW

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Before the commission which governs the District of Columbia is a proposed law authorizing arrest of pedestrians for crossing the street between intersections controled by traffic lights. The present regulations authorize arrests for walking against a red light.

Last year Chicago received honorable mention in a group of cities with more than a half million population in a pedestrian protection contest conducted by the American Automobile association. The city was penalized in the scoring for not arresting those who walk against the red signal. Chicago is among 767 cities which have been enrolled in a similar 1943 safety contest.

The signal control of pedestrians in the overcrowded national capital is credited with reducing traffic accidents. The rule is moderately enforced. There are a few court summonses issued every week. Several walkers are scolded by policemen daily. The majority of the pedestrians obey the regulation, even when no policeman is on duty at the intersection, altho violations are frequent where an absence of motor traffic doesn't seem to justify a walker wasting time for the lights to change.

Indorsed Editorially.

The Washington Post this week editorially indorsed the present pedestrian control here and the proposed extension of this control to midblocks.

"Pedestrian fatalities at intersections have been cut in half in Washington since institution of laws controling pedestrians," said an editorial. "It has been found that the largest fatality group in statistical breakdowns [largest number of deaths per exposure] is the number of pedestrians killed midway of a block.

"It would seem that pedestrian control laws have been eminently successful in Washington. Surely pedestrians, whether they like it or not, should be just as liable to laws designed for public safety as motorists."

Chicago Tries Control.

Chicago attempted control of the walkers in the loop about 10 years ago and the experiment was abandoned after a few days because the pedestrians, for evident cause, didn't like it. The turning automobiles and taxicabs, some of them cruising, were so numerous that it was frequently difficult during rush hours to cross with the green light. Sometimes it was more convenient and as safe to walk against the red.

The discussion of pedestrian problems was revived this week by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club and a member of the executive committee of the A. A. A. Without protesting for or against the regulation for universal adoption, he urged its study for invocation at particular locations.

Locations warranting special attention, Hayes said, include those with high accident records. They also include the paths of workers at arms industries where foot and motor travel in density are wartime innovations. In the automobile association's contest this year bonus points are to be awarded cities for installation of special pedestrian aids for war workers, for physical improvements for safety at or near arms plants, and for safety education efforts such as posters, movies, and lectures.

Other Cities Enrolled.

Other Illinois cities enrolled in the 1943 contest include Evanston, Calumet City, Chicago Heights, Cicero, Joliet, Oak Park, Villa Park, North Chicago, Brookfield, Centralia, Cairo, and Belleville. Evanston was first in last year's contest for cities in the population group of from 50,000 to 100,000.

Indiana representation includes Hammond, Hobart, East Chicago, Whiting, La Porte, Hartford City, Logansport, Marion, Michigan City, Mishawaka, South Bend, Valparaiso, Peru, and Goshen.

With motor fuel restrictions, any funny remarks about an increased interest in pedestrianism might be in poor taste among automobile owners. There is this increased interest, however, and properly so, according to the Chicago Motor club president, because walkers continue to account for 60 per cent of the traffic fatalities notwithstanding reductions in driving speeds and in traffic volumes. These reductions have slashed the toll as a whole.

VOICE OF TRAFFIC

PLENTY MAD!

Chicago, Jan. 6.—I'm mad! Plenty mad! For weeks we've heard of the scarcity of rubber. We know it is precious and tires are hard to get. Now I come to my complaint.

Why don't they fix the holes in the streets? We are having tire inspection. If our tires are turned down we can't drive our car unless they are replaced or repaired.

The other day we were driving on State street somewhere between 91st and 94th or 95th streets when we hit a hole. The result was a nasty cut in a tire [a good one] and a sore back.

In a few weeks we're going to pay a huge fee for a couple of tin plates which we have to attach to our car. Along with a little sticker with which to clutter up our windows. In other words, we pay for the privilege of driving our car on the city streets. So why in time don't they use that money to fix those same streets?

I wonder just what they'd do if we refused to pay our little city tax? Our fair city would be outraged. Well, so are we.

We have asked why our streets haven't been properly taken care of. We have received no answer. Now we demand—Fix Our Streets! MRS. K. J. Y.

REDUCE LICENSE FEES.

Chicago, Dec. 25.—Why not begin a campaign thru your great newspaper or the motor clubs, etc., to reduce the license fees on automobiles to the basis on which the owner is granted mileage.

With the mayoralty campaign soon and with Republicans in state offices—since tires and gasoline are rationed and many can only get partial use of their cars, why not reduce city and state license fees on A and B card holders so that those prevented from driving as much as others would pay accordingly?

If, as might be the case, an owner was granted later a higher mileage coupon, then the fee could be adjusted accordingly.

It is decidedly unfair to limit the use of property and still require full taxation.—W. J. H.

NEWS AND VIEWS

"How to Keep Your Car Healthy on a Rationed Diet" is the title of a leaflet brought out by the Studebaker corporation giving motorists advice on how to keep their cars running under present difficult conditions. It warns that the restricted driving resulting from gasoline rationing makes necessary certain changes in maintenance practice.

"Under restricted driving, for example, it is advisable to reschedule lubrication and inspection on a time rather than a mileage basis," the leaflet states. "Batteries, too, should be inspected and recharged with greater frequency than customary.

"The quality and quantity of oil in the crankcase also should be watched more carefully today as its function can be seriously impaired by water due to condensation. Moisture is produced in the process of combustion and is not evaporated so readily by short trips at low speeds. A pint or more of water per month may settle in the crankcase and, if not drained at proper intervals, becomes churned with the oil, forming a soaping mixture commonly known as sludge."

The Dodge division of the Chrysler corporation reports that the performance of women at its apprentice school indicates that they readily can learn to perform important machine shop operations formerly handled by men.

John M. Amiss, director of industrial education at the Dodge school, said that the speed with which women in the school are learning to operate many of the most complicated machine tools, the accuracy of their work, their industry and their application compare favorably with men taking special courses and are matters of continual amazement to engineers and mechanics instructing them.

Walter McCarron, general manager of the Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association, urges operators of "nonessential private passenger cars" in the Chicago area to make way for operators of commercial vehicles on repair jobs. The scarcity of good mechanics because of the war makes it difficult for all repair jobs to be taken care of speedily, he explained. He added that many trucks hauling vital war materials have been delayed in getting repairs because shops have side-tracked truck repairs in favor of the more profitable work on nonessential cars.

Mac Short, vice president in charge of engineering for the Vega Aircraft corporation, Burbank, Cal., is the new president of the Society of Automotive Engineers—an organization whose work is closely linked with the automobile industry. Short served as an aviator in the first World war and after the armistice earned his way thru college by barnstorming flights during week-ends and summer vacations. He reëntered the army in 1922 as a junior aeronautical officer and later was an instructor in aeronautical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He went into the aviation business in 1927.

Remodeling Pays

Converting the 30 year old building at the northwest corner of Seneca and Chestnut streets, containing 15 large apartments, into a modern structure with 49 small units at a cost of $190,000, will increase the gross rental from a former $22,000 to $58,000 according to Leo S. Hirschfeld, architect, and one of the owning group. Practically complete, it already is 88 per cent rented.

The building, a pioneer in fireproof construction in the Streeterville district, and one of Chicago's first three story flat buildings to have elevators, was bought by a syndicate last February for $95,000. Isidore Brown, master in chancery, Circuit court, is a member of the group. A feature of the project is that the purchase and remodeling were paid for before a mortgage was undertaken. A 15 year, 4½ per cent mortgage was made yesterday by the General Mortgage Investment, Inc.

ALL WAR HOMES IN WESTCHESTER PROJECT RENTED

An "all rented" sign has been placed on the grounds of the 200 home development of the Commercial Home Building corporation in Westchester, it was reported yesterday by Robert H. Pease, vice president of Draper and Kramer, Inc., which financed the big privately built housing project. Eighty-five homes already are occupied, he said. All but 25 are under roof, and they are well under way. Twenty homes are being completed weekly.

The 200 homes are in the are bounded on the south by Gladstone street [two blocks north of Roosevelt road], on the west by Hull avenue [one block from the Westchester L extension], on the east by Pusheck road [the eastern boundary of Westchester], and on the north by a line just south of Harrison street. All of the homes have been rented to war workers at $39.95 per month.

Mrs. Miles, who was vice president last year, became acting president following the death of President Emil J. Rezny in August. She is a partner in the La Grange realty firm of F. D. Cossitt & Co.

Standard Bank Building Leased by Government

The Standard National bank building, 7919 South Ashland avenue, vacant since June, 1932, has been rented by the department of internal revenue and will be opened on Feb. 1. A staff will be maintained to handle collections and assist taxpayers in their problems for the duration. J. L. Geary of McKey & Poague, was broker. The office of the collector of internal revenue said that branches also will be opened in the west, northwest, north, and southeast sections of the city.

Barry Avenue Apartment Building Brings $85,000

The Provident Mutual Life Insurance company of Philadelphia yesterday sold the 42 apartment building at 719 Barry avenue to the 719-27 Barry Building corporation for $85,000. Joseph F. Dixon is president of the corporation. George W. Springer, of Hooker & Randell, loan correspondent of Provident, negotiated the sale.

DOWN PAYMENT RULE HELD CURB TO HOME SALES

Rep. Jensen Describes It as Unnecessary.

BY AL CHASE.

Thousands of families are being deprived of the right to own homes by office of price administration's recent ruling that a one-third cash down payment and a 90 day notice are necessary in the purchase of residential property involving involuntary dispossession of an existing tenant, said Rep. Ben F. Jensen [R., Ia.] in Washington yesterday.

"A man who wants to buy a house to occupy it as a home should be free to buy at whatever down payment terms he can arrange," Jensen said. "In plain language, this regulation is not necessary, or commensurate with our American ideals.

"A home is something very precious to the American people and this should be a nation of homes. This regulation is depriving thousands upon thousands of good families of the privilege of owning their own homes."

Follows Visit Home.

Jensen's statement was made after his return to Washington from a visit to his home state, where Council Bluffs citizens, including members of the Council Bluffs Real Estate board and home financing leaders, brought to his attention the effect of the order there and the petition of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, now before OPA, for a modification of the order.

The requirement applies in all rent controled areas for all residential sales where a tenant is unwilling to give up the space, according to the association.

Rep. Jensen said that for years the federal housing administration, the Home Owners' Loan corporation, and other federal agencies have been promoting home ownership.

"If a home is to be financed by FHA the purchaser must of course comply with the 10 per cent down payment regulation," Jensen said. "But any one should be free to make his purchase deal on whatever down payment is satisfactory to buyer and owner.

Calls Requirement Excessive.

"The 90 day notice requirement is excessive. The matter should be governed by local regulations. The one-third down payment and 90 day notice regulation is eliminating from the rental market many houses now standing vacant because the owner is afraid to rent, due to the inability to get possession for the purchaser who wants to buy a home.

"The regulation is not anti-inflationary, but inflationary. War workers and others will spend their money for consumption goods. If people put their money into buying homes, that would be truly anti-inflationary.

"No unnecessary regulation should stand in the way of the right of any American to buy a home on a sound plan. We dare not hinder home ownership in this free land."

Home Possibilities Destroyed.

It was observed that cities from coast to coast have reported that the possibility of home ownership is destroyed for the great majority of the people in the areas where the OPA requirement applies. Reports made by local real estate boards, together with the request of the National Association of Real Estate Boards for a modification of the order, have been presented in person to Paul A. Porter, deputy administrator of OPA in charge of rents, by the realtors' Washington committee.

THE BOISE—A ONE-SHIP NAVY!

THE BOISE in action. From a new painting executed for The Tribune by James M. Sessions, Chicago artist.

AN ANSWER TO A JAP CHALLENGE!

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

TO AMERICA'S list of famous fighting ships has been added another name. It is that of the light cruiser Boise, which not so long ago, battered and blasted, came struggling back under its own power to the Philadelphia navy yard after having played the main rôle in a drama of the sea—the sinking of six Japanese warcraft off Guadalcanal Island in the Solomons.

When this vessel, which has earned the name of the "one-ship navy," has been repaired and made good as new it will steam off to war again. There are two Japanese heavy cruisers, one light cruiser, and three destroyers, however, that never will be in action again. They are the ships that met the valiant Boise in that violent encounter off Cape Esperance, Guadalcanal, on the night of Oct. 11-12. They all lie helpless and beyond recovery on the bottom of the sea, where brilliantly-hued fish flash in and out of their riddled superstructures.

The story of that encounter is an epic in the annals of our navy. Like the Bon Homme Richard, like "Old Ironsides," and like the battleship Oregon, the Boise long will be remembered. Almost every patriotic American now is familiar with the principal details at least of that thrilling fight in the Solomons, but few perhaps know that the actual building of the Boise was a direct answer to a challenge by Japan. What an answer!

In 1935 the Japanese completed the first two of four second class cruisers of the Mogami class, finely engineered craft of 8,500 tons displacement, great speed, and relatively heavy armament. The United States, to be equipped to cope with these formidable vessels, began a new light cruiser construction program involving nine ships of the Brooklyn class, considerably heavier than the Japanese vessels, bearing thicker side armor, armed with guns equally powerful, and, perhaps more important than all, provided with aircraft facilities that were revolutionary, to say the least, and made the vessels highly effective for scouting purposes. The term light cruiser, it should be explained, has nothing to do with the weight or displacement of a vessel, but indicates rather that its main guns are of about 6-inch bore or smaller. Heavy cruisers, on the other hand, which frequently are of lighter tonnage than the largest light cruisers, carry main guns of 7½-inch or 8-inch bore—in nearly all cases the latter.

When Miss Salome Clark, daughter of Chase A. Clark, then governor of Idaho, on Dec. 3, 1936, at Newport News, Va., cracked a bottle of Snake river water on the prow of a newly constructed hull and christened it the Boise, the sixth or seventh of this Brooklyn class of light cruisers was on its way toward fame. Eight of the nine of the class, including the Boise, were completed before World War II. started in Europe in September, 1939. The ninth was completed shortly after the beginning of the conflict.

The Boise displaces 10,000 tons, as do all of the class except the Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Savannah, and Honolulu, which are only slightly lighter. When completed it was just about the last word in modern light cruisers. Its main battery consists of 15 6-inch guns, mounted three to a turret in five turrets. In addition it carries eight 5-inch anti-aircraft guns, which can be employed for horizontal fire as well; four 3-pounders, five 1-pounders, and three machine guns. This is its armament according to most recent information available, altho extra guns may have been added since the data here given was made public.

The Boise belongs to a class of vessels which, according to Hanson W. Baldwin, well known naval authority, is (Continued on page five.)

UNDERGROUND! The Lowlands Strike Back

By LLOYD WENDT

This is another story about the work of the underground forces resisting German aggression in countries in occupied Europe.

THE GERMAN high command scoffed nervously at the talk of a second front. But in the Lowlands and France new airfields were cleared and slave labor was prodded into feverish activity on the gun emplacements and fortifications. Orders went down to the Quisling governments of France, Holland, Belgium, and Luxemburg to step up factory production. Troops began pouring across the occupied countries, moving to battle stations.

On the night of Aug. 7, 1942, a troop train of German soldiers sped toward Rotterdam. Ahead moved an oil train of 19 tank cars. Signals were blacked out and the locomotives roared along in almost total darkness. Just outside the city there was a sudden glare of light and the sound of a terrific explosion. The tank cars crumpled up, and new earth-shaking blasts followed. The troop train engineer applied his brakes, and nothing happened—for a few seconds. Then his string of 44 soldier-laden freight cars crashed into the flaming oil train wreckage.

Both trains were wholly lost that night of Aug. 7, and scores of German soldiers were burned and otherwise injured. The German government began reprisals against the Dutch civilian population. Nearly 1,600 leading Dutch citizens were rounded up and held as hostages for the delivery of the saboteurs. The Nazi Hilversum radio went on the air, offering a reward of 100,000 guilders (about $54,000) for information leading to the arrest of those responsible for the most serious wreck in the history of German occupation in the Netherlands.

The shooting of the hostages began a week later. Baron Schimmelpenninck, former aide to Queen Wilhelmina; Christoffel Benneckers, once Rotterdam's chief of police, and William Ruys, managing director of the Rotterdamsche Lloyd, were among the first to die. Still no saboteurs were delivered up, no reward claimed.

Carrying out their policy of taking everything useful from the Lowlands, Germans cart away a bridge for scrap.

During the next 60 days, a period when the allied invasion of Europe was hourly expected by many persons in the occupied countries, there were no fewer than 48 train wrecks in Holland alone. The Dutch underground proved its strength then and in a voice of thunder invited the allied nations to come in and fight.

The hatred of Germany that flames in Holland is not surpassed in any other country. The Dutch will never forget how the Nazis wantonly destroyed undefended Rotterdam from the air after the Dutch General Winkelman had surrendered his forces. In two and a half hours, from noon to 2:30 p. m. May 14, 1940, unopposed German planes reduced a city of 600,000 population to rubble, destroying 26,000 buildings, killing and injuring, according to Dutch estimates, 25,000 persons. It was a lesson in terror that shocked the world, one the Dutch will neither forget nor forgive.

The German invasion of Holland, in violation of all principles of decency, swiftly crushed the organized resistance of that little country, but did nothing to diminish its fighting spirit. The Dutch, ruggedly independent, have fought off at one time or another invaders from almost every country in Europe. Their glorious fighting tradition is one that particularly prepared them for the kind of underground warfare they are now waging against the enemy.

Sabotage in Holland has become a fine art. Dutch industry has been forced to work for the Germans, and Dutchmen are in the labor camps fortifying the coast. But the Dutch have been able to prove themselves among the most incapable, inefficient workmen in Europe. In some of the conquered countries the Germans did not expect much in the way of industrialized man power. But they know that the Netherlands contains some of the best skilled labor in the world, and the slowdown and awkwardness there particularly exasperates them.

In the big shipyards the Dutch workers manage consistently to cut the plates to wrong sizes, to overtemper them, or to provide the wrong quantities of alloys. Often when Dutch workmen have finished with a sheet of valuable steel plate it is fit for nothing but the scrap heap. The Germans can prove nothing. You can make a man work, but you can't guarantee the products of his labors. The workers seem to be trying. They complete just enough satisfactory jobs to avoid having their families starved. But they keep production down to half the possible totals.

Dutch miners and screeners mix small stones in their coal, stones that will choke up German furnaces at later dates. In textile factories the workers tamper with the moisture regulators, causing yarns to break, holding up production or resulting in the manufacture of faulty goods.

In the beginning the Germans naively assumed that the Dutch would become pacified and learn to do things right if they got sufficient instruction. The German loves red tape, and showers of orders and regulations descended upon the factory owners and managers. These executives spent so long trying to "understand" the orders, and then carried them out with such literal simplicity, that production was slower than ever. The Dutch called the red tape campaign against the Germans "fighting a paper war." Their underground newspapers boasted that in only one Dutch factory was there no sabotage. That was the silk factory at Huizen, near Amsterdam, where 200,000 silkworms strive busily, heedless of warfare.

The Germans finally won the paper war by taking over the Dutch plants. But in most cases they failed to step up production. Of 300 shoe factories in Holland only 26 are now in operation, according to underground reports.

The Germans have sought to export Dutch labor to Germany, hoping that under close supervision some productive work could be gotten out. This campaign has failed. The Nazis first called for volunteers, but discovered that the only volunteers were experienced saboteurs. Then they attempted to round up forced labor squads. Nazi commissions visited the factories, selected certain Dutch workers, and ordered them into buses. Their fellow workers simply put down their tools and refused to go back to their jobs until the buses turned back. From that time on the underground warned workers' committees in the factories when German commissioners planned a visit. The Dutch simply absented themselves on such days. The Nazis were forced to stop their kidnaping attempts.

A few Dutch workers actually went to Germany. Their production was so slight that finally German newspapers reported that Dutch labor "was considerably worse" than any other they had tried.

As in other countries, the Dutch railroad men and seamen are playing an important part in the underground war against Germany. So many cargoes have been destroyed in both ships and trains that the Germans lately have found it necessary secretly to concentrate stores at certain points and then take them into Germany under heavy guard. The normal channels of transportation cannot be trusted, despite the vigilance of the occupying forces.

Underground newspapers, such as the famous De Oranjekrant (the Orange Paper), constantly advise Netherlanders on new sabotage schemes and means for defeating the Nazi orders. Factory workers are urged to hide or destroy raw materials, to wreck machines, to produce ingeniously faulty war supplies. Farmers are advised to plow shallow furrows so that the yield will be small, and to sell their produce to the Dutch only, in the black markets. Even artists and entertainers are urged not to work if it will in any way benefit Germany. The Dutch loyally carry out such instructions. Johanna Maria Vincent, famous Dutch concert singer, is now in a German concentration camp for refusing to appear before a Nazi audience, as is Charlotte Koehler, one of Holland's best known stage actresses.

Holland, like the other occupied countries, is being slowly starved by the occupation forces. Much of the foodstuff is sent back to Germany, altho the German troops in Holland and the Quislings are permitted to live well.

Leader of the Dutch Quislings is the squat megalomaniac Anton Adrian Mussert. Son of a school teacher, Mussert married a wealthy aunt 18 years older than himself in order to get along in the world. Back in 1931 he organized the Dutch Fascist party, National Socialistische Bewegung, and by this move he made powerful friends in Germany. When the German invasion began the NSB coöperated with the German spies who had been sent into Holland years before.

Immediately following the fall of Holland many persons wondered why mined bridges had not been destroyed, why certain dikes were not opened, and how it was possible that signals to German airmen could appear at certain strategic points. It was the work of NSB men and German spies. Quiet looking farmers who had lived for years on the frontier approached Dutch soldiers who had been left to explode the mines at a given moment. The soldiers naturally thought the farmers were refuges fleeing before the Nazis. But the "farmers" drew guns from under their jackets and shot the Dutch soldiers before blasting orders could be carried out. In Rotterdam, German business men who had lived in the city for years dragged out hidden machine guns and aided the invader. Quislings who could find their way to important factories even in a blackout touched off flares to guide the bombers.

Mussert, rarely seen without his bodyguard and his riding whip, has a strong body of storm troopers in his organization. They would not last long without the German army behind them, but they are able now to rule Holland. Mussert has often complained that he gets no support from the Dutch people. "If the English invade Holland," he admitted once, "the rabble will wipe us out."

In addition to the sabotage efforts the Dutch underground is in constant communication with the Dutch government in exile and with the British. The underground railway in Holland regularly rescues allied airmen forced down in that country and smuggles them to the coast cities, where many of them have been able to escape in small boats. It provides the allied command with information not even a most expert foreign spy corps could obtain.

The Nazi reprisals in Holland have fallen most heavily upon the Jews, as elsewhere. At one period Jews were being exported from the country at a rate of 600 a day, and German newspapers have predicted that there will be no Jews in Holland by the end of this year. German wrath has also been directed against the Catholic church, because bishops and priests refused to obey Nazi orders. When the campaign against the church was on, Dutch Catholics wore their crosses in plain view as a gesture of defiance. Dutch Protestants emulated them, and the sign of the cross has become the symbol of revolt in Holland—that and the ribbon of orange, the color of the ruling house of the legal Netherlands government.

Belgium, like Holland and the other occupied countries, continues to fight the axis. Last month reports from the Belgian underground told of eight large fires, set by saboteurs, that destroyed supplies and food intended for German troops. Trains are derailed and members of the Black brigade, storm troopers of the Fascist Rex party, are set upon by patriots whenever they venture out alone.

Belgium, with a population of 8,386,000 in an area only a little larger than Maryland, is heavily industrial for its size, and sabotage costs the Germans dearly. But one of the most important of Belgian contributions to the cause of the allied nations is the underground signaling service by which patriots, at the risk of their lives, guide airmen on their raids into Germany.

Nominal leader of the Belgian Fascists is Leon Marie Degrelle, who was on Mussolini's pay roll for years before the war. Degrelle organized the Rexist party in 1932, and at one time he had some power in Belgium, electing 21 of his followers to parliament in 1936. At the next election in 1939, however, the Rexists retained only four seats.

When the Germans entered Belgium they sought to make Degrelle head of the state, but the captive King Leopold refused to accept him. After the Nazis learned that Degrelle was considered a madman even by some of his own followers they oddly gave up the idea of making him a Belgian fuehrer. Instead they permitted him to organize the "Walloon legion" to fight the Russians, and he was last heard of on the Russian front.

The Germans have in good measure succeeded in their determination to starve Belgium into submission. The country must import much of its food, even in peacetime. Yet the stories of sabotage and demonstrations in Belgium are regularly reported by underground communications. Like the rest of occupied Europe, Belgium is ripe for revolt, with what strength remains, whenever the invasion forces of the allied nations make a general uprising possible of success.

LABELS SOMETIMES LIBEL

By MAUREEN DALY

(Author of "Seventeenth Summer.")

YOU CAN'T always tell a girl by the length of her sweater or pigeonhole a fellow by the amount of zoot he has in his suit. You can't pick your parties by the jingle in the pocket, the size of a house, or the plaits in a skirt. Six outfits a week and a change for Sunday doesn't necessarily make a girl a smooth date, nor does fate's gift to women always come wrapped in a maroon convertible with a C card. Don't let the outsides fool you.

Some of the grandest girls you know—even if you don't know it—are wearing sweaters so old they never heard of a Sloppy Joe, skirts that will pass the three-year mark come Eastertide, and silk blouses that their sisters wore in high school. And some of the swellest fellows are getting along with the same plaid shirts and turned-up corduroys that they had on the first day you saw them in freshman assembly. They have high school duration wardrobes.

But that doesn't make any difference—they can still be the best dancers and the most fun, even if their socks aren't cashmere and their shoes have been soled for the third time.

Sometimes, however, fellows and girls in high school don't see it that way. They classify others according to the clothes they wear, the houses they live in, and the money they have to spend, and form friendships accordingly. It can happen almost unconsciously. Without even knowing it they form a mental attitude of "looking for the label.". It is an unfairness committed almost without thinking.

Opinions can be formed too quickly. Maybe you drop in for a visit with some one you sit next to in school, or perhaps you all get together at some one's home to discuss plans for a class party. You are not out looking for silk brocade and plush carpets, but unconsciously you do make a mental note of the crack in the wall and the worn spot in the rug at the foot of the stairs in the living room.

Don't feel too good about those better marks—you may just be lucky.

In your own home every one is grown up, and, you being the youngest, and neat, can afford to think about things like white woodwork and coffee tables. You forget or don't understand at all about overstuffed chairs with sagging arms from young brothers who insist on sitting sideways, finger marks on the walls, and furniture scratched up from wooden toys and kiddy cars.

To you everything may seem wrong. The friend loses value because the home doesn't come up to your standards. It may be on the wrong side of the street, on the wrong side of town; you can't tolerate such shabbiness, and you decide that you'll have no such Sallys in your alley. So with selfish thoughtlessness the deal is closed.

It isn't fair, because a girl or fellow without the breaks has to study the same courses, sit in the same classrooms, and buck the same competition you do. If for the time being the cards seem to be stacked in your favor, you're just lucky, that's all.

You shouldn't feel too smug over a high grade in an exam for which you could study in the quiet of your own bedroom, with a solicitous mother and a hot cup of cocoa twice in the evening to spur you on, when some one else may have had to cram for the same exam with two small brothers trying to scribble pictures on the margin of the textbook and a worried mother running up dish towels on a noisy sewing machine in the next room.

And if by chance there should be four smaller children at home a girl can't always be blamed for not always being spotlessly neat and clean. She may have to use up her time and energy on the others. There may be four other sweaters to wash before she gets around to her own. There may be a father who works hard but whose pay check has two figures—one a zero—and a mother who is an authority on how to remodel one large pair of worn trousers into two small, neat pairs in a junior size. There may be doctors and coal bins and back bills to think about and worry over. There may be bigger worries than going steady or getting a smooth date for Friday night's dance.

So if you feel like crossing fellows and girls off your list just because they don't come up to your fashion and grooming standards, before you make any quick and unkind decisions just stop to think, "Tell me, pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?" "Family first" is a good policy—so give them credit.

THAR'S GOLDWYN Them Thar Stills!

Sam, some chorus girls, and a secretary illustrate the publicity department's idea of how Goldwyn feels about Bob Hope.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN

Sam, Mrs. Lou Gehrig, and Gary Cooper chat on the set of "Pride of the Yankees."

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood.

WHEN SAM GOLDWYN started making movies in 1913 Hollywood and Vine was an olive grove. George M. Cohan was starring in "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Woodrow Wilson was serving the first year of his first term as President. A new speed record of 118 miles an hour had just been set in an airplane. The first water had entered the Gatun locks of the Panama canal, and Emmeline Pankhurst was jailed in London for agitating votes for women, an innovation which Michigan rejected by a plurality of 100,000. That year the income tax and the parcel post became part of the American way, and Winston Churchill was urging England and Germany to suspend naval construction for a year.

On Dec. 29, 1942, Goldwyn completed his 30th year as a motion picture producer. In any poll of major Hollywood personalities his name will stand out.

Hollywood is divided about Sam. In some quarters they only tell silly jokes about him. In others they say that as a producer he has the cunning of a silkworm and he's the type that eats his young.

The real Goldwyn is self-made. An immigrant orphan from Warsaw, Poland, where he was born in 1884, his first job was in a glove factory at Gloversville, N. Y., at $3 a week, which he's never forgotten.

When he saw people paying real money to see a 500-foot reel of actors throwing pillows at each other he decided there was something to that business, so he and his brother-in-law, Jesse Lasky, formed a producing company with capital of $20,000 and hired Cecil B. De Mille as director. Their first, "The Squaw Man," was made in an old barn. Dustin Farnum, the star, got $250 a week, De Mille $100. Production began Dec. 29, 1913. The barn, which they rented for $25 a month, is now a gymnasium on the Paramount lot.

Married now to Frances Howard, and known thruout the screen colony for his devotion to his wife, Goldwyn leads one of the most irreproachable private lives here. He doesn't drink or smoke, walks an hour daily. Gas rationing means little to Sam. He loves to walk, and so does Frances. Hardest thing for them is to walk home from the studio, because so many friends stop and try to pick them up. But Sam keeps walking, and weighs the same as he did 20 years ago. Is careful of his diet—or Frances is. When you're served cream of mushroom soup at their home Sam has clear broth. He prefers simple food—and usually has what he likes.

Dresses well, but nothing fancy. He wears tailored shirts, which he used to get from England; permits Frances to select his ties. Won't wear jewelry of any kind, even the most inconspicuous. Never carries anything on his person. Not a watch, pencil, nor token—not a cent of money—not a key nor keepsake. Nothing. Sam likes old shoes—as who doesn't?—and his wife's greatest difficulty is getting him to break in new ones. He has shoes that he's worn for 15 years.

The Goldwyns' home is one of the finest here. It's handsome, comfortable, and unpretentious, and run perfectly. A genial host, he likes to discuss world affairs with his friends and out-of-town visitors, and enjoys the companionship of people. He runs all the pictures in his own home. There are no two ways about Sam. Either you like him or you don't, and that's that.

He took glamor when it was just an old Scotch word meaning "a spell cast by magic," and has made it pay dividends for years. He relies 100 per cent on only two people—his wife and his chauffeur. One or the other drives him to and from the studio, or wherever he wants to go.

His greatest virtue around the house is that he minds his own business. He has had two homes built without knowing what was to be in them, what they were to be like, or where they were to be, until they were done. All that was left to Frances. Never remembers his own telephone number—doesn't think it's essential to memorize it.

His two vices are ice cream and gin rummy. He'll sit up playing gin rummy all night, when nothing else on earth could prevent him from retiring at 10 p. m. He eats ice cream the way a professional taster tastes coffee—as if he were mulling it. He'll down two sodas at a sitting. After previewing one picture he took his staff to Chapman's ice cream parlor on Santa Monica boulevard for ice cream sodas, because he liked them.

He's an ardent worker for charity. While he was chairman of the motion picture industry's permanent charities committee the industry took first place among all industries in the raising of funds for good causes. He's still a member of the committee.

He's intensely loyal to the men who have been with him longest. When Reeves Espy, who had been with him for ages, left to become an independent producer, he gave him a luncheon. Only top men of the studio came, but suddenly in the midst of it Sam remembered the man who had arranged for the luncheon, decorated the table, etc. He sent for Irving Sindler, his property man for 16 years. Irving arrived in his shirt sleeves, thinking it was a "rib." Goldwyn made a place for him at the table, then turned to Espy: "Reeves, I hate to see you go, but I can spare you. If Irving left me I'd have to shut down the studio."

Following the preview of "They Got Me Covered" he was explaining to his cutter the changes he wanted. The cutter, an unemotional young man, looked at him with a graven face and two hard, coal black eyes. Finally Goldwyn stopped and said, "Look, Danny, if it's no trouble to you, just move an eyelash so I'll know you're still alive."

When his staff was discussing a director of whom one of them said, "He's a great director, but what he needs is a great producer," Goldwyn, who always produces his own, said, "Well, where can I hire one?"

He's never heard most of the gags attributed to him, much less authored them. Some of them he thinks amusing, and he tells of the reporter who hurried up to him after he got off his train one morning in New York and said: "Mr. Goldwyn, this is my first assignment. Help me out—give me some gags"

For money he uses his own. Maybe that's the reason he's so careful about details.

He loves a good fight, and when he thinks he's right no power on earth can change him, not even Frances. It's Frances who disciplines his son, and many times he thinks she's too strict with the boy. When young Sammy's in for a good scolding Sam Sr. leaves the house. When he fought with United Artists he took the matter to court and refused to make another picture for a year and a half, until the case was settled.

"The Little Foxes," with Bette Davis, was his first picture after he returned to production. In it, besides Bette and Herbert Marshall, were Teresa Wright, Richard Carlson, and five unknowns from the Broadway stage on whom Goldwyn took a gamble. Teresa Wright is today one of our most popular stars, while Dan Duryea and Charles Dingle now have picture contracts.

When asked why he takes plays like "The Little Foxes," which many thought too venomous to be popular, he says, "I put a little magic on them." That one was followed by "Ball of Fire" and "The Pride of the Yankees." His latest is "They Got Me Covered," with Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour. He has a regular crush on Bob—thinks he's the outstanding comedian of the day. I wouldn't argue with that, either.

Since becoming an independent producer Sam has brought to the screen in some 60 films such stars as Barbara La Marr, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone, Constance Bennett, Ronald Colman, May McAvoy, Vilma Banky, Clive Brook, Ann Harding, Gloria Swanson, Kay Francis, Eddie Cantor, Loretta Young, Ina Claire, Helen Hayes, Anna Sten, Fredric March, Merle Oberon, Gary Cooper, Teresa Wright, and many others.

He made his first talkie in 1929—"This Is Heaven," with Vilma Banky. Among his best are "Stella Dallas," "Dodsworth," "These Three," "Wuthering Heights," and "The Westerner."

In 1943, his 30th year as a producer, he'll do a picture on Russia, a musical starring Danny Kaye, and another Bob Hope comedy.

Sam's given a great boost to our business. The care most producers put into 10 pictures he puts into one.

As his enemies say, he doesn't make many, but gosh almighty!—he makes 'em good.

MONOTONY—AN AID TO MARRIAGE!

This is the third article in the series "YOUR DIVORCE—AND HOW TO AVOID IT," discussing the problems of marriage. The first two covered the field of war marriages and incompatibility. The writer is author of a new book, "Your Wedding—How to Plan and Enjoy It."

By
WOODS

SUCCESSFUL marriage is a lot of things, but there are a lot of things it is not. Generally speaking, it is sustained romance settled into a groove. It is coöperation, cooking, and children. It's not an impassioned series of "I-love-yous." It's not all thrills, bright lights, and beribboned gifts. It is "old shoe" comfort, sympathy, and understanding.

Psychologists agree that monotony is absolutely necessary to married happiness. They don't mean bored monotony, but a routine plane of living where marriage serves as a background against which events of life are played.

"Sometimes I think I might as well be just a stick of furniture in our house, for all the attention I get," confesses Mary Lewis, a wife of 12 years whose husband has come to take her for granted. "Harry is so occupied with his business that an outsider might consider me a mere robot who runs the house for the family—without much thanks from anybody. But I know that I'm appreciated, and that's all that's necessary."

It is true (and natural) that after 12 years of marriage Harry has come to take his wife more or less for granted. She may raise her voice in mild protest, but she knows well and good that it is she who pervades the entire background of his life and fills his universe just as he fills hers. In the rush of his busy days he may fail to notice the becomingness of her new hat, but he is constantly aware that she is there to back him up when he needs her. And she feels the same way about him. That is what psychologists consider a successful married state.

"The woman who insists upon continual proofs of devotion very soon receives proofs of excessive boredom," says an eminent marriage authority. "The novelist or movie scenario writer who pictures married love as a perpetual chuckle-headed infatuation is a public nuisance."

The initial adjustment in marriage is the painful part and the "drag" of matrimony is the true romance, he believes. In real unity, where each partner serves as a background to the other, divorce practically is impossible, because husband and wife completely fill the world for one another.

This placid settling down of middle-aged matrimony seems unduly monotonous and passively devoid of romance to Jean and Glenn Green, a young and ardent pair of newlyweds who have solemnly pledged each other that their marriage is to be one of sky-blue romance and peak thrills, guaranteed to last a lifetime. They honestly believe that this mutual preoccupation with each other which they are enjoying as honeymooners will continue at fever heat thru the years.

Doctors say, however, that the exaggerated wonder of adolescent love represents a stage of development that cannot be perpetuated. The physical being cannot withstand the emotional strain of a constant ecstatic state.

What the Greens will live and learn, if they take happiness in their stride, is that a marriage which develops serenity of background and a complexity of interests is the lasting, satisfactory sort of union for which to aim. The normal young couple goes into matrimony completely ignorant of what to expect. They mistake the kisses and quips and caresses of lovemaking for the bread of wedded bliss instead of recognizing them as the thin, delicate crust of the outside of the loaf. When complacency sets in and other interests demand their attention their illusions fly out the window. They invariably feel they are being cheated of the full measure of romance and thrills which they expected to flow at high tide the rest of their lives.

Romance, in the sense of adventure together, companionship, and mutual pride, however, needs never to go on the wane.

"We have weathered the marital storm for 10 years," assert Barbara and Denny Carter, "and life without each other is utterly inconceivable."

They are as congenial a couple as you'll find anywhere, tho their interests are widely separated. Barbara is a talented counselor in a large department store. Her husband is engaged in chemical research which calls for almost solitary confinement. Their professions are as wide apart as sun and moon.

She is surrounded with exciting contacts in a world of sophistication. He lives in a test tube of scientific detachment where experiment is routine and accuracy is essential. Barbara, with her disregard for practicalities and her flair for the exotic, easily might prove a trial to such a man. But Denny, in spite of his conservatism, delights in her vividness of personality, her fantastic ideas, her gayety and charm. He is proud of the place which she has made for herself in the world of fashion. She in turn gathers strength from his calm and serene nature and finds his realism a balance wheel.

The Haskells are different, however. Walter was a promising young man with ambitions for getting ahead in the world when he and Gertrude walked down the church aisle several years ago. They were high school sweethearts and grew to believe that they were meant for each other.

Walter was engaged in building up an insurance business, and as he progressed his job became more and more absorbing. The hours were long and uncertain and he soon found that he could not keep up the pace which they had set for themselves socially. Gertrude began to fret because they were missing much of the fun which went on in their crowd. Why couldn't her husband earn a living in eight hours like most other men? Why should they have to be the only ones who couldn't go to parties any more?

Instead of appreciating and encouraging his ambitions she opposed his overtime work and made no attempt to understand what his duties demanded. When tears and coaxings failed in forcing him to cancel evening business appointments Gertrude began to go out alone with her good-time friends and insisted that he join them later.

It was an unsatisfactory pattern for living, and Walter longed for home and rest after a long day's work. As an aftermath of several feather-ruffling scenes Walter gave up in despair and they arranged a sort of armed truce. Now Gertrude depends more and more on outside activities for her interests and leaves Walter to his own devices.

They have never devoloped any real companionship, tho they take occasional trips together and vainly try to revive a spirit of camaraderie. They have no true happiness and have ceased to enjoy each other's company, but they jog along in marriage more from habit than anything else.

Monotony in the sense of dullness has robbed this couple of all the satisfaction of understanding and partnership in marriage. Because this wife refused to accept the responsibilities which are part of marriage, and because she was too selfish to understand her husband's normal interest in his work and share his ambitions, they have lost all feeling of dependence upon each other. They may eventually reach a climax that will lead to the divorce courts; or more than likely they will go on being bored with each other for the rest of their lives—just carrying out a marriage of convenience.

No man, regardless of his burning ambitions, can make any great headway in business or marriage if he is handicapped with a wet-blanket wife who throws cold water on his every aspiration and refuses to take pride in his development. On the other hand, a wife who coöperates with her man can raise him to heights that he never dreamed possible—and can make marriage a lasting monument to their faith in each other.

"Our recipe for living contentedly together is a simple one," say Carl and Marian Hartley. "We've been laughing together for more than 15 years." That is their special answer to happiness in marriage. A sense of humor can save almost any situation.

The underlying truth is that Marian makes it her business to feed her husband well, to consider his comfort and tastes, and to amuse him above all else. With that background for living there's not much danger of Carl straying very far from the glow of the home fires, Marian believes. And she is a wise woman.

As husband and wife together, what sort of companionship do you enjoy? Can you honestly say you look forward to your evenings together as the inspirational part of each day? Do you take time to listen to each other with affection and eagerness as each relates the day's happenings? Do you recreate each other by real exchange of talk and ideas, or do you listen piecemeal and half-heartedly with part of your mind on your own inner thoughts?

The tragedy of routine living under the same roof is that of not listening to one another. It results in boredom and seals people off from each other more than anything else. Listening is love, and in these harassed times it is vital to marriage to snatch some time from every day for the conversational sharing of your lives. Evenings together are important to domestic bliss. They literally can make or break a marriage.

"War conditions and an uprooting of our regular life have made us appreciate our family get-togethers more than ever before," says an army captain's wife who recently moved their "home" and two teen-aged children to a Texas army post.

"We have learned to listen and to know each other," she explains, "and we're building a home defense of companionship and enjoyment which we didn't bother to take time for in civilian life."

It is the little things in living together that often lead marriage astray. The little careless habits and unthinking ways of husbands and wives. Strategy begins with unity, and it takes constant working at to keep the home front from becoming the fighting front. That's why husband and wife need to be jointly devoted to a strong common interest outside themselves. Most often this interest is provided by children. Yet in many instances children can absorb the lives of a couple so completely that they imperceptibly pull them apart. Take the case of the Fairchilds.

"Marriage can run off the track so easily if you aren't looking ahead constantly," is the way Erna Fairchild explains this double-track life which ends in so many wrecks. "Bert and I were like two strangers living together after our children became more or less independent of us."

This couple had known real companionship in those first few years together. Bert was eager for Erna to be a part of everything he did, to share his old friendships and interests and to help build up new ones. She was just as spontaneous in her reactions toward him. Then the boys came along—three of them, in a tow-headed row.

"For years we were so enveloped in domesticity and the problems of rearing our brood that Bert and I had little else in common," Erna explains. "It seemed sufficient to hold us together when the children were small, but as they grew older my husband grew away from me."

The true state of affairs was brought home to her one evening when they were entertained in town by a group of Bert's business associates and their wives. The conversational ball which rolled around the table was completely out of Erna's sphere. She was unaware of many of the phases of the business which were discussed. The various personalities with whom all the other members of the party were familiar were unknown to her. Business incidents referred to by the other men's wives made her feel like a rank outsider. Bert himself was a fascinating stranger—far removed from the husband who helped her with menial housework tasks on Sundays.

Here was an important man of affairs whose opinion was sought after and greatly respected by his colleagues. Erna resolved then and there to become a full partner in marriage rather than a half-companion. She reorganized her domestic duties so that there was opportunity for going into town more often. She signed up for volunteer war work and renewed her old card at the library. She made it a point to lunch with Bert and his friends now and then. She urged her husband to bring people home to dinner with him frequently, and her savory food and well ordered household were eye-openers to all of them, Bert included. She began by degrees to take part in their conversation and to share their world. Her husband's business became a matter of importance to her and his confidences began to grow.

Now, she says, each member of the family has a new evaluation of relationships. Mother has ceased to be a slave to the children and has become more of a casual and interesting companion to all of them. New doors have opened, and she and Bert have found mutual interests which promise to be a sure pension for old age together.

Marriage is a strange and wondrous thing. No one knows its hidden strength and tenacity, its toughness of fiber and rubber-ball buoyancy except those who try to go against it.

Hotbread for Breakfast

By MARY MEADE

BREAKFAST is pretty businesslike six days of the week, when most of the family must be sent off to work or to school promptly. But on Sunday it often can be a more leisurely meal, with time for an extra frill or two.

There may be no bacon for breakfast, but if there's an interesting hot bread the family probably won't even miss it. There's only one drawback to serving hot breads—they do taste wonderful drowned in butter, and we've got to cut down on butter consumption.

Well, whip the butter up with milk, or stretch it with gelatin, and bring on one of these good breads for Sunday morning breakfast.

Breakfast scones are quickly made, and a fine accompaniment for that cup of rationed coffee.

SUNDAY BREAKFAST ROLLS

(About 18)

2 cups sifted enriched flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup solid shortening
⅔ (about) cup milk

FILLING

1 cup dried figs
½ cup water
⅛ cup corn sirup
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon margarine
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Filling can be made in advance and stored in covered jar. Cover figs with boiling water, let stand 10 minutes, and drain. Clip stems and cut figs fine with scissors. Add ½ cup water and cook 10 minutes. Add corn sirup and lemon rind, cook a few minutes longer. Mix sugar, flour, and salt and add. Cook and stir until thickened and clear. Add margarine and lemon juice and cool.

For dough, sift flour, baking powder, and salt together, cut in shortening, and add enough milk to make a soft dough. Turn onto lightly floured board and knead lightly for 30 seconds, then roll into a long, thin sheet. Spread with fig filling and roll up jelly roll fashion. Cut in ¾-inch slices, place on greased sheet, and bake at 400 degrees for about 20 minutes.

BREAKFAST SCONES

(Eight pieces)

2 cups sifted enriched flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup margarine or other solid fat
1 egg
1 cup milk
Topping: 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, and sugar. Cut in fat. Beat egg and add milk. Stir into dry ingredients until blended. Pour into greased deep pie pan. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Cut in wedges and serve hot.

These fig-filled breakfast rolls are a warm treat on a chill Sunday morning.

GRAHAM GEMS

(One dozen)

1 cup sifted enriched flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 egg
3 tablespoons drippings or melted fat

Sift flour, baking powder, sugar, and salt. Beat egg and add to milk. Pour all at once into dry ingredients and stir just enough to wet all the flour. Stir in melted fat. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake at 400 degrees 20 to 25 minutes. These are very good if half a cup of raisins, chopped dates, or nuts are added to the batter.

TODAY'S $5 PRIZE RECIPE

CHICKEN ALMOND

(Casserole for a buffet supper—serves six to eight)

1 4-pound stewing chicken
1 7-ounce package egg noodles
1 small can mushrooms or ¼ pound fresh mushrooms, cooked
½ pound blanched almonds, browned in oil
1 cup medium white sauce
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup cracker crumbs

Cook chicken until tender in salted water to cover. Remove meat from bones and measure out 3 cups of skimmed broth. Cook noodles in boiling salted water until tender. Grease a shallow casserole and arrange half the noodles in the bottom of the dish. Cover with half the chicken, top with layer of mushrooms and layer of almonds. Season to taste. Top with second layer of noodles, chicken, and mushrooms. Mix broth with white sauce and pour over all. Sprinkle with cracker crumbs and top with remaining almonds. Bake one hour in a moderate (350-degree) oven. If a deeper casserole dish is used, less broth will be needed and the noodles may be cooked in chicken broth. Pecans browned in oil may be substituted for the almonds.—MRS. JOHN B. WINGERT, 406 North McKinley, Champaign, Ill.

GENERAL SIKORSKI

GEN. WLADYSLAW SIKORSKI, prime minister of the Polish government in exile, emerged as the leader of unconquered Poland shortly after Germany's successful 28-day war against his country in September, 1939.

Since then, commanding Polish legions on many fronts, he has visited the United States several times to present Polish war aims and plead for help. Twice recently he visited Chicago. His latest visit was last Dec. 18. On April 21, 1941, he addressed 75,000 persons of Polish ancestry.

Born in Tuszow, in central Poland, May 20, 1881, Sikorski was conscripted to the Austrian army in 1905. The following year, his training complete, he was listed as a reserve lieutenant.

He emerged from the war as commander of the 3d regiment of the Polish Legion, and was arrested in 1918 because of Polish activities. After the collapse of Austria he became a general in the Polish army which defeated Russia in 1920. When President Narutowicz was assassinated in 1922 he became premier and minister of war.

In 1926 he retired to devote his energies to writing. As World War II neared, Sikorski was one of the few important Poles who opposed friendship with Germany.

One of his greatest problems is arranging friendship with a victorious Russia after the war. Polish armies are now fighting on Russian soil. In all Sikorski commands perhaps 200,000 men.

BOISE

probably by far the best of its type in the world. The ship can deliver, he informs us, more than 100 rounds a minute from its main or 6-inch guns.

In the vessel's stern, below the main deck, is a hangar. The ship has accommodations for eight aircraft, altho normally only four were accommodated in peace times. At the vessel's extreme stern is a revolving crane and on the sides of the stern are two catapults for launching planes, which are brought up from the hangar deck by means of a lift. The revolving crane places the planes on the catapults or lifts them (seaplanes equipped with pontoons) out of the water. The maximum aircraft capacity of the Japanese cruisers of the Mogami class is said to be four each, and each vessel is equipped with two catapults.

The geared turbine engines of the Boise are rated at 100,000 horsepower. They drive the craft at a speed in excess of 32 knots. This horsepower is 10,000 more than that of the Japanese cruisers of the Mogami class, some of which already have been destroyed by American aircraft. The Boise has fuel reservoir capacity for 2,100 tons of oil, which give it a cruising range of 14,500 miles at 15 knots. Specifications of the Boise are the same in most instances as those of its eight sister ships.

The comparatively heavy armor of the Boise and its sister ships means that they can take a lot of punishment and still stay afloat, as was demonstrated when the Boise fought the Japanese. The side armor of the Boise is four inches thick, as compared with two-inch side armor of the ships of the Mogami class. Gunhouse armor of the Boise ranges up to a thickness of five inches. The value of sturdy armor was well demonstrated when the British cruiser Exeter met the German pocket battleship Graf Spee early in the war. The German vessel suffered heavy damage from shells that were lighter than its own simply because its armor was too thin to be effective.

Six hundred feet long on the water line, the Boise, with its squared off stern and its knifelike prow, is in appearance a greatly oversized speed boat. Sleek, fast, and dangerous, it proved to the Japanese on that night of last October that it was not to be trifled with.

Its great hour came while it, with certain other American vessels whose identities have been kept secret, was waiting off the shore of Guadalcanal to intercept and destroy Japanese troop ships bound for the island. When American patrol planes spotted an enemy task force steaming at full speed toward Guadalcanal the Boise churned up to 25 knots and at the head of a line of cruisers, screened by destroyers, bore down on the enemy.

Officers and men line the decks of the Boise as it docks at the Philadelphia navy yard. (Associated Press photo.)

Five Japanese ships were sighted in the distance and then a sixth hove into view. The Americans closed in for the kill.

"Pick out the biggest one and fire!"

This was the order of Capt. Edward J. (Iron Mike) Moran, skipper of the Boise, whose position at the head of the column allowed it full play with its guns, the heavy sixes and the lighter fives. The night was illuminated by the blasts of many guns.

It was only a few seconds until the enemy craft that thus first came under fire burst into flames. It sank within four minutes. The next enemy to come under fire was blown into halves and went down. In another minute the third Japanese vessel exploded and disappeared.

It required four minutes for the Boise to dispose of the fourth hostile vessel in an action in which the American ship was hit by an 8-inch shell and several smaller projectiles. The fifth enemy was set afire and sunk in the next two or three minutes, and not a great while afterward the sixth and remaining Japanese craft blew up under the concentrated fire of the Boise and its companion ships. The Boise almost miraculously escaped Japanese torpedoes.

The entire action lasted only 27 minutes, in which the Boise fired 1,000 rounds from its 6-inch and 5-inch guns and received a number of hits, one from an 8-inch shell nine feet below its water line. Stuffing mattresses into the ship's shell holes to keep it afloat, the crew of the Boise was ready for action two hours after the end of the thrilling fight. Out of a crew of about 860 officers and men, 107 lost their lives. But when the ship got back to the Philadelphia navy yard on Nov. 19 it was carrying 150 not originally on its ship's rolls. These were survivors of the destroyer Duncan, the only United States vessel lost in that memorable action in the Solomons.

Nineteen members of the crew of the Boise were decorated for bravery. Captain Moran, who, by the way, was born in Chicago, has not talked much about the famous battle which has placed his ship high on the country's honor roll.

"We had a job to do and we did it," he has said.

Don Ameche and Janet Blair in "Something to Shout About"

1 With no job in his chosen field of theatrical press agentry, Ken Douglas (Don Ameche) tries his hand at being an inquiring photographer until, that is, Jeanie Maxwell (Janet Blair) decides he is too inquiring and lands him in jail.

2 Inevitably it turns out that Jeanie is hunting a stage job. So Ken takes her to the theatrical boarding house run by Larry Martin (Jack Oakie).

3 Ken tries to induce Producer Willard Sampson (William Gaxton) to give Jeanie a job in his new show, but Sampson is financially embarrassed and has accepted the backing of wealthy Donna Davis (Cobina Wright Jr.) at the price of starring her.

4 All the jobless actors in the boarding house pester Ken for jobs, but only the unconsciously funny landlord gets one. Donna proves to be impossible as an actress, and Larry minces no words in telling her so.

5 Ken cooks up a publicity stunt in which he and Donna are locked up by a country constable, but she identifies herself and gets back just in time to find that Jeanie was about to be substituted for her.

6 The show is a spectacular flop, due chiefly to Donna's complete inability. Sampson goes off on a binge that lands him in a sanitarium.

7 Larry takes advantage of Sampson's absence to [illegible] Donna [illegible] the show. [illegible] but [illegible] back. She takes all scenery, costumes and properties with her.

8 Ken and Larry are in despair until they suddenly realize that with all the talent available in the boarding house they can put on a really good show. But Jeanie, believing Ken loves Donna, has gone home to Altoona, and it takes a lot of fast maneuvering for Ken to get her back in time to save the show.

9 Jeanie sparkles as the new star and the critics and public acclaim the show. Everybody's happy but Sampson, who hears about it over the radio. In his nightgown he eludes the sanitarium guards and rushes to the stage to take a bow. It's such a laugh that he ends up doing it as a regular turn.

Mechanical Miracle Worker

AMONG the magic machines that have made it possible to adapt automobile mass production methods to the making of airplane engines for war is the one shown in the picture at the right. It is the giant engine cylinder head processing machine which is in operation in the Studebaker plant in South Bend, Ind. Employing 154 tools, it performs 213 operations—milling, drilling, boring, countersinking, routing, reaming, and tapping cylinder heads of Wright Cyclone engines that are installed in B-24 bombers and Flying Fortresses.

It was not until the defense emergency arose that machines of this type were found necessary. Up until this time it had not been practical to apply mass production methods to aircraft engine production, due to the fact that there were numerous models and frequent design changes, none of the models being turned out in quantities comparable with those of automobile engines.

Nowadays, however, mass production machines and methods are being applied in the airplane engine plants on as many parts as practical, with it always in mind that there will be engineering and model changes and that such special machines as are adopted must be designed and built so that tool changes can be made without great delays and at a minimum cost.

The colossal machine in the Studebaker plant is the outgrowth of many years of experience on the part of Greenlee Bros. & Co. of Rockford, Ill., in the building of mass production equipment for the automotive industry. When it became obvious that airplane engines would have to be built in great quantities this company proved that mass production methods could be applied to the aero manufacturing field. It built the first automatic cylinder processing machine, called an automatic transfer machine, for the Wright Aeronautical corporation's new plant at Lockland, O.

This first machine, of which the one in the Studebaker plant is a direct development, has been described at length by Horace E. Linsley, of the production engineering department of the Wright corporation, in an illustrated article in the Oct. 9, 1941, number of the Iron Age. Mr. Linsley's article, which is of a technical nature, points out that the machine in the Wright plant does the work of 39 semi-production machines, which would require the services of 105 operators, cutting the cost of the machining of cylinder heads to a mere fraction of what it had been previously.

Altho the machine in the South Bend plant is basically the same as the original machine, it is considerably longer, has many more stations, and performs more operations. Constructed in three sections, it has a combined length of 174 feet, is provided with 59 working stations, and performs 213 operations.

Each of the three sections is made up of a number of machine units, which are connected by a transfer conveyor and controled automatically thru a system of electrical connections and limit switches. Cylinder heads are fed into the machine at one end and come off the conveyor at the other end, with all operations completed automatically. Indicator lights on the master control panel show at once when anything goes wrong any place in the complicated mechanism.

A completed cylinder head comes off the conveyor every 45 seconds, or 80 an hour. It is said that by the old method of processing cylinder heads as many as 300 man hours were required to do the job now done in three-quarters of a minute. Operating three shifts a day, the big machine would have a maximum capacity of 1,920 cylinder heads.

Of the 154 tools of the machine, 49 are in the first section, 97 in the second section, and 8 in the third section. The first section completes 64 operations, the second 123, and the third 26. There are 133 stations in all—59 working stations, 64 idle stations, and 10 inspection stations, the greatest number of working stations in any one section being 37. Every minute that the machine is in operation 1,300 gallons of cutting compound flow thru it.

It is the electrical installations of this machine, in the main, that make its accomplishments so highly automatic and reduce the number of operators required to run it. There are 66 electric motors—21 in the first section, 39 in the second, and 6 in the third. These motors have a total of 277 horsepower. There are more than 25 miles of wire in the machine, 335 switches, 195 indicating lights, 175 push buttons and selectors, and 373 contactors, timers, and relays.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

THE BOSTON terrier went into 1943 as one of America's most popular breeds. On the basis of registrations it was right up near the top of the list. And if a census were taken in American homes to see which dogs are popular as pets the Boston again would achieve high rank, because for years this amusing, intelligent little breed has been well liked by both adults and children who want a handy sized, playful companion dog.

This perennial favorite is a lively breed. It always seems ready for a romp. There is nothing phlegmatic about the typical Boston. He's full of the joy of life, likes to play games, takes an intelligent interest in everything that is happening around the home, and has just about the merriest disposition that any owner could want in his dog. Because he is friendly, eager for play, and fond of children, the Boston has many friends and makes a perfect companion dog. Its size and coat are other factors in its popularity. The short, smooth coat of this happy-go-lucky breed requires little care. And the Boston doesn't take up a lot of room in the house.

Because this breed is so alert, it often turns into a vigilant little watchdog around the home, one that sounds an alarm when the occasion demands it. But the Boston does not develop into a nuisance around the home by assuming the rôle of a nervous, dangerous, biting dog.

The Boston can thank his bulldog ancestry for several splendid traits in his makeup. If you analyze the breed you find that normal, well bred specimens have plenty of persistence and do not lack for courage. The Boston knows how to take care of himself and look after his home when the time comes. These are useful qualities from his bulldog background. Then there are valuable terrier traits in the breed which help to make it so attractive. For example, the Boston has the terrier sparkle, alertness, and love of play. Put these together, add a good disposition, and you have a splendid companion dog.

The correct name of this American breed is Boston terrier. But fanciers of the breed are having a hard time getting the American public to give up other names such as Boston bull, which is quite incorrect; Boston bulldog, Boston bull terrier, and other erroneous names sometimes applied to the breed.

Few if any hound breeds offer such a contrast to the peppy little Boston as the Afghan hound. It's a good example of the variety in the world of dogs. Various parts of the world have produced unusual breeds, and some of them are very old, while others are quite new. Whereas the Boston is a quite modern "made in America" breed, the odd looking Afghan is older than Christianity and was once a dog of royalty in ancient Egypt. A hunting hound, it undoubtedly was of a fixed type as early as 3,000 years before the birth of Christianity.

In a way it's no surprise that that Afghan has such an unusual appearance. We might expect a dog of this type to come from old Egypt and Afghanistan. Pictures of Afghan hounds found on the walls of tombs date back to the days when rulers of Egypt kept packs of them for hunting leopards and coursing gazelles.

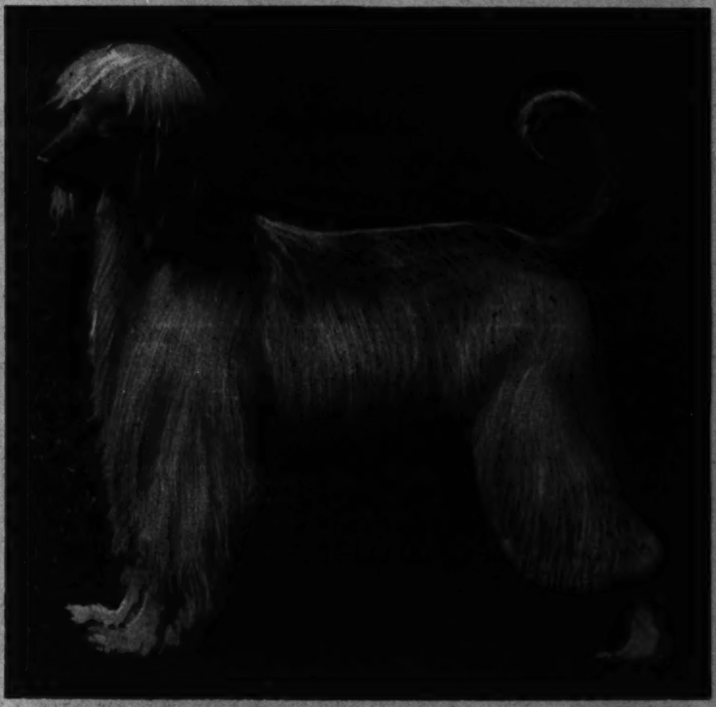
Altho the Egyptian origin of the breed is well founded, it is believed that Afghanistan made the greatest contribution to its development. Bred in mountainous country and living at rather high altitudes in the old days, the Afghan has been changed little. Its coat is thick and silky. Its tail carriage is high. But one of the most unusual features of this old hound is the way its hip bones are placed. They are wider apart and set higher than in most dogs. This makes it possible for the dog to negotiate hilly country with ease and gives him motion like that of a monkey.



One of the oldest breeds of dogs recognized today, the Afghan hound, presents a striking appearance when its coat is groomed for the show ring. The Afghan is one of the few hounds that hunt by sight. This specimen is Champion Shibergam of Dunrobin, owned by Mrs. J. P. Gentry of White Plains, N. Y.

DOG NOTE

Our 6-month-old dog has developed the habit of chasing and killing chickens. What can we do to break him of the habit? Whipping seems to do no good.
—GEORGE R. M., Indianapolis, Ind.

The easiest and most practical thing for you to do is to turn your dog over to a professional trainer for a few weeks and have him break the dog of its killing habits, because few owners are capable of doing the job at home. As a rule the majority of owners cannot or will not take the time and patience to break their dogs. It means many hours of work, constant vigilance, and firm handling. The start of all training methods to handle this problem is getting control of the dog thru obedience training, something that unfortunately few owners give their pets. We are sending you a mimeographed leaflet on this whole subject which contains some tips on what to do at home with a dog that chases chickens.

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

● This is another in a series of biographical sketches of America's historical celebrities appearing every week in the Graphic Section. The illustrations are taken from a famous work, "The National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans," published in 1865.

Millard Fillmore

MILLARD FILLMORE, 13th President of the United States, was born Jan. 7, 1800, in what is now the town of Summerhill in Cayuga county, New York. Provided with only a meager education as a boy, he was apprenticed at the age of 15 to a clothmaker, in whose employ he learned to card wool and to dye and dress fabrics.

Purchasing his release from his employer at the age of 19, he began the study of law, and in 1820 he went to Buffalo, N. Y., where he taught school, assisted the town postmaster, and continued his legal studies. On his admittance to the bar in 1823 he moved to East Aurora, N. Y., to begin the practice of law.

In 1830 Fillmore returned to Buffalo. Here in 1832 he formed a law partnership with Nathan K. Hall, who 20 years later was to serve as postmaster general in Fillmore's cabinet. Solomon G. Haven became a member of this law firm in 1836—a firm that prospered for many years and enjoyed an excellent reputation.

The years from 1829 to 1832 inclusive saw Fillmore a member of the New York state legislature. In 1833 he was elected to the national house of representatives. Serving but one term in congress, he returned to the state legislature in 1837, where he served until 1843.

As a member of congress Fillmore was a stanch but not radical enemy of slavery. He opposed the annexation of Texas as a slave state, advocated the prohibition of the slave trade between the states, and fought for the exclusion of slavery from the District of Columbia.

In 1844 Fillmore was the Whig candidate for governor of New York. He was defeated at the polls, but in 1847 he was elected controler of the state of New York. In 1848 he won the Vice Presidency on the ticket headed by Zachary Taylor.

The death of Taylor on July 9, 1850, put Fillmore in the White House. As President, despite his earlier antagonism to slavery, he favored the compromise measures, and his signing of one of them, the fugitive slave law, was strongly resented by members of his party. At the Whig national convention in the autumn of 1852 Fillmore failed to win the nomination.

In 1856, however, he was nominated for the Presidency by the Know Nothing party, and later this nomination was accepted by the Whigs. In the election he received the electoral votes of only one state, Maryland. This was his final appearance in politics.

He died in Buffalo, March 8, 1874.

WAAC—Six Months Old

By ELEANOR NANGLE

FOUR DAYS ago the women's army auxiliary corps was six months old. On hand July 20, 1942, when Fort Des Moines was opened as the first training center for the first unit of America's first women's army, there were 784 pioneer volunteers, plus their director, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby. They formed the nucleus of the tradition-shattering army to serve with the army.

On hand also were some 1,200 carefully selected men of the army of the United States. Headed by Col. (now Brig. Gen.) Don C. Faith, their job was to instruct and assist, to help develop the corps into an auxiliary army that would expand, serve its important purpose, and eventually be self-sustaining.

On the side lines were Mr. and Mrs. Citizen, who viewed the proceedings with mixed emotions. There were cheers and some jeers, and considerable bafflement as to why the taxpayers' money should be spent on this supplementary military program.

There were probably mixed emotions among all concerned. The 440 WAAC officer candidates and 344 auxiliaries had joined for reasons preëminently patriotic. Among them then, as among the thousands of their successors, were many wives, fiancées, sisters, mothers, and widows of service men. All knew why they were there, but they couldn't know exactly how or where they were going.

Even the army men, their mentors, will confess now to some uncertainty that day. No one knew better than they the need for an auxiliary to serve with their army. They knew that the equivalent of one entire field army, maybe two, could be released for combat duty if enough women could be trained in army procedure to take over even part of the gigantic network of noncombat jobs involved in marshaling, supplying, and operating our army. But there was no precedent to go by, and there were unspoken fears that the fact that it had to be feminine (altho that was the very factor that promised to give it special aptitude for some of its proposed tasks) might provide the greatest stumbling block to its success.

Well, six months have passed. In that time the doubts of those most directly concerned with the formation and function of the WAAC have vanished.

The WAAC is expanding, as it must, since the need is great. Fort Des Moines now accommodates about 8,000 and will shortly be enlarged. A second training center has been opened at Daytona Beach, Fla., commanded by Brigadier General Faith, who guided the beginnings of the first one. There will be others in all probability, since the number of WAACs needed to relieve men for combat duty is now estimated at 150.000.

Two questions are inevitably asked about the WAAC: Why must its members don uniforms, drill, and join an organization to work with the army? And what work precisely do WAACs do?

The answer to the first is that the unit of the WAAC when it assumes its duties at an army post, camp, or station, either at home or abroad, must effect its transition into active service smoothly, quickly, and efficiently. Its members must be uniformly and serviceably clothed. Its clerical workers must be thoroly familiar with army forms and regulations, which are numerous and standard. It is not enough for its cooks to be merely good cooks. They must know the highly involved operation of army mess. Those who serve in motor transport must know the meticulous army routine that governs driving, dispatching, convoying, or serving as military messenger.

It would be fatally inefficient for our army merely to hire willing workers, to drop them down to serve in army posts anywhere. They would be lost in the complexities of what is necessarily rigid military routine and maladjusted to the equally necessary military discipline. Because they are thoroly trained in the first and have lived by and will continue to be governed by the second, the WAACs assume their duties and fulfill them with no waste motion.

What do WAACs do?

They are secretaries, accountants, typists, cashiers, bookkeepers, file clerks, telephone and telegraph operators, supply and record clerks. What is described as paper work, a monumental mill of army endeavor that chains thousands upon thousands of men to desks, will undoubtedly shape up as the largest field of WAAC endeavor. The volume of it is colossal, and the women are proving better and faster at it than men.

WAACs are bakers and cooks, and here again are proving themselves superlatively good. Thousands of women have been trained in the subschool for bakers and cooks at Fort Des Moines, where the women attached to this branch take an eight-week course that covers army mess, management, supplies, kitchen and field cookery, meat cutting, mess sanitation. The WAAC bakers and cooks, operating on the same money rations and with the same supplies as the male army cooks, have been so sensationally successful that army mess officers grow lyrical about their special knack in this vital service.

WAACs do motor transport work. At Fort Des Moines those in this branch drive ton-and-a-half supply trucks, jeeps, and passenger cars. They are trained in motor mechanics and convoying, assume complete responsibility for the vehicles they drive, and will serve—in many cases are already serving—as military messengers, chauffeurs, and dispatchers.

And WAACs do many other tasks that release men. They are pharmacists, dental assistants, bacteriologists, laboratory technicians, photographers, lawyers, recorders.

Fort Des Moines in six months has become almost entirely WAAC-sustained. With corps members taking over more and more duties of camp operation, the number of army men has dwindled from the original 1,200 to a few hundred. Only a handful of army instructors remain, and each of these has a WAAC understudy who will eventually replace him.

The WAAC recruit—and since Nov. 2 all women enter as auxiliaries or privates and all officers come up from the ranks—is met in Des Moines and driven to the fort by a WAAC of the motor transport division. She is processed by WAACs, assigned to a company commanded by a WAAC. A WAAC issues her clothing. Her excellent food, which, if she is a typical WAAC, she will eat with greater appetite and in greater abundance than she ever did before in her life, is planned, prepared, and cooked by WAACs of the bakers and cooks division. She is instructed in large measure by WAACs. Her records are kept by WAACs trained in the administrative divisions. A WAAC bugler will rouse her each morning and sound taps for her each night.

The WAAC has no more emphatic boosters than the army men who have watched its development.

"I came here with regret and some prejudice," one army instructor said, "and now I feel privileged to be watching the way this army is working and the spirit that's making it work. These women are wonderful. They're competent and willing, and they never whimper. As 'soldiers' they differ in just two respects from the finest army men I ever saw: They do more laundering and a hell of a lot less gold-bricking."

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By
ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.
Managing Editor, Popular Photography Magazine

DOUBLE or multiple exposures usually spoil the picture, yet there are interesting and valuable photographs which can be made only with the aid of deliberately exposing the same piece of film several times. In some cases such multiple exposures enable you to photograph side by side a variety of subjects, creating a montage, while in others the effect is just the opposite; you can eliminate certain subjects from a scene with the aid of multiple exposures.

It sounds odd and hardly plausible that you should be able to cut out certain subjects from your pictures by exposing your film several times, yet this is an often-employed technique. Its main use is to photograph such things as a street scene or a show window without disturbing traffic. It may be impossible to interrupt traffic or to stop people from passing a show window just so you can get a good photograph.

This type of multiple exposure is based on the fact that it makes no difference to the film whether you give it one strong exposure or several weak ones. The photographic effect will be the same, provided that the total amount of light reaching the film is identical.

Therefore you simply set up you camera on a solid support, focus on the scene you want to photograph, and determine the amount of exposure required. Then you split up this exposure into the largest possible number of short exposures. Assuming that you are photographing a street scene, the repeated short exposures will build up on your film the image of the scene, but individually each of these exposures will be too short to record any image of passing vehicles or pedestrians. Thus if you photographed your scene with 1/25 sec. at $f$:11 you would record not only the scene but all the unwanted extraneous detail. But if you substituted 20 exposures of 1/500 sec. for the single exposure of 1/25 sec. you would get a picture of just the stationary part of the scene.

The second type of multiple exposure is used to make a montage, a composite of several pictures which together tell a story. You can combine two or more pictures of your favorite sport, of your vacation trip, of a baby's daily routine, etc., on a single negative, by exposing only sections of the negative at a time.

This is how it's done: First you must decide how many different subjects you want to photograph for your montage and where you wish to place them. Prepare a layout, marking with lines the borders of the picture area. Then draw this same layout with a grease pencil on the ground glass of your camera.

The next step is to set up the camera on a tripod and to place a sheet of black paper about six inches in front of your lens. Then decide which picture you want to take first and tear a small hole in the black paper corresponding in shape to the shape of the picture on your layout. By changing the size of the hole and by moving the black paper back and forth before the lens you can arrange it so that the image of your subject will fall on the desired spot on the ground glass, while the rest of the ground glass remains dark. Make your exposure and then repeat this process for all the other subjects you want to include.

When you prepare the layout, and later when you shoot the pictures, be sure to place the greatest amount of emphasis on the most important picture of the group. This is done partly by giving it a dominant position in the montage and partly with the aid of exposure. You can make the key picture stand out either by making it lighter or darker than the others.

In some montages a single overall picture is used as a background or as a key picture. If you want it to stand out, shoot it first, then photograph the other subjects of the montage. If you want to subdue it, snap it last.

Montages of this type can be made only with cameras which are equipped with a ground glass focusing screen. You cannot expect to place several exposures in their proper spots without observing every step on the ground glass.

By making a series of exposures instead of a single shot you can eliminate unwanted detail from a street scene. The picture with the figures was made with 1/25 sec. at f:8, while the other is the result of 25 separate exposures, each at 1/75 sec. with lens stopped down to f:32.

Multiple exposures on the same sheet of film are the most effective method of making photomontages. Other methods are printing several negatives simultaneously by placing them on top of each other, or combining several pictures by printing them successively on the same sheet of paper.

PRIVATE FAY ON PARADE!

(William C. Fay, on leave from the Tribune sports department, writes of his army experiences in this weekly feature.)

THIS IS A SORT of an anniversary. Approximately seven months ago tonight I had dinner with Jinx Falkenburg in Chicago. Jinx was playing tennis with Bobby Riggs at the Town and Tennis club, and I went along to write about the performance of the reclaimed rubber tennis balls they used.

It was my first contact with a real, live movie starlet, which explains how such extraneous items as brown hair and blue eyes got into a story that should have related whether the ersatz tennis balls bounced high enough for tournament competition.

Smorgasbord with Jinx seemed an excellent idea around dinner time, but, as I remember, nobody thought it a valid alibi for reporting to work an hour late.

I recall that happy occasion tonight because Private Hayes has just flipped on his portable radio and Jinx is singing from Hollywood. What a difference seven months can make! We had sauerkraut for supper tonight, and I sat across table from Sergeant Kraskowski. From smorgasbord to sauerkraut. From Falkenburg to Kraskowski. Ah, Sherman, how right you were!

Despite the international situation, mother continues to maintain firm control over this son. Already she has made one inspection visit, and no commanding general ever took more thoro inventory of a soldier. We had been in our Nashville hotel 10 minutes when my division insigne was ripped off. It would have been futile to protest the insigne represented 35 minutes of invaluable stitching time and was, I thought, an extremely neat job except for the lumpy corner where the thread broke. From somewhere mother produced needle and thread. In two minutes the insigne was resewn securely to my left sleeve—no lumps.

When bedtime arrived mother decided I should sleep under two blankets. And the windows would be open six inches. No more. No less. I protested. I'd been sleeping in tents. I'd stifle under two blankets. I won that round, temporarily. Mother retired to her room, leaving the dire prophecy I would wake with a cold on Sunday morning.

Instead of waking with a cold I awoke under two blankets. The windows were open six inches. No more. No less. On the way to church I remarked about the exceptional room service. Blankets unrolled and tucked themselves in and around shoulders. Windows lowered and raised automatically. "Or maybe," I suggested, "you were up to your old tricks."

"Somebody has to take care of you," mother said. That was that.

OVERWEIGHT? Don't Wait!

Two good exercises that will be useful in controlling weight are illustrated here. Above: Stand erect, feet slightly apart, arms at sides. Raise arms sideward, raise heels, then slowly bend knees. Return to first position and repeat. At right: Lie on back, hooking feet under furniture if necessary, arms extended above head. Sit up and bring arms forward and down until fingers touch toes. Keep knees straight. Return to first position and repeat.

(Posed by Hildegarde.)

There is an inner glory consequent upon a healthier body, a happier spirit.

THE IMPORTANCE of normal weight is of more momentous concern than the mere surface matter of silhouette beauty. It is the seat of health, vitality, energy, fitness, and efficiency, all of which total youthful agility of both mind and body. None of us deliberately wants to grow slothful, to be unable to cope with our appointed duties with youthful vim and verve. We don't want to look older than we are nor dowdier than we need be.

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

In fact, we don't want to look dowdy at all. But such are the penalties of the flesh-burdened. Unless we face the fact that we are what we eat we are fated to rejection in circles of usefulness and physical attractiveness.

The Lenten season is growing near, ideal period in which to recover the inner glory of a reducing deed well done and its outer silhouette manifestations. Yes, there is an inner glory consequent upon a healthier body, a happier spirit, and a promised longer life span.

We offer no magic diet or diets. Instead we say, beware of them! They belonged in that now historical pre-1929 era of fanaticism in which the impossible was expected in every department of living.

We recommend to the greatly overweight a medical examination and doctor's approval of a reducing regimen. And there is the chance, too, that the condition may be of glandular origin. But for the average woman in good health, whose weight may have shot up 10, 20, even 30 extra pounds, due to her love of the table and to faulty diet, the following suggestions may be adopted with promised benefit of figure:

First we would call attention to a few facts the plump one should know and which will help her on her way to a slim victory.

Set your rejuvenated figure goal at your average weight, not at your favorite movie star's reported weight and measurements. Your average weight is the weight at which you feel best and look best.

We suggest the use of the tape measure along with the bathroom scales as your weight loss recorder. There's something extraordinarily stimulating to further effort when a two-inch loss of bust, waist, and hips appears on the record.

Dieters who go on completely starchless, sugarless, fatless diets come a cropper. Some starch, sugar, fat is required by even the fattest dieters. Otherwise sickness is the reward of your misguided effort. Essential food factors cannot be ignored.

A simple trick to fortify will power at the dinner table is to begin the meal with a tasty salad made of the light vegetables, as tomatoes, lettuce, romaine, endive, carrots, celery, radishes, asparagus, cabbage, scallions, artichokes, and so on. Their bulk appeases the appetite at the beginning of the meal so that the main part of the meal is approached with less avidity. You can follow the salad with a soup of meat or vegetable broth, which further fortifies you against overindulgence later in the meal. Have your meat, of course, but with vegetables.

Let the meat course be of beef, veal, sweetbreads, liver, lamb chops, chicken, turkey, or squab; or among sea foods, cod, scrod, trout, halibut, mackerel, bluefish, flounder, sole, shrimp, crab, oyster, clam, and lobster.

Do not eat pork, the fat cuts of beef or lamb, duck, goose, salmon, sturgeon, or whitefish.

Don't abandon potatoes entirely. The skin of the baked potato is rich in mineral elements and vitamins.

You can live without sweets and pastries. They are fattening and have little mineral or vitamin values.

Don't wash any food down with gulps of water. Chew food so that it will be digested properly.

Excessive use of salt, condiments, and spices stimulates the appetite; therefore they may be avoided.

Fresh or stewed fruits are the reducer's best dessert bet.

Give up liquor entirely for the reducing duration. Alcohol stimulates the appetite, and some cocktails contain as many as 400 calories.

Milk, rich in minerals and vitamins, should be included in a reducing diet. In modern canning processes vitamin contents are largely preserved.

Do a couple of good exercises a day for 10 minutes at least.

"Sweethearts," a Failure That Succeeded

"Sweethearts" will be presented Saturday, Jan. 30, from 8 to 9 p. m. (C. W. T.) on the Chicago Theater of the Air on W-G-N and the Mutual network, starring Marion Claire.

IN THE LIGHT of its later popularity it is difficult to understand how Victor Herbert was able to predict a failure for his operetta "Sweethearts." Yet when the composer died in 1924 he left in his will a list of those works he considered unsuccessful, and "Sweethearts" was among them.

Herbert named only a few of his works in his list of failures, and many of the works he failed to mention have since been forgotten, but time has reversed Herbert's judgment as concerns "Sweethearts," for the operetta has seen many professional revivals, and for two decades it has been the delight of high school and amateur light opera societies. The score of "Sweethearts," if not the story, was used for the successful motion picture of the same name starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

For the last two seasons the operetta has been selected for the Chicago Theater of the Air series on W-G-N and the Mutual network, as many of the hundreds of thousands of listeners to the program have named it their favorite operetta.

It was for Christie McDonald, one of the leading stars of the American musical stage in the early part of the century, that "Sweethearts" was written. Miss McDonald was born in Picon, N. S., in 1875. When she was 17 she made her stage debut as a member of Pauline Hall's company in Philadelphia in "Puritania." Her charm rather than her ability gained her a chance to switch to the Francis Wilson troupe, and there she learned how to act as well as smile, and soon she was the star of "Erminie" and "The Devil's Deputy." She won her first real success as Minutezza in Sousa's "The Bride-Elect."

After two seasons in this part she was ready for stardom, and she was kept busy with numerous rôles in almost every important Broadway musical comedy. After her success as the Princess Bozena in Heinrich Reinhardt's "The Spring Maid" Herbert decided to write an operetta for her. With three of his most faithful librettists, Harry B. and Robert B. Smith and Fred De Gresac, he composed the operetta "Sweethearts." It opened in March, 1913, in Baltimore and toured the eastern cities before venturing into New York and the historic New Amsterdam theater on Dec. 8. Assisting Miss McDonald, who played Sylvia, were Thomas Conkey, Tom McNaughton, and Lionel Walsh.

Why the operetta was not successful at the time is a matter for interesting speculation. The critics were kind, but the audience was bored.

SNAPPY!

YOU know we're building the biggest army in our history. You know that candy is a fine food for soldiers. Now listen:

"I want millions of special Dextrose energy tablets . . . millions of candy fruit drops. I want you to package tons of biscuits, bouillon powder, dehydrated mincemeat, prune and apricot powders. I need them . . . so . . . Make it snappy . . ."

This, in effect, is what an aroused War Department told Curtiss Candy Company. We rolled up our sleeves and went to work, just as every other great American company did.

For months our great food plants have been producing and packaging large quantities of food of various kinds. We are operating 24 hours a day.

This service we consider a duty. We are grateful for the opportunity of serving our country in this greatest of all emergencies.

With the Army, the Navy and War Production Plants all calling for Curtiss Products, there may be times when your dealer won't have a complete assortment of Curtiss Candy Bars. But such shortages are only temporary.

If you don't find Baby Ruth or Butterfinger on the candy counter one day—look again the next. We are filling domestic orders as rapidly as our production facilities permit. Every American will agree with us that Uncle Sam comes first!

Here is the Baby Ruth your dealer didn't have yesterday. *Occasionally some dealers may temporarily be out of Baby Ruth or Butterfinger. Dear Art:
A Zero got the bus that last go-round. I unloaded and heavy-dogged it to this whistle stop. I'm okay — but there's a neat treat here with a fire engine wig, five feet five and alive as a hive. She's fair and no square — but some ick riddled her like the back-bar of a cowtown saloon on Saturday night.
The loke yokes are chewing off a mountain. You could make it with a two engine job. Come up and see how the other half barely keeps alive.

DO YOU THINK I AM A FOOL, YOU YANKEE SWINE? THAT LETTER IS SO OBVIOUSLY A CODE — EVEN THESE NATIVES WHO SPEAK NO ENGLISH COULD PROBABLY DECIPHER IT!
THESE VILLAGERS ARE SO CONVINCED I AM A CHINESE PILOT THEY WOULD SHOOT YOU DOWN IF I ORDERED IT!
... BUT I AM NOT READY FOR THAT PLEASANT TASK ... FIRST YOU WILL SIT DOWN AND WRITE A BRIEF NOTE IN LONGHAND ... WITH NO TIME FOR CLEVER TRICKS!
DO YOU THINK I DID NOT KNOW YOU SAT FAR INTO THE NIGHT WORKING OUT THAT CODE? STATE THE FACTS, AND NO YANKEE WORD JUGGLING!
I GUESS YOU'VE GOT ME, JOE JITSU! HERE YOU ARE!
I am down in a town the messenger can show you on the map. You can reach it by air transport in a few hours. Ceiling is fairly even all day. Come in on landing area the local coolies are leveling. Badly hurt white girl with me — she's a mighty pretty chick! Hurry!

SPAM's MY HUNCH!
SPAM
HORMEL GOOD FOODS

SPAM BAKED

Here's another time saver: pop a clove studded Spam or two into the oven, baste with the succulent sauce described on the can label, serve with the season's vegetables—only 20 minutes for a smash hit Victory dinner!

SPAM 'N' EGGS

Lightly saute thick slices of Spam in butter or cooking fat, serve piping hot with fried eggs—a breakfast team that puts morning appetites into high gear! Spam goes great with scrambled eggs, too. Or pancakes. Or waffles.

SPAMWICH IDEA

For luncheon, bridge, supper, snacks, serve "open" as shown—sliced Spam and loaf cheese, chips, raw vegetables such as long sliced carrots, scallions, celery, radishes. For lunch box, wrap Spamwich in waxed paper, vegetables in damp cloth. In taste and nutrition, a hit!

SAVE IT! No more keys for the duration. Or use can opener.

BY WM. DONAHEY

THE Rhyming Rabbit had been bothered with rheumatism for some time. The Teenie Weenie Doctor often visited the old fellow, and the Teenie Weenies carried food to him almost every day.

It was quite hard to find enough food for the rabbit because his rheumatism hadn't hurt his appetite one single bit. The Teenie Weenies couldn't let their old neighbor starve, and they usually watched for food which big people throw away. Once the Cowboy found eight carrots that had been thrown out. They were frozen solid, but the little people cut them up into slices with their Teenie Weenie crosscut saw, thawed them out and carried them to the rabbit. When the rabbit was too lame to get any food for himself, the task of finding enough for him to eat kept some of the little men busy most of the time.

One afternoon six of the Teenie Weenies found a lot of apple parings back of a big house. The Rhyming Rabbit was very fond of apple, so the little men began dragging off the long parings. It was a bitter cold day and soon some of the little men began to complain of being cold.

"Let's go into that house and get warm," suggested the Dunce, pointing to the house.

The rest of the Teenie Weenies thought the suggestion a good one. They climbed the steps to the back entrance, where they squeezed through the crack under the door. It was warm in the house and, as no one was home, the little men wandered about the place at will. Finally they went into the dining room.

"I smell something good," said the Dunce. "It's on top of the table. Let's climb up and see what's there."

"Yo' all had bettah keep off dat table," warned Gogo, the colored Teenie Weenie.

"Ah, shucks!" said the Dunce. "We can climb up and look at what's on the table without meddling, can't we?"

"Yas, Ah suppose some can," answered Gogo, doubtfully, "but lookin' is de first step toward meddlin'."

"Well, I'm going up," the Dunce announced. When he began making his way up to the top of the table, the other four Teenie Weenies quickly followed, and in a short time they all managed to reach the top. There were a number of dishes on the table, including a big soup plate. The Dunce scrambled up a salt shaker and peered into the plate.

"There's soup in the plate," he reported, as he climbed over onto the plate. "Say," he continued, "the edge of this plate would make a dandy race track. Let's have a race."

The Chinaman and the Sailor quickly climbed onto the plate and started running around the edge of the plate after the speeding Dunce. The handle of a soup spoon lay over the course, and the Teenie Weenies thought it a lot of fun to hurdle over the spoon. Once the Chinaman nearly lost his balance when he jumped over the spoon handle, and a moment later the Sailor stubbed his toe on the handle and went headfirst into the soup. He wasn't hurt, but he was covered with thick, greasy soup.

There was nothing to do but hurry home and change clothes as quickly as possible. Although the Sailor ran as fast as he could, the soup was frozen stiff by the time he reached the shoe house. The Cook put a thimble of water on the kitchen stove to heat, and the Sailor stripped to his Teenie Weenie skin and scrubbed himself clean. Then he put his soiled sailor suit to soak in another thimble, and after supper that night he washed out his suit and hung it in front of the stove to dry.

The Teenie Weenies teased the Sailor a great deal over his soup bath, and the Dunce made up a little verse which ran like this:

"I'd rather be
An ant or flea
Or a chicken in a coop,
Than a mighty tailor,
Judge or sailor
In a plate of soup."

Easy Way To Get Lots More Shaves With Gillette Blades
FOR UTMOST LUXURY AND COMFORT, USE GILLETTE SHAVING CREAM .... LATHER OR BRUSHLESS
Gillette

GILLETTE BLADES are built to last much longer and give far more shaving comfort than ordinary blades. That's why you can "stretch" a Gillette Blade out for many extra shaves!

1. WASH FACE THOROUGHLY WITH HOT WATER AND SOAP TO SOFTEN BEARD AND ELIMINATE ACCUMULATED GRIT THAT DULLS SHAVING EDGES

2. APPLY LATHER OR BRUSHLESS SHAVING CREAM WHILE FACE IS WET. IF LATHER IS USED, DIP YOUR BRUSH IN WATER FREQUENTLY

3. TWO EDGES DOUBLE BLADE LIFE. MARKS INDICATED ABOVE IDENTIFY EDGES, ENABLING YOU TO GIVE BOTH EQUAL USE AND GET EXTRA SHAVES

4. CLEAN BLADE IN RAZOR BY LOOSENING HANDLE, THEN RINSING IN HOT WATER AND DRYING. WIPING THE BLADE IS LIKELY TO DAMAGE THE EDGE

Gillette Lather Cream holds abundant moisture, softens beard quickly. Speeds shaving. Large-size tube . . . . 25c

Gillette Brushless made with peanut oil, stays moist on face, can't clog razor or drain. Giant size 39c, large size 25c.

56 ENTER CITY COUNCIL RACE ON SOUTH SIDE

9 Seek Nomination in Seventh Ward.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Fifty-six persons filed their nominating petitions with the board of election commissioners before the deadline last Tuesday for the 13 South side aldermanic seats to be filled by the voters in the elections Feb. 23 or the runoffs April 6. ## COLORED WOMAN BAILIFF IS FIRST IN CHICAGO COURT

Sees Less Vice, Liquor in Delinquencies.

Helen Gertrude Russell, Chicago's first colored woman bailiff of the Municipal court, meets all races, creeds, and colors in her new post at the Women's court, 1121 South State street. So far as she can determine, she is the country's only woman bailiff of her race. She was deputized late last year.

Miss Russell daily accompanies the women and girls in her charge from the 13th floor down to the 9th floor in the court building elevator. On this short ride she tries to get them to tell their stories. From this she finds there is less vice and drinking than the records of a year ago indicate. However, more cases now involve delinquent girls who are "uniform crazy."

No Excuse for Inaction.

"If there ever was an excuse for inactivity before, it has disappeared today," Miss Russell said in recounting her 17 years as a social worker on the south side. "Girls who are not yet working should spend their free hours away from school or home as volunteer workers in the U. S. O., Y. M. C. A., Women's Defense Corps of America, or American Women's Voluntary service.

"War workers include both volunteers in organized service groups as well as those at work in war industry," Miss Russell pointed out. "Most of the volunteer work is fun, rather than monotonous. It gives girls a feeling they are contributing to their country at war."

Prior to being deputized by Chief Bailiff Albert Horan, Miss Russell was employed by the board of health, where she was chief clerk of Chicago baby records. For seven years she was president of a children's welfare club in the 5th ward, as well as a Girl Scout troop committee member.

Attended Radcliffe College.

A graduate of the English High school at Cambridge, Mass., she attended Radcliffe college for two years, majoring in social services.

Miss Russell is devoting her own time to the Robert S. Abbott chapter of the Women's Defense Corps of America, of which she is adjutant. The chapter is aiding a company of soldiers at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin.

She lives with a sister at 6131 Michigan avenue.

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

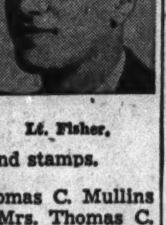
Lt. Jack L. Fisher Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Fisher of 1101 Hyde Park boulevard, is in North Africa as a transport pilot. He writes his parents that "the American soldier can take it, and if he can't find what he wants to make himself comfortable, he does without and with a smile." He also urged the purchase of war bonds and stamps.



Lt. Fisher.

Aviation Cadet Thomas C. Mullins Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Mullins, 6735 Constance avenue, has temporarily been appointed aviation cadet first captain at the army air force's primary flying school, Sikeston, Mo.

Two south side residents recently were promoted to majors at Boca Raton field, Florida. Norman J. McGowan, son of J. A. McGowan of 1513 East 69th street, graduated from West Point Military academy in 1939. George N. Keyser, son of Mrs. C. B. Hohmann, 6533 Kimbark avenue, the other officer promoted, graduated from the University of Chicago in 1930.

Four promotions of south siders were announced recently at Selfridge field, Michigan. Joshua H. Meachum, 437 East 44th street, and Simon E. Moore, 707 East 46th street, were raised to the grade of corporal; Walter R. Brown, 5701 Calumet avenue, was promoted to private, first class, and Stewart Young, 3646 Rhodes avenue, has been advanced to the rank of sergeant.

7 Highs Give Diplomas This Week to 1,200

More than 1,200 boys and girls—seniors at seven south side high schools—will be awarded diplomas at graduation exercises at their respective schools this week.

Matured beyond their years by a world at war, many of the young men graduates soon will enter one of the three branches of military service. Others will take over man sized jobs in industry, while another group will continue their education, beginning college work within a few weeks.

Some of the graduates-to-be have already enlisted for military service. An example is eight seniors at Tilden Technical High school who recently enlisted. They are John Knize, Eugene Konecki, Donald Stanko, and Christ Karras, army air corps; Newell Peterson, naval air corps; Guy Sweetland, navy; Jerry Thompson, marines, and Charles Vogt, coast guard.

Girls Seek Factory Jobs.

The machine shop rather than the stenographer's desk will be the future of a large number of the young women graduates. Others will continue liberal educations, many planning to enter college immediately.

Most of the graduation exercises will be held Thursday. Approximate number of graduates at the various schools follow: Tilden, 152; Hirsch, 120; South Shore, 102; Hyde Park, 284; Du Sable, 255; Phillips, 225, and Bowen, 150. Posting of the colors by school R. O. T. C. units will give a military air to a few of the ceremonies. The programs are largely made up from contributions by members of the class.

Student Discussion at Bowen.

The ceremony at Bowen High school, which will be at 8 o'clock Thursday in the school auditorium, will feature a panel discussion of "Victory Thru Peace." Participants include: Sophie Kosanovich, Irene Brodine, Frank Ross, Mae Belle Lehnhoff, Adolph Spirkaucis, and Helen Andrich. William P. Hearne, principal, will speak and present diplomas.

James B. Cashin of the civil service commission will speak at the Phillips High school exercises at 8 o'clock Thursday. Diplomas will be awarded by Mrs. Maudelle B. Bousfield, principal. The valedictory will be given by Sterling Jones, class president, and the salutory by Ruth Bridgeford. The Phillips band, conducted by James Vansburger, will play.

Four short talks will be made at the Du Sable ceremony at 8 o'clock Friday by Cleo Baker, class president; Homer Phillips, Beatrice Montgomery, and Frank Titus. Chauncey C. Willard, who plans to retire from the principalship of the school, will also speak.

Hutchins to Speak.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, will speak on "The Outlook of the High School Graduate" at the exercises at Hyde Park High school at 8 o'clock Thursday. Marches by the high school orchestra will open the program. William Chase, class president, will speak. Diplomas will be presented by Joseph F. Gonnelly, president.

Part of the program at South Shore High school at 8 o'clock Thursday will be a group discussion of "We Pledge Allegiance" by Ross Beynon, John Demetry, Shirley Ernst, Elaine May Kaplan, Elliot Schrier, and Joan Speck. Judge George L. Quilici will speak. Mrs. Marie Voy Brewster, principal of the school, will present the diplomas. Greetings will be extended by Robert Finnegan, class president.

Seniors to Be Heard.

Following the president's greeting, given by Edwin Carson, and a piano solo by Arline Brownell, there will be a discussion of "Schools and Education in a Warring World" at the graduation ceremony of Hirsch High school at 8 o'clock Thursday. Participants in the discussion are: William Graf, chairman; Preston Bransky, Constance Wolf, Fred De Graw, Janet Miller, and Celeste Saperston. Diplomas will be presented by Marie A. McCahey, principal.

Howard Foster, president of the senior class at Tilden Technical High school, will give the address of welcome at the graduation exercises at his school at 8 o'clock Thursday. Other speakers will include Charles Hubler, Eugene Konecki, and Robert Knapp. Diplomas and awards will be presented by Frederick E. Price, principal.

VIEWED AS WAR PHASE; PICKED BY CLASS VOTE

Athletic, Studious; Like the Navy.

Boys were given all posts as outstanding seniors at south side high schools—possibly an influence of war. In the past these honors, conferred by a vote of the seniors, have been almost equally divided between boys and girls.

Outstanding seniors are elected at each high school from a group which has been nominated by faculty members. Pictures and interviews of a senior from each graduating class are published in the metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE.

Faces Military Service.

This year's "average" outstanding senior on the south side is faced with military service. Just 18 years old, he is athletic and studious and leans toward service in the navy. He is 5 feet, 8½ inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. Technical subjects are most popular with him.

Short biographies of south side outstanding seniors follow:

Howard Foster, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ora Lee Foster of 2437 West 35th street, was selected the outstanding senior at Tilden Technical High school by his classmates. Honors which have been accorded him at Tilden include the presidency of the senior class, membership in the national honor society, and choice as speaker at the achievement dinner. Hoping to follow in the footsteps of his brothers, Ora Jee Jr., and Elmer, he plans soon to enlist in the navy air corps. With an ambition to become a draftsman after the war has ended, he plans to study mathematics and drafting at Illinois Institute of Technology.

Plans to Enter N. U.

Aiming at a career of aeronautical engineering, which probably will be interrupted with a stay in the navy air corps, William Chase Jr., 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Chase of 5419 Harper avenue, named outstanding senior at Hyde Park High school, plans to enter Northwestern university in a few weeks. Athletic and studious, he has been a member of the swimming team for three years and a member of the school honor society for four years. He also served as president of his class.

Ross Beynon, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Beynon of 7658 Coles avenue, was selected to represent South Shore High school. Captain of the fencing team, he placed 3d in state foils competition and was a member of the track team. Ross also was a member of the student service league and prom chairman. Planning to enter Illinois Institute of Technology next month for a career in mechanical engineering, Ross says his studies probably will be interrupted by military service.

Aviation Is Hobby.

President of his class, valedictorian, editor in chief of the school newspaper are the principal honors of Sterling Jones Jr., 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Jones of 5310 South Park way, picked at Phillips High school. He plans a career of teaching and probably will begin undergraduate studies at Wilson junior college with later work at the University of Chicago or Chicago Teachers college. Aviation is his hobby and for several years he has been compiling a scrapbook of the advances in flying.

Planning studies toward a career of law before he enters military service, Cleo Baker Jr., 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Baker of 449 East 62d street, named outstanding senior at Du Sable High school, hopes to enter Wilson junior college. Later he expects to enter Howard university and will practice on the south side when he graduates. Cleo was named president of his class and was a member of the student council, student forum, and the football team.

Ambitious in Physics.

Ralph Louis Mollo, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mollo of 2905 East 91st street, was named the outstanding senior at Bowen High school. A member of the wrestling and football teams, the junior and senior honor clubs, and the boys' athletic association, he plans to enter some branch of the military soon. He prefers the navy. Following the war, Ralph plans to attend college with the aim of becoming a psyicist. Sports is his hobby. He also has received the American Legion award for good citizenship.

Seniors at Hirsch High school named Edwin Carson, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Edwin Carson of 8159 Champlain avenue, their outstanding classmate. President of his class both junior and senior years and a member of the basketball and baseball teams, Edwin plans to attend Augustana college but believes he may be drafted before the end of his college career. His hobby is the practice of amateur magic.

Congregationalists Install Rev. Charles Rush Today

The Rev. Charles F. Rush, newly named pastor of Lincoln Memorial Congregational church, 65th street and Champlain avenue, will be installed at a service at 8 o'clock today. The Rev. Harold M. Kingsley, pastor, and the choir of the Good Shepherd Congregational church will conduct the installation. The Rev. Mr. Rush comes to Lincoln church from Charlotte, N. C.

LEADING SENIORS IN FOUR SCHOOLS VOICE AMBITIONS

Influence of War Shown in Student Plans.

Three boys and one girl were represented in the Tribune interviews of outstanding graduating seniors from the city's four general schools which draw pupils from all over Chicago. The schools are Washburne Trade, Spalding, Jones Commercial, and Flower Technical.

Clarence Markus, outstanding senior of Washburne Trade school, goes to work the day after graduation in a war plant. He will practice the trade he learned in school—tool and die making.

Hopes to Be War Pilot.

"I hope this practical experience plus what I learned in school will help me become an army pilot," he said seriously. "I register next month, and I've been thinking about the job I'd like best in the army. Being a pilot, I think, would suit me fine. And knowing tools should help me understand the insides of a plane." Clarence lives at 5157 Strong street.

Charles McCarthy of Spalding School for Crippled Children hopes to attend De Paul university and study mathematics for teaching. During the summer he worked in a defense plant, inspecting metal goods after they had been sandblasted.

Charles lives with his uncle, Martin J. Sweeney, 5719 South Green street, and comes to school every morning in the Spalding bus. He is class president as well as head of the civic, social, and cultural club. He also is interested in dramatics, particularly comedies.

Parents in Gary.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McCarthy, live in Gary, where Charles attended St. Luke's Parochial school for a while. A leg injury suffered when he was 2 years old has made it necessary for him to spend much of his time in hospitals and summer camps for crippled children.

A war time graduate who hopes to help in the rebuilding of axis seized Greece, when peace time comes again, is John Gravenitis of 3227 South Lituanica avenue, who was chosen as outstanding senior at Jones Commercial High school. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gravenitis, were born in Greece, so John wants "to see and help reconstruct" his parents' native country.

Likes Business Training.

In the meantime, John intends to continue his business training at night school in preparation for being a certified public accountant. But he expects that the army will interrupt his CPA plans for a while, because he received his questionnaire last week.

However, John figures he should make the army a good staff sergeant. That's because he has been president of his class this year and the class is composed of 64 girls and 11 boys. "It's quite a test to keep that many girls in order—and quiet—at class meetings," he explained. "So I think that shouting orders at a group of soldiers would be easy after the job I had in school."

Enjoyed School Journalism.

Rosemary Nikolich, who represented the all-girl Flower Technical school, is interested in business journalism, altho most of her class want to be Red Cross nurses. Science is one of her favorite subjects, but her one and a half years on the school newspaper has been the most enjoyable of all her school activities, she believes.

She hopes to work her way thru business college and then get a job on a trade journal. Other interests are music—she has more than 70 classical and popular records—and sketching. She had a three year scholarship at the Art institute, where she specialized in water colors. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Risto Nikolich, 2818 Barry avenue.

U. of C. Courses Set for Ground School Teachers

Courses to train men and women as aviation ground school instructors will open at the University of Chicago tomorrow. Courses will be divided into day and night sections.

The curriculum, developed to conform to the outline of courses prescribed by the C. A. A., includes seven fields: Civil air regulations, navigation, meteorology, general service, operation of air craft power plants, instruments, and parachutes.

Instruction in civil air regulations, navigation, and meteorology is required of instructors in elementary ground school work; the other four fields are required for instructorships in secondary work. University credit will be granted to regular students taking the training; others, not desiring academic credit or not meeting university admission standards, will be registered as students at large.

Dr. C. O. Houle, in charge of the training, asserted that the rapid development of aviation has created a need for men and women qualified to teach the basic subject matter which pilots are required to master.

"At present the army and navy are using large numbers of such instructors," he reported. "Many high schools have introduced pre-flight courses and more will do so when they can obtain qualified teachers. The war training service [formerly the civilian pilot training program] administered by the C. A. A. requires larger numbers of ground school instructors. Private aeronautical schools and instructors need persons to give their students the training necessary to obtain the various grades of pilot licenses."

NAVY MEN GIVE 'AHOY, AMERICA' A NOVEL TOUCH

W-G-N Show Presented as Dress Rehearsal.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The bluejackets and marines at Navy pier are putting on a lively and entertaining show titled "Ahoy America," every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock over W-G-N. "Ahoy America" is presented by men from the Naval Aviation technical training school in coöperation with W-G-N.

The show reflects the work and life of the men at Navy pier. And a lot of comedy is woven into the scripts by "Margie," a girl interested in the navy, and "Mac," a typical bluejacket. The rôle of Margie is played by Songstress Mary Ann Mercer, who rations out one song each week.

Given as Dress Rehearsal.

The show is presented as a dress rehearsal. This gives it spontaneity and informality. Listeners get an accurate picture of how a big time variety radio program is put together. Frequently the progress of the show is interrupted while Morrison Wood, the producer, gives instructions to the cast. Since Wood is actually busy directing the show his part is played on the air by Forrest Lewis. Cuts are made in the script and so announced on the air. Sometimes some of the music, presented by the Navy Pier Orchestra and Glee club, directed by Lt. Orrin Tucker may be repeated.

"This novel form of putting on a show," said Wood, "puts the members of the cast at ease and makes for a livelier show. Informality is the key note of the program and entertainment for navy personnel and radio listeners the primary objective. Informing listeners how the navy men work, study, and play is a supplementary objective."

Kirkpatrick Sets the Pace.

Jess Kirkpatrick, master of ceremonies, gives the show a lot of added pep and pace—and delights the bluejackets attending the shows with his magic tricks before broadcasts.

Kirkpatrick and Miss Mercer, thru their inquiries, introduce a lot of humor about navy practices, terms, and traditions. Sample:

Lt. Tucker: You should have said, Lieutenant Tucker, J. G., Jess.

Kirkpatrick: What does the "J. G." stand for? Just gottem?

And Margie turns out to be the kind of girl who, upon an introduction to a chief petty officer exclaims: "Grand; I like to pet, too." This brings forth a shrill chorus of whistles and applause from the bluejackets.

Capt. Richard F. Whitehead, chief of staff to Rear Adm. A. C. Read, chief of the technical training command; Comm. J. N. Walton, executive officer of the pier, and Bernice Parks, stage star, will be guests next Tuesday.

W-G-N CITIZENS HOUR TO AIR DUAL SCHOOL PROGRAM

Vocational Pupils, Naval Trainees to Appear.

Chicago Vocational school students will share their appearance at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the Citizens of Tomorrow program on W-G-N with the United States naval training school—advanced aviation. The naval school is housed in the former vocational school building at 87th street and Anthony avenue.

The program will dramatize the importance of technical training. Accounts of the rôle of technical knowledge in the fighting areas will be given by students at the navy school, some of whom have returned to Chicago for further study.

Capt. Browder to Speak.

Capt. Maurice Browder, new commander of the naval training school, and Warren E. Hill, acting director of the Chicago Vocational school, will speak. Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will interview Joseph Meagher, aviation machinist's mate, who saw duty at Pearl Harbor and Midway.

Hugh Dickerson will conduct the vocational school glee club in three numbers, including "Anchors Aweigh." The program will be presented under the supervision of Philip L. McNamee, assistant superintendent in charge of vocational education in the Chicago public schools.

Several departures from previous broadcasts of "Citizens of Tomorrow" will mark today's program. For the first time, the featured school has invited a group outside the educational system to participate. It is in this case the naval training school. For the first time the program was recorded outside of the high school or the facilities of W-G-N. Wednesday afternoon 600 vocational school boys and 700 navy men gathered in the three and a half million dollar former vocational school, now the navy headquarters, to record the broadcast.

Twin Honor Students.

Capt. Browder is the first speaker outside Chicago educational circles to appear, and a fourth first for this broadcast is the appearance of twins as honor students.

Robert and Richard Stammerjohn, 15, of 6947 Michigan avenue, will be honored for scholarship and activities. Their older brother, trained in aviation, is with a military unit.

All the equipment and machinery of the vocational school was moved last semester, after a year's occupancy of the new school, to the former Westcott school building, 8023 Normal avenue. A new brick building offers study of airplane and automobile engines, but plans are ready for five additional shop buildings.

List of Courses.

Students enter the vocational school at the second year high school level. Courses are provided in aeronautics, automobile, machine, sheet metal, electrical, wood pattern making, welding, printing, and drafting. The related subjects of mathematics, physics, and chemistry also are available.

Leaders in the professions, business and education were guests at the recording. The Chicago board of education was represented by James B. McCahey, president, Wilson Frankland, and Mrs. L. Robert Mellin. Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, also was present.

Business executives included Carl A. Channon, general manager, Great Lakes Supply corporation; James H. Gately, president, People's store; Maury Goetz, general superintendent, and James P. Hennessey, Republic Steel corporation; B. M. Livezey, general superintendent, Carnegie-Illinois Steel company; Perrin Rule, superintendent, Youngstown Sheet and Tube company; Fred A. Hagedorn, general superintendent, Interlake Iron and Steel corporation; L. B. Robertson, general superintendent, Wisçonsin Steel Works; Harry Sherman, assistant to works manager, Pullman-Standard Car company; Frank M. Stanley, president, R. E. L. Brooks company; J. H. Crones, president, W. C. Ritchie & Co.; William Gibson, Cole & Young Co.

Publishers Are Invited.

Additional guests included Robert Williamson, publisher, and John V. Hanberg, associate editor, The Daily Calumet; James W. Crane, publisher South End Reporter; John L. Shoel, Southtown Economist; Michael A. Dwyer, publisher The Auburn Parker.

Also attending the recording were John S. Burhorn, president, Walter Tredup, past president, and George Tormoehlen, secretary, South Chicago Chamber of Commerce; Fred H. Summer, president, South Chicago Kiwanis club; Fred Grothe, South Chicago Trade and Labor association; Henry W. Smith, president, and Clarence Boehling, East Side chamber of commerce; and James Brown, commander, civilian defense organization.

★ ★ ★ An important message to the women of America

FROM THE MAKERS OF RED CROSS SHOES

The President of The United States has asked that the name, "Red Cross," be discontinued in connection with all commercial products.

To millions of American women, perhaps the most familiar product bearing this name is the Red Cross Shoe.

It has been known by this proud name for a great deal longer than you can probably remember—as a matter of fact, for over 50 years.

With our nation at war, however, we realize that many Americans are having to give up, for the duration, many of the things they have long treasured.

We who make Red Cross Shoes, therefore, and the thousands of merchants who sell them, unhesitatingly accede, during this critical war period, to the wishes of our President.

And, as we do so—as the name "Red Cross Shoe" becomes "Gold Cross Shoe" (our shoes will be so labeled as rapidly as possible)—we make this pledge:

Gold Cross Shoes will continue to be Red Cross Shoes in every way. They will be made by the same skilled craftsmen, in the same factories, over the same famous "Limit" lasts, and sold by the same merchants.

There is, we believe, no higher pledge we can make to the women of America.

DISLIKE OF NEW DEAL LEADS PAIR TO PAPER HOBBY

Tribune Clippings Form a Current History.

Dislike of the New Deal created a hobby for Mr. and Mrs. William F. Flowers, 6551 Kenwood avenue. Early in 1935, when burocracy was getting into full swing, the couple decided that some record should be made of this governmental movement. As a result, they have seven scrapbooks, one each for the past seven years, which contain principally cartoon and editorial comment.

"While we have voted for men from both parties," Mr. Flowers explained, "we never have agreed with the New Deal." As they already had a few clippings, some of them dating to 1905, they decided to keep a continuous "current history" of comment. Almost all the early part of 1935 was devoted to the New Deal in their book. Later they decided to make their scrapbooks a commentary on all important events.

Most Are from Tribune.

By far the majority of the clippings have been taken from THE TRIBUNE. Cartoons by Orr, Parrish, and McCutcheon, Tribune editorial cartoonists, are most generally used. Editorials, clippings from the "Voice of the People," and cartoons from other publications which have appeared on the Tribune editorial page have been used in the collection. They also have filed, to add a lighter touch, cartoon strips which they have liked, such as "Skeezix" and "Moon Mullins." News stories, news pictures, and clippings from Arch Ward's "Wake of the News" are also pasted in.

In addition to the scrapbooks of current comment they have seven other books of clippings which are mostly of cartoons by the late Gaar Williams, and Bill Holman, and George Clark.

Williams Was Favorite.

Williams was one of their favorite cartoonists, so they named their bull terrier "Zipper" after Williams' canine cartoon character.

The books give a panorama of recent and current history: 1936, Roosevelt elected for a second term, and further development of the New Deal; 1937, Edward Windsor and Wally Simpson become man and wife amid much agitation . . . crash of the German zeppelin, Hindenburg . . . Noonan and Earhardt lost in the Pacific . . . burial of the NRA . . . Rome-Berlin axis comes into prominence . . . Japan and China at war; 1938, fight against New Deal expense and extravagance . . . death of Harvey Firestone, automobile tire magnate . . . cartoon by Parrish showing burocrats berating country boy who has won state fair championship for producing agricultural products . . . fight against the TVA . . . influx of British propagandists; 1939, king and queen of England visit the United States and Canada . . . Munich . . . war engulfs Europe; 1940, political activity . . . third term . . . fall of Paris; 1941, Pearl Harbor; 1942, desultory war action . . . Republican landslide . . . Guadalcanal. . . .

Mrs. Flowers Does Clipping.

Mrs. Flowers does most of the clipping, averaging five or six cartoons and editorials a day, while Mr. Flowers places them in the books. All are dated.

"The cartoon serves a good purpose," he commented. "In these days of rushing they sum up the whole story in compact form." He also praised the predictions made by the cartoonists whose work he has collected.

Other journalistic mementos which Mr. and Mrs. Flowers have kept include the issue of a paper of Feb. 18, 1906. Headline news of the day was the marriage of Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the President, to Nicholas Longworth.

PAINTING HOME SEEN PATRIOTIC, GOOD ECONOMY

Painters, Material Not Scarce, Says Report.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

In case you have heard that painters are scarce and have been led to believe that neglect to do necessary painting for the preservation of property is a patriotic course to pursue, you have been misled!

In fact, just the reverse is true. From coast to coast, says the National Paint, Varnish, and Lacquer association, paint manufacturers, contractors, jobbers, and dealers are emphasizing their ability to do their part in helping preserve the assets of the American people from rot, rust, and decay.

No Lack of Paint.

There are painting contractors available to protect and conserve your property, inside and outside a building, and there is no lack of good paint which you are free to purchase in paint stores and paint departments.

Paints, varnishes, enamels, and lacquers are all surface savers that make your property last longer. Hence in war time they are even more than just ordinary sensible economies, they are truly patriotic materials, and use of them, for protection and conservation, is a patriotic service!

Advocates of winter painting do not recommend painting in below freezing temperature as a general practice, but there are plenty of days in winter, in most regions, when the temperature remains above the freezing point or only a little below it.

Dust Less Likely.

Furthermore in winter there are no insects to stick in the paint, many vines have lost their leaves and there is less likelihood of dust in the air.

The brighter and more temperate winter days are the ones which should be selected for exterior winter painting and no special mixing is necessary. However paint should be left outdoors long enough to bring it to approximately the same temperature as the surface to be painted. If warm paint is applied to a cold surface the film may crawl.

It is obvious that winter exterior painting should be placed in the hands of an expert painter, able to judge of proper weather conditions and proceed carefully with any earlier-than-usual paint jobs. A definite current opportunity does exist for many owners to protect their property from decay, rust and rot by exterior as well as interior painting, without letting the deterioration exist until spring.

Chaplain at Great Lakes to Address Sisterhood

Lt. Julius Mark, chaplain at the Great Lakes Naval Training station, will speak on "One Hundred Fifty Years of American International Relations" before the sisterhood of the Chicago Sinai temple at 2 o'clock Tuesday at the Emil G. Hirsch center, 4622 South Park way.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Jan. 25.

Preparations should be made for early seed sowing, such as getting together a number of flats or boxes, soil, sprinkler, drainage material, and pots.

Seed boxes may consist of small cigar boxes, seed pans, which are simply low pots, or standard pots may be used if care is exercised when watering. A convenient size box is about 2½ inches deep, 12 inches wide, and 18 inches long. The bottom should have a crack between each board or have holes bored in it to prevent stagnant or saturated soil.

Tuesday, Jan. 26.

It is best to sow seeds in rows rather than broadcast, for cultivation is easier, each plant has its share of light, and the soil between the rows can be stirred without disturbing the plants.

After the seeds have germinated, the young plants should be given the maximum of light. The average light conditions in homes is not always adequate and, of necessity, the plants must be placed directly in a window.

Wednesday, Jan. 27.

Grapes and other hardy woody plants can be pruned now. However, later pruning will not prove disastrous but grapes and plants that are likely to bleed after the sap becomes active, are best pruned while at rest or before activity begins.

Prune heavily to obtain new wood.

Thursday, Jan. 28.

In the outdoor trees and shrubs are infested with scales spray with lime-sulphur on warm days. If pests of any kind are present be sure to adopt a spray calendar and follow it.

See that all bulbs and roots are continuing in good condition. Amaryllis bulbs can be started. Stored bulbs will start into activity without watering. When the flower stalk appears, top dress it with fresh soil and water once. Keep the soil moist.

Friday, Jan. 29.

Bring in a few branches of shrubs for flowering. Each branch must contain flower buds or no flowers will be had.

Try the goldenbell, bridal wreath, sassafras, birch, pussy willow, cornelian cherry, pawpaw, magnolia, or some tree stems like the buckeye which will open its large leaf buds.

Saturday, Jan. 30.

Buy good, fresh seeds each season instead of relying on those saved from the garden. Try or test the germinating power before sowing. Do this by placing a certain number of seeds, say 50 to 100, between moist blotting paper. In a short time it will germinate.

Count the good ones to obtain the percentage of those to be sown. It never pays to use poor seeds, for sowing may have to be done again later on.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

WAR LOOMS FOR SOUTHWEST SENIORS

FORTY SEEKING 9 SOUTHWEST COUNCIL SEATS

Tomorrow Last Day for Objections.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Forty candidates filed their nominating petitions before the deadline last Tuesday for the nine aldermanic posts to be filled in elections Feb. 23 or the runoffs Apr. 6. Tomorrow is the last day for objecting to petitions, and candidates have until Feb. 3 to keep their names off the ballots if they decide to withdraw, as several are expected to do.

While the contests in the 11th to 15th wards, inclusive, are so one sidedly in favor of Democrats that the G. O. P. organizations have not yet picked opposing candidates, there was promise of more interesting developments in the 16th, 17th, 18th, and 19th wards.

One of the five women filed for alderman in Chicago is from the southwest side. She is Alice Yonik, 3433 South Emerald avenue, entered against Ald. Hugh B. Connelly in the 11th ward.

Here is the complete list of filings for the southwest side council seats, with the names and addresses of candidates, their occupations, and their party affiliations where these were available.

TEACHER RETIRES WITH A RECORD OF ATTENDANCE

Misses Only 4 Days in 35 Year Career.

Mrs. Cilena G. Walker.

Having missed an average of only one day in every nine years of teaching, Mrs. Cilena G. Walker has retired as principal of the Dewey elementary school with a record of attendance at her job that few public school teachers can equal. Since she began teaching 35 years ago, Mrs. Walker missed only four days, and she has never taken a sabbatical leave.

That none of the days she did miss school were the result of illness Mrs. Walker attributes to the fact that as a child on her father's farm near Fonda, Ia., she learned to ride horseback at the age of six. Her father, James Mercer, was an Indian fighter during the Civil war. For many years it was her daily task to ride—without a saddle—five or six miles across plains to round up cattle and bring them home.

Likes to Fly Now.

Covered wagons carrying the pioneers westward were a common sight near the Mercer farm, she recalls. Now Mrs. Walker travels by ocean liner and streamline train and plane,

HOUSEWIVES PLY BRUSH IN VILLAGE ART MOVEMENT

Group in Flossmoor Studies Water Color.

"From the dishpan to Renoir in 10 easy lessons" or "Great artists from little housewives grow" might well be slogans of members of the Flossmoor Art group, a community organization formed to promote the study, development, and enjoyment of art.

Around the walls of a Sterling avenue studio—devised in a store building—are hung pictures painted by student artists or other community artists.

The art group is made up both of active students of painting and of patronesses who wish to help the movement but who do not feel an urge to wield a paint brush.

Started Year Ago.

The group was formed last February when seven Flossmoor housewives met in their homes once a week to study water color painting under Fred Oswald, Oak Park. After 20 years abroad Oswald returned from Europe three years ago. He was formerly an instructor at the Chicago Art institute.

Original members of the class were Mrs. Roger Vaughan, Homewood; Mrs. James Burdett, Mrs. Graham B. Jacobus, Mrs. Ewart Strawbridge, Mrs. W. C. Edmister, Mrs. Naomi Chapman, and Mrs. James Blair, all of Flossmoor.

Some of the class members had attended art classes years ago, some had never had art training, and none were actively engaged in painting. Mrs. Jacobus had been a costume designer at one time; Mrs. Burdett and Mrs. Vaughan had practiced a form of art in planning their gardens, but the paint brush was new to most of them.

Outlet for Emotions.

"We don't expect to do anything great," Mrs. Jacobus, an active member, says. "We are turning out nice things and having a lot of fun. We are also serving a purpose, not only in developing art, but in providing a constructive outlet for emotions disturbed by war worries."

The seven members have grown to 20, and classes are held all day on Wednesday and Friday. Plans are being considered for an evening class so that more men can take part; there is one male student in the day classes.

Plans are under way to hold an exhibit in the spring of the work of these artists and those of other artists in Flossmoor or nearby communities.

CLASS LEADERS OUTLINE AIMS IN INTERVIEWS

See Induction Near on 18th Birthday.

This year's high school boy graduate doesn't wrinkle his brow over a career in business or college or the well known sightseeing interlude. He just picks up his brand new gift luggage for a little trip to a nearby induction center, shortly after he becomes 18 years of age, and there receives a military assignment.

If he is 17 or less he plans a period at college until his 18th birthday.

Of the 10 honor students elected by their classmates this month at southwest high schools only one student was a girl and she has plans to become a teacher.

Voice Their Ambitions.

Thru interviews THE TRIBUNE uncovered the following aims of the outstanding graduates of the midyear class:

Howard Foster, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ora Lee Foster of 2437 West 35th street, was selected the outstanding graduate of Tilden Technical High school by his classmates. Honors he won at Tilden include the presidency of the senior class, membership in the National Honor society, and choice as speaker at the class achievement dinner. Following the footsteps of his brothers, Ora Lee Jr. and Elmer, he hopes soon to enlist in the naval air corps. With ambition to become a draftsman after the war, he plans to study drafting and mathematics at the Illinois Institute of Technology.

Plane Model Collection.

Kenneth Ferguson, 17, of 7552 Eggleston avenue, of Parker High school, is an aviation enthusiast. He has taken shop and science courses and will continue with them at Wilson Junior college. He hopes to enter the naval air corps. He has 20 airplane models, one with a wing span of 5 feet. For the last three months Kenneth has worked in a machine shop after school. Active in high school, he was on the editorial staff of Parker Pines, a ticket salesman for two years, member of senior council, chemistry club, and is on the committee for the senior class luncheon tomorrow in the La Salle hotel. He is a member of the Woodlawn chapter of De Molay.

Kenneth Gill, 17, of 11414 Homewood avenue, is a science and mathematics major at Morgan Park High school who says he probably will go on to college until the time arrives for him to become a candidate for the air forces. An Eagle Scout, Kenneth was treasurer of his 4A class and chairman of the budget committee. He is vice president of the Red Cross council and last semester was president of Sigma, honorary commercial club. A member of both the track and basketball teams for three years, Ken holds a letter from each team. He is a member of the American Youth league and student association.

Plans College Entry.

Clarence Bergstrom, 6215 South Laflin street, is another 17 year old who will go to college, probably the University of Illinois, where his brother, Berton, is a student. Clarence is president of his senior class at Lindblom and was second in scholastic honors. As salutatorian he will deliver the address of welcome at the graduation exercises. His job as manager of the football team for the last three years has kept Clarence busy every school day from 2:30 to 6 o'clock. He is a science and mathematics major.

Eugene Precin, 4068 Archer avenue, president of the National Honor society at Kelly High school, is a science and mathematics student who has put special emphasis on photography. He was staff photographer of the Lamplighter and president of the camera club. He has worked with his father in the Precin photography studio. If Eugene does not enter the army air forces as a meteorology student he will study at college for a while. He has played guard on the basketball team. For eight years he has played the snare drums of the drum and bugle corps, Sons of American Legion.

Has Journalistic Aim.

Calvin Wittenkeller, 18, of 6417 South Justine street, of Harper High school, avers that his vocational interest is in journalism but that the army has suggested other plans. Editor of Harper Highway, student paper, Calvin has been a reporter, sports columnist, and departmental editor. He won the 1942 Henry C. Lytton trophy for advertising and has had one year of cartoon study at the Chicago Art institute. He is a member of the National Honor society, an R. O. T. C. first lieutenant, and was chairman of the first military ball last year. Calvin is chairman of the 1943 prom. He will appear on the commencement program Wednesday.

William Gaspar, 3300 South Hoyne avenue, who won two letters in football and two in swimming at Gage Park High, would like to enroll in the physical education course at the University of Illinois. He was president of his junior class, member of the National Honor society, an actor in the school play, "Barbara Fritchie," hall guard, and was on the

Influence of War Shown in Student Plans.

Three boys and one girl were represented in the Tribune interviews of outstanding graduating seniors from the city's four general schools which draw pupils from all over Chicago. The schools are Washburne Trade, Spalding, Jones Commercial, and Flower Technical.

Clarence Markus, outstanding senior of Washburne Trade school, goes to work the day after graduation in a war plant. He will practice the trade he learned in school—tool and die making.

Hopes to Be War Pilot.

"I hope this practical experience plus what I learned in school will help me become an army pilot," he said seriously. "I register next month, and I've been thinking about the job I'd like best in the army. Being a pilot, I think, would suit me fine. And knowing tools should help me understand the insides of a plane." Clarence lives at 5157 Strong street.

Charles McCarthy of Spalding School for Crippled Children hopes to attend De Paul university and study mathematics for teaching. During the summer he worked in a defense plant, inspecting metal goods after they had been sandblasted.

Charles lives with his uncle, Martin J. Sweeney, 5719 South Green street, and comes to school every morning in the Spalding bus. He is class president as well as head of the civic, social, and cultural club. He also is interested in dramatics, particularly comedies.

Parents in Gary.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McCarthy, live in Gary, where Charles attended St. Luke's Parochial school for a while. A leg injury suffered when he was 2 years old has made it necessary for him to spend much of his time in hospitals and summer camps for crippled children.

A war time graduate who hopes to help in the rebuilding of axis seized Greece, when peace time comes again, is John Gravenitis of 3227 South Lituanica avenue, who was chosen as outstanding senior at Jones Commercial High school. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gravenitis, were born in Greece, so John wants "to see and help reconstruct" his parents' native country.

Likes Business Training.

In the meantime, John intends to continue his business training at night school in preparation for being a certified public accountant. But he expects that the army will interrupt his CPA plans for a while, because he received his questionnaire last week.

However, John figures he should make the army a good staff sergeant. That's because he has been president of his class this year and the class is composed of 64 girls and 11 boys.

"It's quite a test to keep that many girls in order—and quiet—at class meetings," he explained. "So I think that shouting orders at a group of soldiers would be easy after the job I had in school."

Enjoyed School Journalism.

Rosemary Nikolich, who represented the all-girl Flower Technical school, is interested in business journalism, altho most of her class want to be Red Cross nurses. Science is one of her favorite subjects, but her one and a half years on the school newspaper has been the most enjoyable of all her school activities, she believes.

She hopes to work her way thru business college and then get a job on a trade journal. Other interests are music—she has more than 70 classical and popular records—and sketching. She had a three year scholarship at the Art institute, where she specialized in water colors. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Risto Nikolich, 2818 Barry avenue.

Graduate from West Point

Darwin J. Kitch.

Richard J. Hynes.

William D. Neale.

Among the West Point cadets graduated this month were Richard J. Hynes, son of Mrs. Timothy J. Hynes, 8026 Wood street; William D. Neale, son of Dr. and Mrs. V. J. Neale, 8117 Marshfield avenue; and Darwin J. Kitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Kitch, 10426 Leavitt street. Hynes and Kitch expect to be commissioned in the army air forces, while Neale probably will enter the coast artillery. Hynes studied in schools outside of Chicago before entering West Point. Neale was graduated from Mount Carmel High school, and attended Loyola university for one year. A 1937 graduate of Morgan Park High school, Kitch attended for a year the Marion Military institute in Marion, Ala. At West Point he was a member of the wrestling team and on the staff of the Howitzer, cadet yearbook.

prom and cleanup committees. William is a graduate of the Everett school, 3419 South Bell street.

Seeks Air Force Career.

The army air forces' course in meteorology at Pomona college, Claremont, Cal., is the aspiration of Thomas P. Aabye, 11948 Eggleston avenue, who is an R. O. T. C. lieutenant colonel and battalion commander at Fenger High school. Thomas has 18 R. O. T. C. honor bars, the Tribune medal for efficiency, the officers' efficiency medal, a rifle marksmanship award, and a fourth medal from the American Legion auxiliary. One sister and two brothers preceded him at Fenger. Both brothers are in the army air force and one is a rear gunner in a Flying Fortress. He is on the program committee and has been on the wrestling team. He is a hall guard lieutenant.

Barbara Jane Harrison, 6306 Eberhart avenue, who has majored in the social sciences at Englewood, would like to matriculate at Wilson Junior and Chicago Teachers' college. President of the junior class, she was the second girl to be so chosen. Barbara has been president of the French club, vice president of Sigma Epsilon, vice president of the Library Book Worm club, and copy editor on the Englewood News. She won third prize in a literature contest conducted by the News and won a church scholarship in 1939 for piano study. She has appeared in an Orator show and G. A. A. entertainment. For two summers Barbara has been the youngest staff worker at the Y. M. C. A. branch, 3763 South Wabash avenue.

Speaks at Commencement.

As class president William Tongren, 18, of 8144 Lafayette avenue, will give the student commencement address at Calumet High school Thursday evening. He will then enter the civil engineering course at Indiana university. A brother, Hale, also a Calumet graduate, is already in the naval training program at Indiana university. William is vice president of the junior Hi-Y of America. He is a member of the National Honor society, scholarship club, and played football in his junior year. As a sophomore he was an interclass basketball champion. He has taken a general science course.

1,700 STUDENTS TO GET DIPLOMAS FROM 10 SCHOOLS

CITY-WIDE SCHOOLS

NAVY MEN GIVE 'AHOY, AMERICA' A NOVEL TOUCH

W-G-N Show Presented as Dress Rehearsal.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The bluejackets and marines at Navy pier are putting on a lively and entertaining show titled "Ahoy America," every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock over W-G-N. "Ahoy America" is presented by men from the Naval Aviation technical training school in coöperation with W-G-N.

The show reflects the work and life of the men at Navy pier. And a lot of comedy is woven into the scripts by "Margie," a girl interested in the navy, and "Mac," a typical bluejacket. The rôle of Margie is played by Songstress Mary Ann Mercer, who rations out one song each week.

Given as Dress Rehearsal.

The show is presented as a dress rehearsal. This gives it spontaneity and informality. Listeners get an accurate picture of how a big time variety radio program is put together. Frequently the progress of the show is interrupted while Morrison Wood, the producer, gives instructions to the cast. Since Wood is actually busy directing the show his part is played on the air by Forrest Lewis. Cuts are made in the script and so announced on the air. Sometimes some of the music, presented by the Navy Pier Orchestra and Glee club, directed by Lt. Orrin Tucker may be repeated.

"This novel form of putting on a show," said Wood, "puts the members of the cast at ease and makes for a livelier show. Informality is the key note of the program and entertainment for navy personnel and radio listeners the primary objective. Informing listeners how the navy men work, study, and play is a supplementary objective."

Kirkpatrick Sets the Pace.

Jess Kirkpatrick, master of ceremonies, gives the show a lot of added pep and pace—and delights the bluejackets attending the shows with his magic tricks before broadcasts.

Kirkpatrick and Miss Mercer, thru their inquiries, introduce a lot of humor about navy practices, terms, and traditions. Sample:

Lt. Tucker: You should have said, Lieutenant Tucker, J. G., Jess.

Kirkpatrick: What does the "J. G." stand for? Just gottem?

And Margie turns out to be the kind of girl who, upon an introduction to a chief petty officer exclaims:

"Grand; I like to pet, too." This brings forth a shrill chorus of whistles and applause from the bluejackets.

Capt. Richard F. Whitehead, chief of staff to Rear Adm. A. C. Read, chief of the technical training command; Comm. J. N. Walton, executive officer of the pier, and Bernice Parks, stage star, will be guests next Tuesday.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

Miss Claire will sing the rôle of Sylvia, the feminine lead, and Knight will portray Prince Franz. Liane will be played by Miss Haskins, soprano of the Chicago Opera company; Wilkie will be cast as Van Tromp.

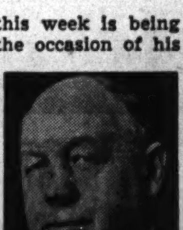
EDITOR FOR 50 YEARS, A. L. HALL LOOKS AT CAREER

Argo Newspaper Man Still Enthusiastic About Job.



Albert L. Hall.

Albert L. Hall this week is being congratulated on the occasion of his 50th year as an active newspaper man. Now editor of the Des Plaines Valley News at Argo, Mr. Hall is as enthusiastic about getting his paper to press as on Jan. 27, 1893, when he purchased the Weekly Express at Leland, Ill. Much of the veteran editor's career has been experienced in the west suburban area.

Two years after making his first venture in the publishing field, Mr. Hall took over the Earlville Gazette and merged it with the Leland paper into the La Salle County Gazette-Express. In 1898 he sold out and became owner of the Chronicle in St. Charles, where he was born and where his grandparents settled 100 years ago.

Owned Elgin Courier.

Five years later Mr. Hall organized a company and purchased the Elgin Courier. In 1910 the controling interest was sold to Col. Ira C. Copley of Aurora. Later he assisted Atty. Frank R. Reid in starting the Aurora Daily Star. He also purchased and consolidated the Stillman Valley Graphic, the Byron Express, and the Leaf River Mirror in Ogle county.

Entering the Chicago suburban field in 1917 with the purchase of the Forest Park Review, Mr. Hall continued as one of the owners until 1931, and remained as editor until 1938, when he became editor of the Oak Parker. He became editor of the Argo paper in 1941. With his wife and daughter he resides at 225 South Taylor avenue, Oak Park.

Writes Column of Comment.

In his editorships Mr. Hall has usually conducted a column of comment, and his column, "Chicago and the World Around It," is syndicated to a number of weekly papers. He was president of the Suburban Publishers' association for three years, and was at one time vice president of the Illinois Press association. Last year Mr. Hall won the National Editorial association award for an editorial on Horace Greeley.

"Type was set by hand and there were no schools of journalism when I began," said Mr. Hall when asked to comment on his career. "There have been few days when I haven't had to face a 'deadline' for sometimes two or three papers. I enjoy Argo, located as it is in the midst of industries. If there had been more time between the brief gaps when I left one paper for another, I would like to have attended a school of journalism. I never felt the urge to engage in any other business."

Honor Naval Trainees, Vocational Pupils.

Chicago Vocational school students will share their appearance at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the Citizens of Tomorrow program on W-G-N with the United States naval training school—advanced aviation. The naval school is housed in the former vocational school building at 87th street and Anthony avenue.

The program will dramatize the importance of technical training. Accounts of the rôle of technical knowledge in the fighting areas will be given by students at the navy school, some of whom have returned to Chicago for further study.

Capt. Browder to Speak.

Capt. Maurice Browder, new commander of the naval training school, and Warren E. Hill, acting director of the Chicago Vocational school, will speak. Philip Maxwell, master of ceremonies, will interview Joseph Meagher, aviation machinist's mate, who saw duty at Pearl Harbor and Midway.

Hugh Dickerson will conduct the vocational school glee club in three numbers, including "Anchors Aweigh." The program will be presented under the supervision of Philip L. McNamee, assistant superintendent in charge of vocational education in the Chicago public schools.

Several departures from previous broadcasts of "Citizens of Tomorrow" will mark today's program. For the first time, the featured school has invited a group outside the educational system to participate. It is in this case the naval training school. For the first time the program was recorded outside of the high school or the facilities of W-G-N. Wednesday afternoon 600 vocational school boys and 700 navy men gathered in the three and a half million dollar former vocational school, now the navy headquarters, to record the broadcast.

Twin Honor Students.

Capt. Browder is the first speaker outside Chicago educational circles to appear, and a fourth first for this broadcast is the appearance of twins as honor students.

Robert and Richard Stammerjohn, 15, of 6947 Michigan avenue, will be honored for scholarship and activities. Their older brother, trained in aviation, is with a military unit.

All the equipment and machinery of the vocational school was moved last semester, after a year's occupancy of the new school, to the former Westcott school building, 8023 Normal avenue. A new brick building offers study of airplane and automobile engines, but plans are ready for five additional shop buildings.

List of Courses.

Students enter the vocational school at the second year high school level. Courses are provided in aeronautics, automobile, machine, sheet metal, electrical, wood pattern making, welding, printing, and drafting. The related subjects of mathematics, physics, and chemistry also are available.

Leaders in the professions, business and education were guests at the recording. The Chicago board of education was represented by James B. McCahey, president, Wilson Frankland, and Mrs. L. Robert Mellin. Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, also was present.

Business executives included Carl A. Channon, general manager, Great Lakes Supply corporation; James H. Gately, president, People's store; Maury Goetz, general superintendent, and James P. Hennessey, Republic Steel corporation; B. M. Livezey, general superintendent, Carnegie-Illinois Steel company; Perrin Rule, superintendent, Youngstown Sheet and Tube company; Fred A. Hagedorn, general superintendent, Interlake Iron and Steel corporation; L. B. Robertson, general superintendent, Wisconsin Steel Works; Harry Sherman, assistant to works manager, Pullman-Standard Car company; Frank M. Stanley, president, R. E. L. Brooks company; J. H. Crones, president, W. C. Ritchie & Co.; William Gibson, Cole & Young Co.

Publishers Are Invited.

Additional guests included Robert Williamson, publisher, and John V. Hanberg, associate editor, The Daily Calumet; James W. Crane, publisher South End Reporter; John L. Shoel, Southtown Economist; Michael A. Dwyer, publisher The Auburn Parker.

Also attending the recording were John S. Burhorn, president, Walter Tredup, past president, and George Tormoehlen, secretary, South Chicago Chamber of Commerce; Fred H. Summer, president, South Chicago Kiwanis club; Fred Grothe, South Chicago Trade and Labor association; Henry W. Smith, president, and Clarence Boehling, East Side chamber of commerce; and James Brown, commander, civilian defense organization.

★ ★ ★ An important message to the women of America

FROM THE MAKERS OF RED CROSS SHOES

The President of The United States has asked that the name, "Red Cross," be discontinued in connection with all commercial products.

To millions of American women, perhaps the most familiar product bearing this name is the Red Cross Shoe.

It has been known by this proud name for a great deal longer than you can probably remember—as a matter of fact, for over 50 years.

With our nation at war, however, we realize that many Americans are having to give up, for the duration, many of the things they have long treasured.

We who make Red Cross Shoes, therefore, and the thousands of merchants who sell them, unhesitatingly accede, during this critical war period, to the wishes of our President.

And, as we do so—as the name "Red Cross Shoe" becomes "Gold Cross Shoe" (our shoes will be so labeled as rapidly as possible)—we make this pledge:

Gold Cross Shoes will continue to be Red Cross Shoes in every way. They will be made by the same skilled craftsmen, in the same factories, over the same famous "Limit" lasts, and sold by the same merchants.

There is, we believe, no higher pledge we can make to the women of America.

PAINTING HOME SEEN PATRIOTIC, GOOD ECONOMY

No Scarcity of Painters, Material, Says Report.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

In case you have heard that painters are scarce and have been led to believe that neglect to do necessary painting for the preservation of property is a patriotic course to pursue, you have been misled!

In fact, just the reverse is true. From coast to coast, says the National Paint, Varnish, and Lacquer association, paint manufacturers, contractors, jobbers, and dealers are emphasizing their ability to do their part in helping preserve the assets of the American people from rot, rust, and decay.

No Lack of Paint.

There are painting contractors available to protect and conserve your property, inside and outside a building, and there is no lack of good paint which you are free to purchase in paint stores and paint departments.

Paints, varnishes, enamels, and lacquers are all surface savers that make your property last longer. Hence in war time they are even more than just ordinary sensible economies, they are truly patriotic materials, and use of them, for protection and conservation, is a patriotic service!

Advocates of winter painting do not recommend painting in below freezing temperature as a general practice, but there are plenty of days in winter, in most regions, when the temperature remains above the freezing point or only a little below it.

Dust Less Likely.

Furthermore in winter there are no insects to stick in the paint, many vines have lost their leaves and there is less likelihood of dust in the air.

The brighter and more temperate winter days are the ones which should be selected for exterior winter painting and no special mixing is necessary. However paint should be left outdoors long enough to bring it to approximately the same temperature as the surface to be painted. If warm paint is applied to a cold surface the film may crawl.

vlw

It is obvious that winter exterior painting should be placed in the hands of an expert painter, able to judge of proper weather conditions and proceed carefully with any earlier-than-usual paint jobs. A definite current opportunity does exist for many owners to protect their property from decay, rust and rot by exterior as well as interior painting, without letting the deterioration exist until spring.

BURN MORTGAGE IN PRESBYTERIAN SERVICE TODAY

Dr. J. Walter Malone, vice president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, will speak at the mortgage burning ceremony of 7th Presbyterian church, 86th and Sangamon streets, during the regular worship service this morning. Dr. John Calvin Leonard is pastor. Arthur Slimm, chairman of the board of trustees, will put a lighted match to the mortgage and James Dimmock, treasurer, will assist in the ceremony.

The church dates its history back to March 30, 1893, when it was incorporated. A building constructed that same year burned in 1896. Rebuilt immediately it served until 1926, when additional construction took place. Mortgages from the two projects totaled $40,000. This amount was liquidated last month by the 500 families of the parish.

Several members of the first building committee are still with the church. They are Whittier Perdue, Carl O. Congdon, William McIlroy, Daisy Gammel, Edward Holloway, Miss Winifred Bosseller, Mrs. George Sarber, and William Simpson.

Band of Thornton High to Give Concert Today

The first in a series of three Sunday afternoon concerts, entitled "Music for Victory," will be played at 3 o'clock today by the Thornton Township High school band in the school auditorium. Lyle A. Hopkins, conductor, announces that the second half of today's program will consist of South American music.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Jan. 25.

Preparations should be made for early seed sowing, such as getting together a number of flats or boxes, soil, sprinkler, drainage material, and pots.

Seed boxes may consist of small cigar boxes, seed pans, which are simply low pots, or standard pots may be used if care is exercised when watering. A convenient size box is about 2½ inches deep, 12 inches wide, and 18 inches long. The bottom should have a crack between each board or have holes bored in it to prevent stagnant or saturated soil.

Tuesday, Jan. 26.

It is best to sow seeds in rows rather than broadcast, for cultivation is easier, each plant has its share of light, and the soil between the rows can be stirred without disturbing the plants.

After the seeds have germinated, the young plants should be given the maximum of light. The average light conditions in homes is not always adequate and, of necessity, the plants must be placed directly in a window.

Wednesday, Jan. 27.

Grapes and other hardy woody plants can be pruned now. However, later pruning will not prove disastrous but grapes and plants that are likely to bleed after the sap becomes active, are best pruned while at rest or before activity begins.

Prune heavily to obtain new wood.

Thursday, Jan. 28.

In the outdoor trees and shrubs are infested with scales spray with lime-sulphur on warm days. If pests of any kind are present be sure to adopt a spray calendar and follow it.

See that all bulbs and roots are continuing in good condition. Amaryllis bulbs can be started. Stored bulbs will start into activity without watering. When the flower stalk appears, top dress it with fresh soil and water once. Keep the soil moist.

Friday, Jan. 29.

Bring in a few branches of shrubs for flowering. Each branch must contain flower buds or no flowers will be had.

Try the goldenbell, bridal wreath, sassafras, birch, pussy willow, cornelian cherry, pawpaw, magnolia, or some tree stems like the buckeye which will open its large leaf buds.

Saturday, Jan. 30.

Buy good, fresh seeds each season instead of relying on those saved from the garden. Try or test the germinating power before sowing. Do this by placing a certain number of seeds, say 50 to 100, between moist blotting paper. In a short time it will germinate.

Count the good ones to obtain the percentage of those to be sown. It never pays to use poor seeds, for sowing may have to be done again later on.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

Misses Only 4 Days in 35 Year Career.

but she enjoys flying best.

Mrs. Walker has toured Europe three times, South Africa, Alaska, Labrador, and Lapland. She flew across South America. Several winters ago she took an air vacation over the Caribbean sea. She has been in all the States except those in New England.

A collection of more than 50 letter-openers, each made of material native to a different country, is one way Mrs. Walker brings back souvenirs of the nations she visits.

Shares Travel Thrills.

"The best way I have found to share my travels with my students and friends is by moving pictures," Mrs. Walker said last week at the showing of one of her most recent reels in the Dewey school auditorium.

Between 1916 and 1927 she was head of the Clearing school on the southwest side. In 1927 she became mathematics instructor at Roosevelt High school, teaching there until 1930. The next three and one-half years she was principal of Froebel elementary school, and for the last eight and a half years directed the Dewey school.

Her faculty of 22 teachers last week gave Mrs. Walker a farewell dinner at the Windermere East hotel.

Mrs. Katherine Ranquist, assistant principal at Dewey, is to take over Mrs. Walker's post until a new appointment is announced by the board of education.

Daughter at U. of C.

Mrs. Walker and her daughter, Mrs. Gladys Calder, live at 372 Normal parkway, across the street from the Chicago Teachers' college. Mrs. Calder is head of the bureau of records and registration at the University of Chicago.

Following the dinner, 30 mothers will stage a variety show, under the direction of Helen Kornemann. For most performers, the show will be their first stage appearance. The leading lady, Mrs. John Haase, also will be the accompanist.

Mrs. Ervin Madlung is the dinner chairman.

WAR SHIFTS HIGH SCHOOL AMBITIONS

39 ENTER RACE FOR WEST SIDE COUNCIL SEATS

6 Seek Nomination in 'Bloody 20th.'

Thirty-nine candidates, including one woman, were in the field to contest aldermanic posts in 12 west side wards after the deadline for filing petitions last Tuesday. The election will be held Feb. 23 and run-offs for all wards where no candidate receives a majority of the votes cast are scheduled for April 6.

The ward which drew the most filings was the "bloody 20th," where six candidates are after the seat of the late William V. Pacelli, who died last fall. Among the six is Miss Florence Tye Jennison, first woman aldermanic candidate in the ward in many years. Miss Jennison, who holds a law degree, ran for the Democratic nomination for congressman in the 8th district in 1936.

The only aldermen whose seats are uncontested thus far are Fred Fischman and Edward J. Upton [30th], but there may be other wards without contests, since candidates may withdraw until Feb 3. Fischman gained the seat in a special election to succeed Ald. Jacob M. Arvey, now a lieutenant colonel in the army. Arvey's additional job as committee man is now held by Arthur X. Elrod.

Following is a list of the candidates in the west side wards. Where a candidate is identified with the regular party organization it means he has been indorsed. Terms or part terms already served are indicated.

HOME MADE U.S. NAVY FLAG WEST SIDE HEIRLOOM

Battle Scarred Banner First Flew in 1779.

One of the navy's first flags, battle scarred and bearing 13 stars, has been handed down in the family of a west side woman, Mrs. Stephen B. Lucas, 5408 Fulton street. Hand woven and sewn, the flag which carries 11 bullet holes was given Mrs. Lucas by her grandmother, Adelaide Victoria Schley, who died at the age of 98 in Otsego, Mich.

According to Mrs. Lucas the flag was made in 1779 by her great-great-grandmother, Abigaile Lawrence, who gathered the wool from the sheep on the family plantation in Virginia, spun and dyed it from berries and roots from the hills and forests and then sewed it by hand.

Except for the stars which were cut from a cotton petticoat, the flag, six by three feet, is made entirely of hand spun wool.

Mrs. Lucas who was an orphan and separated from her family for many years never learned in what battles the flag received the bullet holes. She does know, however, that it was carried by a great-uncle, Adm. Winfield Scott Schley ,in the Spanish-American war. The family legend also asserts it has been flown from the masts of ships in every war in which the United States has engaged, except the present conflict.

The flag was exhibited at the St. Louis exposition in 1904 and was unfurled again recently at a meeting of the Austin consumer division of civilian defense of which Mrs. Lucas is an active member.

Vacant Store to Be Center for Soldiers

A vacant store building at 942 Taylor street is undergoing many changes. There's a sign in front which says "Community Center for Boys in Service." Inside, volunteers are laying linoleum, putting up partitions, and moving in furniture.

The community of about 40,000 families, most of whom are Americanized Italians, is building a service men's center for more than 2,000 boys in the army and navy. It will be a center not only for the boys but for their whole families as well.

Music and Food.

Some one is donating a radio for dancing, others are providing game tables, chairs, and sofas. The much loved Italian sphaghetti and meatballs will be served free every week-end. Cold drinks, sandwiches and other food will be furnished by merchants and the boys' mothers.

A grand opening is being planned the last of the month and after that the center will be open every day from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock at night. On Saturdays and Sundays the hours will be extended until 1 o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Frances Mollnare is center chairman. She will be in charge of hostesses, food and other details of running the center. Miss Mary Gallo will have charge of entertainment.

Financed by Dance.

Funds for the opening of the center were provided thru a dance which the community and OCD sponsored several months ago. A total of $1,500 was taken in, more than enough to pay the rent for one year and to take care of incidental OCD expenses for several months. The community expects to operate the center thru donations.

Joe Salerno is OCD community commander and has headed the committee in founding the center. Axel Johnson, maintenance man of Holy Family church, was loaned to do the carpenter work. The electrical work was done by Joe Vespa, a block captain, and Levie Nelson, a block captain in the community's Negro district, is doing the painting.

The floor covering was laid by Louis Pellicore, first aid chairman and a zone captain. Work on the center has been in progress since early in November and many volunteers have dropped in for a few hours at a time doing whatever spare jobs there were to be done.

Includes OCD Offices.

In the back of the store building are the new OCD headquarters for the community. The office will be open every day during the hours the center is open.

"We hope to turn this abandoned building into a community center," Joe Salerno said, "and if nothing else our project has brought the people of our community together. We have a community of distinct nationalities, the majority of which are Italians, with some Greeks, Jews, Norwegians, Germans, Negroes, and Chinese, and it is hard to foster a community spirit among them."

MIDYEAR GRADS SHELVE DREAMS FOR DURATION

Many West Siders Now in Uniform.

To be doctors, lawyers, teachers, and journalists were the ambitions of high school seniors graduating a year ago. To the midwinter graduates of 1943 these ambitions are only dreams —dreams which must be shelved for the time being.

Almost every class graduating Wednesday night on the west side has lost some of its members to Uncle Sam. Some anxious to do their part in the fight have left school early to enlist and thru extra work will receive their diplomas in absentia. Others who have stayed to the finish are aware of the war picture which will confront them as soon as they step out into the world.

Some to Don Khaki.

Some will go immediately from school sweaters into khaki and others will try to get in a year or so of schooling, not in the professions, but chemical engineering, drafting, and other wartime necessities. Outstanding seniors who were interviewed by THE TRIBUNE don't mind admitting they are somewhat confused and uncertain what the future has in store for them.

The girls realize this is their big chance to break into the business and professional world, but they too are war conscious. As one girl said almost every girl in her class wants to be a nurse or do something else useful in the war.

George Roncarati of Crane Technical High school hopes either to get a job in a war plant or enlist in the navy. Only 17 years old he plans to spend his pre-draft age year at Wright Junior college studying drafting or civil engineering. He previously had planned to be an electrical engineer, but felt that wasn't very closely allied with the war.

Works Part Time.

George lives alone with his widowed mother, Mrs. Agnes Roncarati, 507 North Halsted, and works four hours a day in a candy factory. Summers are spent on a farm northwest of Chicago where he gets in as much hunting and fishing as possible. Mathematics is his favorite subject and next to that are architectural drawing and foreign languages. He has studied Spanish one year and Italian two years.

Barbara Walters who represented her class from Austin High school in an interview is interested in radio work. She's not particular what she does in radio, "either acting or announcing," just so she's in the atmosphere. She has had two semesters of dramatic work and has been in several school plays. She also has been in the glee club for two years.

Barbara is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Walters, 1734 North Lotus avenue, and in the summer helps in her dad's drug store. Horseback riding is a favorite sport with her and she's been in several Austin school horse shows. She hopes to go to college but present plans are indefinite.

Two Honored at Marshall.

Seymour Langer of 4161 5th avenue, and Marvin Lehtman of 713 South Central Park avenue were selected as outstanding graduates from Marshall High school. Langer has been given a $100 scholarship to the school of his choice—the University of Illinois. He will enroll in February.

President of the student council, this 17 year old graduate says he has dreamed of being a surgeon for a long time. In school, his favorite studies were history, English, and particularly science. His hobby is dissecting animals, such as rats, in order to study them, Langer said. He is impatiently awaiting February so he may begin his pre-medical course at the university.

Whether to enlist in the army immediately or to accept a scholarship at De Paul university is the problem 18 year old Marvin Lehtman is facing. Because he believes there is a great future in the field of science when the world settles down again, he would like to do research work in organic chemistry.

Marvin is valedictorian of his class and has taken an active part in organizations, including school clubs, Boy Scouts, Y. M. C. A., and community charity clubs. He has one sister in the war department, a brother in the army reserve, and another brother in high school.

Esther Samuel, daughter of Mrs. Sophie Samuel, 1513 South Sawyer avenue, is going to Herzl college after her graduation this week from Harrison Technical High school. She had planned to attend a larger university out of the city but with one brother in the army and another one leaving soon she decided she had better stay close to home.

Active in School Affairs.

She wants to major in chemistry and mathematics but isn't sure what she will do afterwards. Of one thing she is certain, however, she is not going to be a teacher. Esther took an active part in many school activities including the press club, student leaders' round table, debating team and the Girls' Athletic association.

Eighteen year old John Mielke wanted to be a doctor but since the

Influence of War Shown in Student Plans.

Three boys and one girl were represented in the Tribune interviews of outstanding graduating seniors from the city's four general schools which draw pupils from all over Chicago. The schools are Washburne Trade, Spalding, Jones Commercial, and Flower Technical.

Clarence Markus, outstanding senior of Washburne Trade school, goes to work the day after graduation in a war plant. He will practice the trade he learned in school—tool and die making.

Hopes to Be War Pilot.

"I hope this practical experience plus what I learned in school will help me become an army pilot," he said seriously. "I register next month, and I've been thinking about the job I'd like best in the army. Being a pilot, I think, would suit me fine. And knowing tools should help me understand the insides of a plane." Clarence lives at 5157 Strong street.

Charles McCarthy of Spalding School for Crippled Children hopes to attend De Paul university and study mathematics for teaching. During the summer he worked in a defense plant, inspecting metal goods after they had been sandblasted.

Charles lives with his uncle, Martin J. Sweeney, 5719 South Green street, and comes to school every morning in the Spalding bus. He is class president as well as head of the civic, social, and cultural club. He also is interested in dramatics, particularly comedies.

Parents in Gary.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McCarthy, live in Gary, where Charles attended St. Luke's Parochial school for a while. A leg injury suffered when he was 2 years old has made it necessary for him to spend much of his time in hospitals and summer camps for crippled children.

A war time graduate who hopes to help in the rebuilding of axis seized Greece, when peace time comes again, is John Gravenitis of 3227 South Lituanica avenue, who was chosen as outstanding senior at Jones Commercial High school. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gravenitis, were born in Greece, so John wants "to see and help reconstruct" his parents' native country.

Likes Business Training.

In the meantime, John intends to continue his business training at night school in preparation for being a certified public accountant. But he expects that the army will interrupt his CPA plans for a while, because he received his questionnaire last week.

However, John figures he should make the army a good staff sergeant. That's because he has been president of his class this year and the class is composed of 64 girls and 11 boys.

"It's quite a test to keep that many girls in order—and quiet—at class meetings," he explained. "So I think that shouting orders at a group of soldiers would be easy after the job I had in school."

Enjoyed School Journalism.

Rosemary Nikolich, who represented the all-girl Flower Technical school, is interested in business journalism, altho most of her class want to be Red Cross nurses. Science is one of her favorite subjects, but her one and a half years on the school newspaper has been the most enjoyable of all her school activities, she believes.

She hopes to work her way thru business college and then get a job on a trade journal. Other interests are music—she has more than 70 classical and popular records—and sketching. She had a three year scholarship at the Art institute, where she specialized in water colors. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Risto Nikolich, 2818 Barry avenue.

Jewish Institute Players Giving 'Family Upstairs'

A former Broadway hit, "The Family Upstairs," will be presented tonight and tomorrow night by the Jewish People's institute players at 3500 Douglas boulevard. The play is directed by Jean David and is the institute's third production of the season. ### Military German to Be Offered at Elmhurst College

Dr. E. H. Dummer.

A course in Military German and a biology department venture in teaching laboratory techniques will mark the second semester opening at Elmhurst college, Feb. 1. The new courses approved by the curriculum committee to go into effect immediately are two more steps in the college program of more complete coöperation in the national war program.

Dr. E. Heyse Dummer, American-born Goethe authority and head of the department of German at Elmhurst college, will teach the new German course. A feature will be a new technique in vocabulary study to enable students, future military leaders in particular, to comprehend an enemy dispatch from an intercepted letter or radiogram or from information gathered from prisoners without recourse to a foreign language dictionary.

When the course was first suggested by Dr. Dummer, 28 students expressed interest in it. The course will be open to students who have successfully completed the first year of collegiate German.

Special wartime needs also will be met by the laboratory technique course to be offered Wednesday evenings and Saturday mornings to accommodate registrants not enrolled for other college classes. Dr. Harvey De Bruine, head of the biology department, said the overwhelming need for trained technicians is indicated by the fact that only 20,000 are available in the nation to answer a recent call for 60,000.

The laboratory technique course will be taught by Mrs. D. S. Whitney. The one semester course, Mrs. Whitney pointed out, is not a short cut of the four year college program that leads to medical technologist certificates. Material covered will give a practical background in operations ordinarily required of a laboratory assistant or of students in advanced medical and dental work. The class will be limited to 16.

WAR SHIFTS HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS' CAREER DREAMS

Many Grads on West Side Already in Uniform.

war he has settled on chemical engineering. After his graduation from Farragut High school he is going to Illinois Technical institute where he wants to get as much schooling as possible before he is called into service.

John, known as Jack to his friends, not only likes to eat but cook as well. And he can turn out cakes just as light and fluffy as his mother's. He also has a woodshop at home where he lays floors, builds cabinets, and plasters. At school he played football one season, belonged to the dancing club, the senior cabinet, and was chairman of school supplies. During other spare hours he clerks in a grocery store and reads murder mysteries. Altho he was an elevator operator in a hotel one summer and steam fitter last summer, he always takes two weeks off to go hunting and fishing with his dad in northern Wisconsin.

Would be Technician.

To be a laboratory technician is the goal of Ellemay Sgotta, daughter of Frank Sgotta, 1852 Lake street. After graduation at McKinley High school, she is going to major in chemistry at Wright Junior college and later, perhaps, attend a larger college or university. She is a former officer of the Pre-Medic club and plays the clarinet in the school band.

At home she's pretty busy, too, for she cooks and keeps house for her father, older brother, and sister. She collects pictures, speeches, and other relics of Abraham Lincoln, which she puts into scrapbooks. School parties are fun, she thinks, but not when there is dancing. For reading she prefers biographies.

Like many other 18 year old boys, Abe Lifschutz of Manley High school has felt it necessary to change his plans. Altho he formerly planned to study law he now has decided to attend Herzl Junior college and get in as much mathematics and physics as is possible before he is drafted. He registered Jan. 6, on his birthday, and already has received his questionnaire. If he is drafted he hopes to specialize in meteorology and maybe in time transfer to the air corps.

Senior Class President.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Max Lifschutz, 1636 South Springfield avenue, and he is the only boy among four girls. At school he is senior president, a fire marshal, active in intramural sports, the house of representatives, and has helped organize the civilian defense club.

"School is Ok," he says. "I like the atmosphere and the mingling with other boys and girls my age."

Lois Burton and Jessie Lee Santee of Medill High school have definite plans for the future. Lois who lives with her grandmother, Mrs. Fannie Burns, 1812 Millard avenue, plans to attend Fisk university for Negroes in Nashville, Tenn., where she will prepare herself for English teaching. Jessie, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Santee, 1335 Washington boulevard, has chosen the business world for her career. She plans to attend college and become a stenographer.

Has Music Training.

Lois also is interested in music and has taken six months vocal training outside of school and three years of piano lessons. She has written rally songs for her class. Her favorite reading is Negro history.

Jessie has been a library assistant for two years and is interested in photography and sports. Baseball, basketball, and football are her favorites.

Northwest Ration Boards Get Additional Members

Appointment of one additional member has been made for each of four ward rationing boards on the northwest side, Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago area ration administrator, announced. The new members are: Board 40-26, Joseph Phzydatek, 442 Dickens avenue, bank vice president; board 40-30, Cyrus A. Keean, 4747 Congress street, in the coal business; board 40-35, Wilfred W. Beseke, 6310 Drummond place, Chicago sanitary district engineer; board 40-38, John Roche, 6309 North Nordica avenue, heating engineer.

Boys Repair Mothers' Irons

In many cases wartime means fix it yourself time. Here two boys repair their mothers' electric irons in LaFollette park's new fix-it shop. They are Donald Olson, 11, of 1110 North Lawlor avenue (left) and Donald Hill, 13, of 1401 North Laramie avenue. The shop is one of 12 recently converted craft shops into fix-it centers in the fieldhouses of the Chicago Park district.

CONVERTED PARK FIX-IT SHOPS ARE WAR EXPEDIENT.

Instruct West Siders in Home Repairs.

Chicago's many parks are taking on a new war time service which will be made available to every home in the city. Fix-it shops in which parents and children may repair broken furniture and other household utilities are being introduced in more than a dozen fieldhouses.

The three west side fix-it shops are at Douglas, La Follette, and Sheridan parks. Here children and their parents may repair equipment which can not be replaced due to priorities and scarcity of commodities.

Convert Craft Shops.

Craft shops which formerly were used to train boys and girls in making wooden, metal, and electrical articles are being converted into repair shops for broken household furnishings and appliances. Equipment which was used to make cabinets and other handicraft is available to mend broken chairs, toys, alarm clocks, carpet sweepers, and vacuum cleaners.

F. E. Kardes, supervisor of craft shops of the Chicago park district, and Herbert C. Bart, his assistant, worked out the coördinated plan for city-wide distribution of fix-it shops. Instructors in the repair work will be handicraft supervisors who until recently were in charge of the parks program.

Douglas park's fix-it shop is under the direction of Paul Tornheim. The shop's facilities are open to boys and girls from 7 to 17 years old on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons after 3 o'clock and Saturday afternoons from 2 o'clock.

La Follette Park Schedule.

William Zobel directs the fix-it shop at La Follette. Equipment there is available after 3:30 o'clock Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday afternoons and after 9:30 o'clock Saturday mornings.

At Sheridan park Earl Harris opens the shop at 2:30 o'clock Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons and at 9:30 o'clock Saturday mornings. Adults are invited to work in the shops from 7 to 10 o'clock in the evenings on listed days.

WHEATON GLEE CLUBS TO GIVE CONCERT SERIES

The Wheaton College Men's and Women's Glee clubs soon will present concerts of sacred music in six Chicago and three suburban churches. The concerts are part of the annual midsemester tours of the clubs.

The women's club will open its series of concerts Friday in the First Baptist church, Elgin.

VICTIMS OF HAY FEVER WOULD BE AIDED BY BILL

Altho he is not himself a sufferer from hay fever, Donald R. Murray, supervisor of the town of Milton, Du Page county, has many friends who are seasonal sneezers and in their behalf he is urging a bill which would compel all Illinois townships to cut noxious weeds, annually, including ragweed and thistles.

Believing that ragweed should be taken into consideration as a health matter and treated as such, Mr. Murray has received the support of the County Officials association, supervisors' division, of which he is a member of the legislative committtee, and the Township Officials organization, of which he is a trustee.

William J. Rose of Wheaton, one of hay fever's annual victims, was among the first to suggest to Mr. Murray that state legislative action be taken to compel weed cutting.

Elgin Skating Exhibition Today to Aid War Relief

GLENBARD HIGH FINDS GAS DOLE AFFECTS PUPILS

Glenbard High school, Glen Ellyn, has found it necessary to make certain adjustments because of gas rationing regulations. The number of cars parked around the school has shown a marked decrease, and added use is being made of the bicycle racks.

Three points outlined by Principal Fred L. Biester are as follows:

The bus service for students residing outside Glen Ellyn was imperiled by the addition of about fifty more passengers because rationing stopped students with cars from driving to school. Another bus was needed but could not be obtained because of the same difficulties all over the state. The only remedy for this was an extra trip for students living in and around Keeneyville.

Buses cannot be used for transportation of athletic teams or supplies necessitating volunteers with cars to drive the teams to away from home games.

Since the buses cannot be used and A cards get only four gallons of gasoline a week, fans driving to out of town games will be fewer in number, which will cut down much needed receipts at the games.

Exceptions to the strict rules are few, but a certain farmer boy who is obliged to drive to school from Lisle has a "C" card as the most prized possession of his belongings.

One of the faculty members drives each day from Chicago, picking up four other teachers on the way.

Resurrection Altar Society.

4 MONTH INFANT GETS BEETHOVEN WITH HIS CEREAL

OakPark Father Uses New Library of Recordings.

Classical music has been added to the diet of a 4 month old infant in Oak Park. "Junior" is getting Tschaikowski, Beethoven and Brahms along with his formula and orange juice. And the selections his father chooses to play for him come from the library of phonograph records at the Oak Park public library.

The record lending plan was started about 10 months ago, under the guidance of Dr. James Hubert Skiles. Possessing a large collection of recordings himself, Dr. Skiles long had advocated a collection which might be available to music lovers unable to purchase their own records. Last February he raised $1,250 by popular subscription, and the collection was begun with 1,000 recordings. Since that time, additional gifts have made it possible to bring the collection to 1,500, all of a classical or semi-classical nature.

Enjoyment in Own Homes.

It was not long before the new collection became popular. In a matter of days there were hundreds carrying home concertos, symphonies, and operas, that they might listen to again and again in the comfort of their easy chairs.

In the 10 months since Dr. Skiles originated the collection, the librarians have watched with interest the increasing number of "regulars" who come back each week to return records, and take out new selections. The father who declares he is "conditioning" his 4 month old infant to appreciate good music; the family which comes each Wednesday evening and stands by while "Papa" picks out the music for next week; the young husband who checks out everything the collection has to offer by the Russian composer who recently came into international prominence, saying, "I'm trying to teach my wife to appreciate Shostakovitch."

One Daily Borrower.

One young man, who conducted his own small business establishment, was perhaps their most enthusiastic "customer." Almost daily he took out new selections. Once he waited at the library thruout an entire Saturday for a certain album of operetta selections to be returned. A few weeks ago he arrived with a woebegone expression, announcing to the librarian that he was to make his last selection—that the next day he was going to the army. The librarian is sorry that she failed to note just what his selection was—"It would have been interesting to learn if he chose Gilbert and Sullivan, or Wagner, for his last musical evening in civilian life."

When the Rosary college girls put on a dramatic presentation last fall, they used every recording of a storm scene the collection had to offer. Recordings of the "Mikado" are surprisingly popular, possibly because of the way the composers poke fun at the Japanese. Whole families come into the library on Wednesday evenings, or on Saturday afternoons—some making their selections after family pow-wows, others entrusting the selection to the more musically informed members of the group. The librarians note that more young men take advantage of the collection than any one other group. Young mothers come in to select "Peter and the Wolf," the Strauss waltzes, and other similarly tuneful disks for their preschool children.

The collection, which is opened to Oak Park residents and holders of nonresident cards, is handled much the same as the book collection. The intricate system of cataloging, which contains many cross references as to composer, artist, conductor, instrument, and type of music, was compiled by Mrs. Evelyn Beecher Becker. Miss Genevieve Lewis is in charge of the circulation of records.

The records are checked carefully both before they go out of the library and before they are put back on the shelves. To date there has been little damage—and that was called to the librarian's attention by the man who returned the damaged records.

Thus far, Tschaikowsky's Concerto No. 1 in B-flat minor, Grieg's Concerto in A minor, Beethoven's Symphony No. 6 in F major [Pastoral]," and the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas have been the most popular. But Oak Park residents have a lively interest and a wide variety of tastes—so next month the favorites may be Gershwin, Sibelius, and Strawinsky.

NAVY MEN GIVE 'AHOY, AMERICA' A NOVEL TOUCH

W-G-N Show Presented as Dress Rehearsal.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The bluejackets and marines at Navy pier are putting on a lively and entertaining show titled "Ahoy America," every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock over W-G-N. "Ahoy America" is presented by men from the Naval Aviation technical training school in coöperation with W-G-N.

The show reflects the work and life of the men at Navy pier. And a lot of comedy is woven into the scripts by "Margie," a girl interested in the navy, and "Mac," a typical bluejacket. The rôle of Margie is played by Songstress Mary Ann Mercer, who rations out one song each week.

Given as Dress Rehearsal.

The show is presented as a dress rehearsal. This gives it spontaneity and informality. Listeners get an accurate picture of how a big time variety radio program is put together. Frequently the progress of the show is interrupted while Morrison Wood, the producer, gives instructions to the cast. Since Wood is actually busy directing the show his part is played on the air by Forrest Lewis. Cuts are made in the script and so announced on the air. Sometimes some of the music, presented by the Navy Pier Orchestra and Glee club, directed by Lt. Orrin Tucker may be repeated.

"This novel form of putting on a show," said Wood, "puts the members of the cast at ease and makes for a livelier show. Informality is the key note of the program and entertainment for navy personnel and radio listeners the primary objective. Informing listeners how the navy men work, study, and play is a supplementary objective."

Kirkpatrick Sets the Pace.

Jess Kirkpatrick, master of ceremonies, gives the show a lot of added pep and pace—and delights the bluejackets attending the shows with his magic tricks before broadcasts.

Kirkpatrick and Miss Mercer, thru their inquiries, introduce a lot of humor about navy practices, terms, and traditions. Sample:

Lt. Tucker: You should have said, Lieutenant Tucker, J. G., Jess.

Kirkpatrick: What does the "J. G." stand for? Just gottem?

And Margie turns out to be the kind of girl who, upon an introduction to a chief petty officer exclaims: "Grand; I like to pet, too." This brings forth a shrill chorus of whistles and applause from the bluejackets.

Capt. Richard F. Whitehead, chief of staff to Rear Adm. A. C. Read, chief of the technical training command; Comm. J. N. Walton, executive officer of the pier, and Bernice Parks, stage star, will be guests next Tuesday.

EDITOR FOR 50 YEARS, A. L. HALL LOOKS AT CAREER

Argo Newspaper Man Still Enthusiastic About Job.

Albert L. Hall this week is being congratulated on the occasion of his 50th year as an active newspaper man. Now editor of the Des Plaines Valley News at Argo, Mr. Hall is as enthusiastic about getting his paper to press as on Jan. 27, 1893, when he purchased the Weekly Express at Leland, Ill. Much of the veteran editor's career has been experienced in the west suburban area.

Albert L. Hall.

Two years after making his first venture in the publishing field, Mr. Hall took over the Earlville Gazette and merged it with the Leland paper into the La Salle County Gazette-Express. In 1898 he sold out and became owner of the Chronicle in St. Charles, where he was born and where his grandparents settled 100 years ago.

Owned Elgin Courier.

Five years later Mr. Hall organized a company and purchased the Elgin Courier. In 1910 the controling interest was sold to Col. Ira C. Copley of Aurora. Later he assisted Atty. Frank R. Reid in starting the Aurora Daily Star. He also purchased and consolidated the Stillman Valley Graphic, the Byron Express, and the Leaf River Mirror in Ogle county.

Entering the Chicago suburban field in 1917 with the purchase of the Forest Park Review, Mr. Hall continued as one of the owners until 1931, and remained as editor until 1938, when he became editor of the Oak Parker. He became editor of the Argo paper in 1941. With his wife and daughter he resides at 225 South Taylor avenue, Oak Park.

Writes Column of Comment.

In his editorships Mr. Hall has usually conducted a column of comment, and his column, "Chicago and the World Around It," is syndicated to a number of weekly papers. He was president of the Suburban Publishers' association for three years, and was at one time vice president of the Illinois Press association. Last year Mr. Hall won the National Editorial association award for an editorial on Horace Greeley.

"Type was set by hand and there were no schools of journalism when I began," said Mr. Hall when asked to comment on his career. "There have been few days when I haven't had to face a 'deadline' for sometimes two or three papers. I enjoy Argo, located as it is in the midst of industries. If there had been more time between the brief gaps when I left one paper for another, I would like to have attended a school of journalism. I never felt the urge to engage in any other business."

AURORA VETERAN, BACK IN SERVICE, HOPES TO SEE SON

E. J. Patton, 48, of Aurora, recently commissioned a captain in the United States anti-aircraft service, hopes to run across his son, Thomas, 22, a first lieutenant in the same branch of service, before the war is over. Thomas has been on the fighting front in New Guinea for several months. Recently he was cited for bravery.

Capt. Patton, advertising manager of the Stephens Adamson company, won a commission as an aerial observer of artillery fire in the last war. Later he was assigned to the anti-aircraft service. He was a first lieutenant when the war came to an end.

His most thrilling experience in World War I. came to Capt. Patton when he was a spotter for cannoneers. He took his notes from over the field of fire in an old Jennie which, in a good tail wind, could not make more than 100 miles an hour.

Capt. Patton was sent for by his commander of World War I. days, Col. H. W. Hodgins.

War Correspondent Talks Wednesday in Oak Park

Alvin J. Steinkopf, former Associated Press correspondent in Berlin, will address an Oak Park civilian defense forum at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in the Hawthorne school gymnasium.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Jan. 25.

Preparations should be made for early seed sowing, such as getting together a number of flats or boxes, soil, sprinkler, drainage material, and pots.

Seed boxes may consist of small cigar boxes, seed pans, which are simply low pots, or standard pots may be used if care is exercised when watering. A convenient size box is about 2½ inches deep, 12 inches wide, and 18 inches long. The bottom should have a crack between each board or have holes bored in it to prevent stagnant or saturated soil.

Tuesday, Jan. 26.

It is best to sow seeds in rows rather than broadcast, for cultivation is easier, each plant has its share of light, and the soil between the rows can be stirred without disturbing the plants.

After the seeds have germinated, the young plants should be given the maximum of light. The average light conditions in homes is not always adequate and, of necessity, the plants must be placed directly in a window.

Wednesday, Jan. 27.

Grapes and other hardy woody plants can be pruned now. However, later pruning will not prove disastrous but grapes and plants that are likely to bleed after the sap becomes active, are best pruned while at rest or before activity begins.

Prune heavily to obtain new wood.

Thursday, Jan. 28.

In the outdoor trees and shrubs are infested with scales spray with lime-sulphur on warm days. If pests of any kind are present be sure to adopt a spray calendar and follow it.

See that all bulbs and roots are continuing in good condition. Amaryllis bulbs can be started. Stored bulbs will start into activity without watering. When the flower stalk appears, top dress it with fresh soil and water once. Keep the soil moist.

Friday, Jan. 29.

Bring in a few branches of shrubs for flowering. Each branch must contain flower buds or no flowers will be had.

Try the goldenbell, bridal wreath, sassafras, birch, pussy willow, cornelian cherry, pawpaw, magnolia, or some tree stems like the buckeye which will open its large leaf buds.

Saturday, Jan. 30.

Buy good, fresh seeds each season instead of relying on those saved from the garden. Try or test the germinating power before sowing. Do this by placing a certain number of seeds, say 50 to 100, between moist blotting paper. In a short time it will germinate.

Count the good ones to obtain the percentage of those to be sown. It never pays to use poor seeds, for sowing may have to be done again later on.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

PAINTING HOME SEEN PATRIOTIC, GOOD ECONOMY

No Scarcity of Painters, Material, Says Report.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

In case you have heard that painters are scarce and have been led to believe that neglect to do necessary painting for the preservation of property is a patriotic course to pursue, you have been misled!

In fact, just the reverse is true. From coast to coast, says the National Paint, Varnish, and Lacquer association, paint manufacturers, contractors, jobbers, and dealers are emphasizing their ability to do their part in helping preserve the assets of the American people from rot, rust, and decay.

No Lack of Paint.

There are painting contractors available to protect and conserve your property, inside and outside a building, and there is no lack of good paint which you are free to purchase in paint stores and paint departments.

Paints, varnishes, enamels, and lacquers are all surface savers that make your property last longer. Hence in war time they are even more than just ordinary sensible economies, they are truly patriotic materials, and use of them, for protection and conservation, is a patriotic service!

Advocates of winter painting do not recommend painting in below freezing temperature as a general practice, but there are plenty of days in winter, in most regions, when the temperature remains above the freezing point or only a little below it.

Dust Less Likely.

Furthermore in winter there are no insects to stick in the paint, many vines have lost their leaves and there is less likelihood of dust in the air.

The brighter and more temperate winter days are the ones which should be selected for exterior winter painting and no special mixing is necessary. However paint should be left outdoors long enough to bring it to approximately the same temperature as the surface to be painted. If warm paint is applied to a cold surface the film may crawl.

vlw

It is obvious that winter exterior painting should be placed in the hands of an expert painter, able to judge of proper weather conditions and proceed carefully with any earlier-than-usual paint jobs. A definite current opportunity does exist for many owners to protect their property from decay, rust and rot by exterior as well as interior painting, without letting the deterioration exist until spring.

6 WEST SUBURBS TO EXTEND JOINT LIBRARY SERVICE

Plan for Interchange of Technical Books.

Under a new arrangement decided upon by the librarians of six suburbs along the Burlington railroad, patrons are to be offered a broader service thru an interchange of certain unusual or technical books. The plan calls for cards of introduction, useful for a single transaction, which will be recognized by the coöperating libraries.

Regulations have provided that no person could obtain books from libraries away from home unless he paid an outsider's fee which ranges from $1 to $3 a year. This condition will continue to prevail, but patrons in good standing, whether home folks or persons who reside over the district boundaries, will have new privileges.

Card Good at Any Library.

If a special book is sought and found unavailable at the home library, a card issued by the local librarian will be good at the library of the neighboring village. Due to particular community demands, it has been found that the libraries vary in their special collections.

The meeting held at the La Grange library to discuss the new service, which will be free to local card holders, was attended by the following six librarians:

Miss Grace W. Gilman, Riverside; Miss Rebecca Ditto, La Grange; Mrs. Freda Humphris, Downers Grove; Miss Marian James, acting, Hinsdale; Miss Alice Dandridge, Western Springs; and Mrs. Fredrika Wil[illegible], Brookfield.

Variety of Subjects.

Books possessed by certain libraries having a greater emphasis on certain subjects than those of their neighbors include volumes on contemporary poetry, Downers Grove; drama, Western Springs; gardening and interior decorating, Hinsdale; costuming and biographies, La Grange; music, Brookfield; and reference and American history, Riverside.

The lists of books in the special collections as well as the unusual or expensive books to be exchanged will be compiled so that each librarian may know what type of material can be borrowed from the other five libraries.

The next meeting of the group of librarians will be held March 2 at the La Grange library.

Alpha Gamma Delta.

Members of the west side group of Alpha Gamma Delta alumnæ will meet at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the home of Mrs. Arthur L. Schultz, 1031 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park.

An important message to the women of America

FROM THE MAKERS OF RED CROSS SHOES

The President of The United States has asked that the name, "Red Cross," be discontinued in connection with all commercial products.

To millions of American women, perhaps the most familiar product bearing this name is the Red Cross Shoe.

It has been known by this proud name for a great deal longer than you can probably remember—as a matter of fact, for over 50 years.

With our nation at war, however, we realize that many Americans are having to give up, for the duration, many of the things they have long treasured.

We who make Red Cross Shoes, therefore, and the thousands of merchants who sell them, unhesitatingly accede, during this critical war period, to the wishes of our President.

And, as we do so—as the name "Red Cross Shoe" becomes "Gold Cross Shoe" (our shoes will be so labeled as rapidly as possible)—we make this pledge:

Gold Cross Shoes will continue to be Red Cross Shoes in every way. They will be made by the same skilled craftsmen, in the same factories, over the same famous "Limit" lasts, and sold by the same merchants.

There is, we believe, no higher pledge we can make to the women of America.

JOINT FUND DRIVE OPENS THURSDAY AT GLEN ELLYN

Four Groups Co-operating in 11 Day Campaign.

Four Glen Ellyn organizations which have contributed to many of the community war projects are coöperating in the 1943 joint fund drive which opens Thursday night and continues thru Feb. 7.

The coöperating groups in this third annual joint drive are the United Charities, Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., and Boy Scouts, all represented by the four-leaf clover campaign insignia which will "bloom" in a window of almost every Glen Ellyn home and store during the 11 day campaign.

William G. MacGregor, 651 Euclid street, chairman of the joint fund committee, said the drive has the backing of all of Glen Ellyn's civic leaders, clergymen, and business men because of the accomplishments of all four groups in guiding the youth of the community and their aid in scrap drives, bond sales and other war projects.

Praises Youth Groups.

"The three youth groups are helping our boys and girls to prepare themselves for the important tasks they are certain to face during the next few years, whether those years bring an early peace or a continuing war," Mr. MacGregor said, "and in addition all three are being called upon almost every week to serve in war campaigns such as scrap drives, distribution of government material and service with the civilian defense officials.

"The United Charities has had fewer cases of destitution during the last year," Mr. MacGregor continued, "but the many changes in family life resulting from the war have brought this agency new problems which it has capably met."

Commanders Are Named.

Charles B. Weaver, 788 Revere road, chairman of the 1941 and 1942 joint fund campaigns, has been appointed a zone commander for this year's drive. Other commanders are James Churm, 732 Western avenue; Orth Baer, 523 Hill avenue; Herbert A. Gustin, 471 Phillips avenue; Mrs. Kimball Neal, 675 Euclid avenue, and Nevin I. Gage, 532 Oak street.

SCOUTS PUBLISH TROOP NEWS IN COLUMBUS PARK

Monthly Paper Brings New Charter.

Boy Scouts are pioneers at heart. They have learned how to take care of themselves in the woods. They have proven efficient in flood and fire emergencies. They are OCD messengers and they take part in many community and citizenship projects. Now 37 Boy Scouts from Columbus park are pioneering in a new field.

A year of editing, writing, and publishing has won for them the first newspaper Scout charter in the middle west, the Columbus park Scouts claim. The "367 Review" is a six page monthly which troop 367 publishes 12 times a year.

Patterned After Daily.

Patterned after a large newspaper, the miniature has features, news stories, and comics. The pictures are taken by a scout amateur photographer and cartoons are drawn by a talented scout.

The paper was started in October, 1941, as a mimeographed sheet. After three months the troop decided to make their publication as much like a real newspaper as possible and as soon as they found a printer they set to work.

Stuart Bachman is the editor; Don Simmons, the cartoonist, and Bernie Cohen, the photographer. Other staff members are Dan Roin, copy editor; Don Reuben, sports editor; Sheldon Nemerovski, rewrite editor; Bob Pearlman, circulation manager, and Gil Eckerling and Howard Satin, reporters.

Advisor Gone to War.

Until the army claimed him recently, Don Mann, the scoutmaster and a former newspaperman, was their advisor. The editor passes out assignments each month and to have an article published verbatim is each scribe's goal.

The 14 year old editor who hopes someday to be a "real for sure" reporter writes the editorials. One month he pans the patrol leaders, another time he goes after a committee which has fallen down on the job and so on thru the year he criticizes and praises the various projects and achievements of the troop.

The troop consists of 14 and 15 year old boys. The staff was selected by a committee of parents and members remain on the staff as long as they do their job well. The majority of them hope to be newspaper men and until that chance comes they plan to work hard and "put out the best scout paper in the United States."

DR. DAVID NYVALL, RETIRED COLLEGE HEAD, TURNS 80

North Park Associates Honor Him at Dinner.

Prof. David Nyvall, president emeritus of North Park college, was honored last week on his 80th birthday, when a group of friends and former students gathered for a testimonial dinner. The celebration, held in the parlors of the North Park Covenant church, was arranged by the administration and board of North Park college.

Prof. Nyvall was born Jan. 19, 1863, in Karlskova, Varmland, Sweden, the son of a lay preacher, C. J. Nyvall. He was graduated from college in Gevle in 1882, and from the University of Upsala in 1884. Matriculating the following year in the Carolinian institute in Stockholm, he intended to pursue the study of medicine. Ill health forced him to withdraw, and in the spring of 1886 he came to America.

Was Pastor in Iowa.

Here he served for a time as a clergyman in Sioux City, Ia. From 1888 to 1890 he was assistant professor in the Swedish department of the Chicago Theological seminary.

In 1891 Prof. Nyvall became president of the Covenant school in Minneapolis. Two years later this school was moved to Chicago, and became North Park college. Prof. Nyvall resigned its presidency in 1905, and served the next two years as president of Walden college, in McPherson, Kas. From 1910 to 1912 he was professor of Scandinavian languages and literature in the University of Washington, Seattle.

Headed North Park Until '23.

North Park again claimed Prof. Nyvall as its president in 1912, and he served in that capacity until 1923, when he was made president emeritus. He remained active as a teacher, however, until five years ago, being professor of New Testament studies in the theological seminary.

Prof. Nyvall is widely known among the Swedish people in America as a teacher, lecturer, and writer. Among his numerous published works is a trilogy of New Testament studies, the titles of the volumes being Via Dolorosa, Via Vitalis, and Via Regia. The latter was published in Stockholm in 1936.

Also at 8 o'clock Thursday evening are the commencement exercises at Steinmetz High school auditorium, 3030 North Mobile avenue. Dr. Charles W. Gilkey will be the speaker, and students participating in the program include Theodore Zimmerman, Bernard Trandel, James Arcucci, Max S. Stack, and Irwin W. Harland. Principal Daniel F. O'Hearn will introduce the speaker, as well as present science awards. Grover C. Ramsey, assistant principal, will present the graduating class, and Cornelius F. Henze will award the diplomas. Music will be given by the orchestra under direction of Willard L. Groom, with Walter Wolodkin and Francine Ekquist as soloists.

Commencement activities at Schurz High school, 3601 Milwaukee, will be held at 8 o'clock Thursday evening in the school auditorium. Dr. Preston Bradley will be the principal speaker. Students on the program include Michael Graczyk, Doris Gilbertsen, Gerald Kannenberg, and Jean Schultz. There will be music by the orchestra and Carl Schurz choristers, and presentation of diplomas by Albert G. Bauersfeld, school principal.

Student participating in the commencement program at Taft High school, 5625 North Natoma avenue, at 8 o'clock Thursday evening, include Charlotte A. Frank, Frank Bostwick, and Leila M. Anderson. Maj. Lawris M. Eek will give the address, and Principal L. A. Hoefer will present the diplomas. The girls' chorus directed by Ruth B. Lino will sing, and there will be music by the Taft Symphony orchestra.

Tuley All-Student Program.

There will be an all-student program at the commencement at Tuley High school, 1313 North Claremont avenue, at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. Speakers will include Herbert Figas, Rosalind Nechamkin, Allen Rebhan, Esther Falkoff, Josephine Migdal, Hugo Korn, and Maxine Ziv. Alvin Miller will play a violin solo, accompanied by Edith Brucker. Principal Hazel L. Stillman will present the diplomas.

The Wells High school commencement, in the school auditorium, 936 North Ashland avenue, at 8 o'clock Thursday evening, will feature a symposium by a panel of student speakers. There also will be music by the graduating class and the school orchestra.

Because of the abundance of student talent, Von Steuben High school, 5039 North Kimball avenue, is importing no talent for its commencement program this year. The exercises will be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in the Roosevelt High school auditorium, which has a larger seating capacity than Von Steuben's own assembly hall. Student speakers will include Jack Scham, Gertrude Axelrod, Phyllis Wildman, and Marshall Moses. There will be piano solos by Merle Schutt and Beatrice Bell, a piano duet by Leonára Green and Judit Mendelsohn, a violin solo by Albert Shlay, a cello solo by Avram Lavin, and a vocal duet by Joyce Berquist and Howard Erickson.

Other music will be by the symphonic choir under the direction of C. J. Thomas, and the orchestra directed by C. H. Schnell. Participating in the presentation of diplomas will be Principal Varian M. Shea, R.

STAR STUDENTS TELL OF FUTURE HOPES DEFERRED

Tribune Interviews Northwest Siders.

Their mothers and fathers left high school bent on becoming doctors or lawyers or teachers. Their uncles and aunts knew that the years immediately after graduation would hold the beginning of a life's profession or business. But the high school graduates of January, 1943, are bewildered—uncertain of anything but the immediate future and the part they must play in the war. That they will be sailors and soldiers and aviators for the next few years the boys are sure. Beyond those next few years they have not let themselves think.

The representative high school seniors interviewed by the TRIBUNE last week voiced much the same opinion. Several years ago they had ambitions to become choral directors, doctors, and engineers. But many of the boys have already received their draft questionnaires, and, as one lad put it, "They aren't even teaching choral directing anywhere these days!"

Principal's Daughter Chosen.

From Foreman High school came bright-eyed Margaret Claxton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Claxton, 5218 Wellington avenue. Margaret's father is principal of Nobel grammar school, and all her life Margaret has led her classes scholastically. It's kept her pretty busy disproving the fact that any one with good marks is, as she puts it, a "fuddy-duddy." Margaret Claxton is valedictorian of her class, but she has successfully proved she is no "fuddy-duddy" by also heading the senior prom committee, editing the features for the school newspaper, and holding office in several school organizations.

Margaret will probably carry on the profession of her mother and father—teaching. If she could find any one to teach her first, she'd like to learn Chinese, and then teach it, for a friend has told her what a "beautiful philosophy" the Chinese have. Margaret will spend the spring at a typing job in a radio station, and then go on to the University of Illinois next fall.

Army, Not Choral Directing.

Howard Erickson, Von Steuben's representative student, is the son of Mrs. Wendela Erickson, 5043 North Lowell avenue. Red-haired, a serious young fellow, Howard has always been active in school musicals and dramatics, and had planned to go on to Augustana college at Rock Island to learn choral directing. But he has already received his draft questionnaire, and since he reached the rank of cadet lieutenant colonel in the Von Steuben R. O. T. C., it's the army life for him.

It doesn't matter how old he is when the war's over, Howard declares. He's going on to school no matter what the sacrifice. Most of the boys in his class feel the same way, he believes—they know they must have some trade to earn a living—and jumping right out of school into khaki doesn't give a fellow much of a chance at learning civilian trades.

Herbert Figas, Tuley High school representative, has a part time job in a loop department store, and had hoped for a career in business, or as a commercial teacher. But he enters Wright Junior college in the navy's V-1 intensive training course in February, so it may be some time before he gets around to more business training. He's already had his draft questionnaire, and two of the fellows from his class will be inducted into the army after graduation.

President of His Class.

Herbert, the son of Mrs. Ella Figas, 2649 North Albany avenue, is the president of his graduating class. He made the honor roll for four semesters and served the football team as its manager. He wanted to attend the University of Illinois—"but it seemed a shame to waste the money when I might be called any minute."

Doris Gilbertsen of Schurz High thinks women are getting the best breaks nowadays, with all the jobs opening in interesting fields. As for her, she's had her heart set on advertising, and has learned all she could about it on the school paper and on the weekly church publication. Besides that, Doris has been vice president of her class, president of the Beta Tri Hi-Y, and officer in several other school organizations.

Only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert O. Gilbertsen, 5103 Grace street, Doris plans to spend the spring semester at North Park college, then transfer in the fall to Illinois Wesleyan college at Bloomington. Doris didn't make the honor roll at Schurz, but she echoes the sentiment prevalent among all of this year's representative students—that being a good student isn't all a matter of grades.

Robert Bouer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Bouer, 4857 North Drake avenue, was national president of the Pan-American league, editor of Roosevelt High school's Spanish newspaper, and president of the Spanish club, besides other student activities. For a while he toyed with the idea of a business career in South America, but in recent years he has decided to become a doctor. He will enter the University of Illinois for a pre-medic

W-G-N Show Presented as Dress Rehearsal.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The bluejackets and marines at Navy pier are putting on a lively and entertaining show titled "Ahoy America," every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock over W-G-N. "Ahoy America" is presented by men from the Naval Aviation technical training school in coöperation with W-G-N.

The show reflects the work and life of the men at Navy pier. And a lot of comedy is woven into the scripts by "Margie," a girl interested in the navy, and "Mac," a typical bluejacket. The rôle of Margie is played by Songstress Mary Ann Mercer, who rations out one song each week.

The show is presented as a dress rehearsal. This gives it spontaneity and informality. Listeners get an accurate picture of how a big time variety radio program is put together. Frequently the progress of the show is interrupted while Morrison Wood, the producer, gives instructions to the cast. Since Wood is actually busy directing the show his part is played on the air by Forrest Lewis. Cuts are made in the script and so announced on the air. Sometimes some of the music, presented by the Navy Pier Orchestra and Glee club, directed by Lt. Orrin Tucker may be repeated.

"This novel form of putting on a show," said Wood, "puts the members of the cast at ease and makes for a livelier show. Informality is the key note of the program and entertainment for navy personnel and radio listeners—the primary objective. Informing listeners how the navy men work, study, and play is a supplementary objective."

Capt. Richard F. Whitehead, chief of staff to Rear Adm. A. C. Read, chief of the technical training command; Comm. J. N. Walton, executive officer of the pier, and Bernice Parks, stage star, will be guests next Tuesday.

'SWEETHEARTS' NEXT OPERETTA ON AIR THEATER

Victor Herbert's operetta, 'Sweethearts," will be broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air from 8 to 9 p. m. Saturday on W-G-N and the Mutual network. Marion Claire, Felix Knight, Virginia Haskins, and Earl Wilkie will be cast in the leading rôles.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will speak.

Miss Claire will sing the rôle of Sylvia, the feminine lead, and Knight will portray Prince Franz. Liane will be played by Miss Haskins, soprano of the Chicago Opera company; Wilkie will be cast as Van Tromp.

course the day after his graduation from Roosevelt, but he isn't very optimistic about how long he will be able to continue his studies before he's called to the service.

Kelvyn Park Picks Scholar.

Kelvyn Park High school is represented by Herbert Young, 17, son of Mrs. Hazel Young of 2242 North Kildare avenue. First in scholastic standing in his class for four years, Herbert still found time to serve as one of the sales managers of Kelvyn Life, the school paper, and sales manager and division biography editor of the annual, the Kelvynian. His chief interests in school were in mathematics, history and bookkeeping. His hobby was reading—books on current affairs, aviation, meteorology and autobiography. He likes to keep up to date on new model planes; once made models of his own.

Winner of a scholarship at the Central Y. M. C. A. college, he expects to begin there next month. Then—when July comes and he is 18—he will volunteer for the navy air corps. His father, who died in Hines hospital in 1936, was in the navy in the last war. His brother has volunteered for the army air corps. His spare time, at the moment, is spent in working at a war plant near his home.

Sailing Is Hobby.

Frank Bostwick, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Bostwick of 7022 Olcott avenue, was chosen the outstanding student at Taft High school. Chemistry, biology and physics were his favorite subjects at school. Journalism was a close second to his interest in science. Sports editor of the "Taft Tribune," he was president of the senior class, member of the National Honor society, the French club and the swimming team. A Sea Scout, his chief hobby was sailing. During the school year he worked with other scouts aboard the "Spindrift" in Edison Park. His father was skipper. In the summer he had his own boat at Lake Gilbert in central Wisconsin.

He plans to enter Wright Junior college next month "to brush up" on mathematics and aviation; and to volunteer for the navy air corps, when he turns 18.

Edgar Eudeikis, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Eudeikis of 3111 Odell avenue, was voted "most outstanding" at Steinmetz High school. Treasurer of the National Honor society and assistant sports editor of the "Steinmetz Star," Eudeikis was formerly president of the Mathematics club. He was also a member of the swimming team. At school, mathematics, chemistry and wood shop work were his major interest. Out of school his chief interests were model airplane building, reading, football, baseball and swimming.

Aids Bond and Scrap Drive.

A former Boy Scout, he assisted in the bond and scrap drives at Steinmetz. He will wait until June before entering college, for he plans to be a candidate for a scholarship to the Illinois Institute of Technology. He hopes to major in college in fire protection engineering. When 18 he will volunteer for the navy air corps.

Representative of Wells High school is Vincent Mennella, 17, of 2444 Erie street. President of the senior class, division delegate to the student council, he also was a member of the Debating club, Latin and College clubs and the Science Planning group. He will graduate on the honor roll. His favorite courses in school were Latin, physics, and chemistry. Reading books on political science and current affairs, together with football, have occupied his time "after hours."

Mennella hopes to enter Wright Junior college soon and—at 18—to volunteer for the army air corps. "I want to be a pilot," he said.

Paul Orser, 2130 Irving Park road, senior class president, is Lane Technical High school's outstanding graduate. His major has been welding, and as a welder he will begin work in a war plant the Monday after graduation—the same day he registers for the draft.

it was thrilling
to realize that washing anything at home was unnecessary. I was elated to learn that fine silken fabrics, rayons, hose and the most fragile things I wear are washed with costlier, milder soaps in clean, filtered soft water. Because of the meticulous ironing of all flat items and the hand finishing of doilies, Madeiras and needlework, and because of its size and very low price, I naturally favor Edgewater's.

An important message to the women of America

FROM THE MAKERS OF RED CROSS SHOES

The President of The United States has asked that the name, "Red Cross," be discontinued in connection with all commercial products.

To millions of American women, perhaps the most familiar product bearing this name is the Red Cross Shoe.

It has been known by this proud name for a great deal longer than you can probably remember—as a matter of fact, for over 50 years.

With our nation at war, however, we realize that many Americans are having to give up, for the duration, many of the things they have long treasured.

We who make Red Cross Shoes, therefore, and the thousands of merchants who sell them, unhesitatingly accede, during this critical war period, to the wishes of our President.

And, as we do so—as the name "Red Cross Shoe" becomes "Gold Cross Shoe" (our shoes will be so labeled as rapidly as possible)—we make this pledge:

Gold Cross Shoes will continue to be Red Cross Shoes in every way. They will be made by the same skilled craftsmen, in the same factories, over the same famous "Limit" lasts, and sold by the same merchants.

There is, we believe, no higher pledge we can make to the women of America.

LEADING SENIORS IN FOUR SCHOOLS VOICE AMBITIONS

Influence of War Shown in Student Plans.

Three boys and one girl were represented in the Tribune interviews of outstanding graduating seniors from the city's four general schools which draw pupils from all over Chicago. The schools are Washburne Trade, Spalding, Jones Commercial, and Flower Technical.

Clarence Markus, outstanding senior of Washburne Trade school, goes to work the day after graduation in a war plant. He will practice the trade he learned in school—tool and die making.

Hopes to Be War Pilot.

"I hope this practical experience plus what I learned in school will help me become an army pilot," he said seriously. "I register next month, and I've been thinking about the job I'd like best in the army. Being a pilot, I think, would suit me fine. And knowing tools should help me understand the insides of a plane." Clarence lives at 5157 Strong street.

Charles McCarthy of Spalding School for Crippled Children hopes to attend De Paul university and study mathematics for teaching. During the summer he worked in a defense plant, inspecting metal goods after they had been sandblasted.

Charles lives with his uncle, Martin J. Sweeney, 5719 South Green street, and comes to school every morning in the Spalding bus. He is class president as well as head of the civic, social, and cultural club. He also is interested in dramatics, particularly comedies.

Parents in Gary.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McCarthy, live in Gary, where Charles attended St. Luke's Parochial school for a while. A leg injury suffered when he was 2 years old has made it necessary for him to spend much of his time in hospitals and summer camps for crippled children.

A war time graduate who hopes to help in the rebuilding of axis seized Greece, when peace time comes again, is John Gravenitis of 3227 South Lituanica avenue, who was chosen as outstanding senior at Jones Commercial High school. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gravenitis, were born in Greece, so John wants "to see and help reconstruct" his parents' native country.

Likes Business Training.

In the meantime, John intends to continue his business training at night school in preparation for being a certified public accountant. But he expects that the army will interrupt his CPA plans for a while, because he received his questionnaire last week.

However, John figures he should make the army a good staff sergeant. That's because he has been president of his class this year and the class is composed of 64 girls and 11 boys.

"It's quite a test to keep that many girls in order—and quiet—at class meetings," he explained. "So I think that shouting orders at a group of soldiers would be easy after the job I had in school."

Enjoyed School Journalism.

Rosemary Nikolich, who represented the all-girl Flower Technical school, is interested in business journalism, altho most of her class want to be Red Cross nurses. Science is one of her favorite subjects, but her one and a half years on the school newspaper has been the most enjoyable of all her school activities, she believes.

She hopes to work her way thru business college and then get a job on a trade journal. Other interests are music—she has more than 70 classical and popular records—and sketching. She had a three year scholarship at the Art institute, where she specialized in water colors. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Risto Nikolich, 2818 Barry avenue.

STAR SENIORS' AIM: HELP WIN WAR

42 ENTER RACE FOR NORTH SIDE COUNCIL SEATS

Spirited Battles in 3 Wards Expected.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Forty-two candidates for the 10 north side council seats to be filled in the Feb. 23 aldermanic elections or the April 6 runoffs filed their nominating petitions before the deadline. The field may be reduced by Feb. 3, the last day a candidate may withdraw. Tomorrow is the dealine for objections to petitions.

Lively contests in most of the wards are indicated by the entry lists. Particularly spirited fights are expected in the 43d, 47th, and 50th wards, where runoffs are anticipated. A runoff is necessary where no candidate gets a majority of all votes cast. Technically the aldermanic elections have been nonpartisan since 1920, but party organization strength still plays a major part in them.

North Side Women in Race.

Two of the five women who filed for alderman in the 50 Chicago wards are north siders. One is Mrs. Louise S. Guibor, a widow running in the 44th. The other is Mrs. Catherine Reutel, a housewife making her first political try in the 45th.

RATIONING BOARD TAKES OVER OLD BANK BUILDING

Some of the woes of rationing have been remedied at local board 40-46, 1008 Belmont avenue, which formerly was located at 3167 North Halsted street. No longer are rationees of ward 46 baffled over which direction to turn for sugar books and what clerk to accost for a gasoline card.

The idea, which has eliminated some of the initiations of rationing in this ward, was born late last summer to Mrs. Nellie V. Dalton, 6224 North Albany avenue, chief clerk of the board.

Closed Bank Monument.

After a particularly hot and harrassing day at the board's former quarters—two small, crowded rooms in a store building—Mrs. Dalton was walking past the old Belmont-Sheffield Trust and Savings bank at Belmont and Sheffield avenues. The bank had been closed for almost 10 years, a gray stone monument to the depression days of 1932.

A sudden thought overtook Mrs. Dalton: "What a perfect place a bank would make for a ration board." Immediately, she envisioned how the bank skeleton could be transferred into a roomy rationing headquarters. She took her idea to Albert H. Olson, president of the Belmont-Sheffield Safe Deposit company which uses only the rear part of the bank, where the vaults are located.

Olson Backs Plan.

Olson seconded the idea of subleasing the closed part of the bank and, with the sanction of Michael F. Mulcahy, rationing chief of the Chicago metropolitan area, the move was completed in December. Finishing touches were put on the board's new quarters last week.

"Now," according to Mulcahy, "board 40-46 is my idea of a perfect set-up for a ration board." It's one place that has everything, he said, even safes with time locks in which to keep rationing coupons.

The board's 11 clerks are able to take care of as many as 2,000 persons

SHIFT SCHEDULES TO CONSERVE OIL IN NORTH PARKS

Green Briar and River Units Affected.

Two north side park fieldhouses have had to shuffle their activity schedules to conserve fuel oil, Robert J. Dunham, president of the park district reports. Those affected are Green Briar and River parks.

According to Dunham, all of the city's 23 park fieldhouses burning fuel oil will open no earlier than 11 o'clock weekday mornings and will be closed Saturday evenings for the duration in an effort to conserve fuel.

Shifts at Green Briar.

At Green Briar park the Red Cross production unit which formerly met at 10:30 o'clock Monday mornings now will begin work at 1 o'clock Monday afternoons. The women's volley ball sessions have been shifted from 9 o'clock Tuesday mornings to 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoons. The boys' high school basketball practice has been moved from 10 o'clock Thursdays to 1 o'clock of the same day. The park will open at 1 o'clock daily and on Saturdays at 8 o'clock in the morning.

The only change necessary at River park was that of the women's volley ball sessions. They have been rescheduled at 2 o'clock Wednesdays.

Must Watch Supply.

While these moves will save oil, Dunham points out that fieldhouse heating engineers still will have to exercise great care if oil allotments are to cover the needs of the second half of the winter and the early spring.

Other north side fieldhouses using fuel oil are in Chippewa park, Indian Boundary park, and Paul Revere park. Schedules in these parks were so arranged that they did not need to be changed.

In the Lincoln park zoo only three of the 20 buildings are heated by oil. Two of the buildings use gas for heat.

Nursery Benefit.

Florence Bourke Ellis will give her second annual book review for the benefit of Augustana nursery at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Ravenswood Masonic temple, 4605 North Paulina street.

Give Diplomas This Week in High Schools

Detonations of war will rumble thru school auditoriums this week as the first high school graduates of 1943 march across flag bedecked platforms to receive their diplomas. The words "victory," "freedom," and "liberty" will be missing from few graduation programs.

From north side high schools young men and women will go out to assume duties grown heavy with war. Many will enter war factories, or the army or navy. Those going to college will be laying their plans with serious intent.

Graduation ceremonies for Senn High school students will be held at 8 o'clock Thursday evening in Senn hall, 5900 Glenwood avenue. Allene La Verne Anderson will give the address of welcome. Other students on the program will be Robert Ferguson, Betty Jean Benson, John Gittler, Irene Kavouras, and Leatrice Fisher. Diplomas will be presented by David M. Davidson, principal.

Take Citizenship Theme.

Built around the theme, "Citizens of the United States," Waller High school's graduation exercises at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening in the Lake View High school, 4015 North Ashland avenue, will feature student speakers. August Caamano, Frieda Anagnostopoulos, Mary Garabedian, Janet Proell, Frank Folk, and Lea Bertani will discuss the privileges and responsibilities of citizenship. Seniors Ben Roberts and Lawrence Heavey will sing.

Honors will be awarded by John L. Finlayson, assistant principal, and diplomas will be presented by Principal Maurice C. Lipman.

Sullivan High school seniors will graduate Thursday evening in ceremonies at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium. "Toward New Horizons" will keynote the program with students Douglas Harrison, Earle Lifschutz, Isabel Sipser, Paul Grimm, Christ Karafotias, Eli Katz, Sheldon Newberger, Bettymay Shelley, Fred Bernstein, Helen Powers, and Margaret McWhirter participating. Diplomas will be awarded by George E. Anspaugh, principal.

Gloria Newlands will give a piano solo, Hugh Block a violin solo, and Corinne Meyer will sing. Student speakers will be John Gummerman, Lois Rasmussen, and Marilyn Pfau. Harry P. Fuller, assistant principal, will accept the class gift.

"Young America Faces a World at War" is the theme of the Lake View High school graduation, to be held at 8 o'clock Thursday evening in the school auditorium. The student speakers will be Doris Muir, Dorislee Nichols, Arthur Vels, and Marilyn Lane. Olice Winter, principal, will distribute diplomas.

REVEAL PLANS IN INTERVIEWS WITH TRIBUNE

Personal Goals Put Aside for Duration.

Prepared for all detours which war may bring on the road to their ambitions and hopes, midyear graduates on the north side are a game, unperturbed group of young men and women. The boys, most of them going on eighteen, say they are anxious to "get in the fight and help end the war in a hurry." Their feminine classmates are just as eager to help wherever they can.

"After that job is done, we will start in where we left off in working toward our own personal goals," they agree, "and, certainly, nobody will have a head start."

Wayne Gasper of 5648 North Rockwell street, selected as the outstanding graduate from Amundsen High school, for an interview with THE TRIBUNE, is typical of the group's calm and confident attitude toward the unpredictable future. High on the class honor roll for four years, Wayne was treasurer of the school honor society, editor of the Amundsen Log, and associate editor of last year's Viking, the school year book.

Active in Scouting.

Chemistry, the social sciences, and Latin were his favorite studies. After school and during vacations his supreme interest has been Boy Scouting. In his busy climb from cub scout to eagle scout, Wayne has won a Lincoln Trail medal, the gold quill award, and was made a member of the Order of the Arrow. When leaders of troop 859 were drafted into the army, Wayne took over as Scout leader.

Six feet 2 inches tall, this auburn haired young man was a natural asset to his class basketball team and is particularly fond of that sport. After the war Wayne plans to study law or journalism. However, he has a scholarship to the University of Chicago and hopes to complete the accelerated 18 month bachelor of arts course before he is drafted.

She Wants to Be a Lawyer.

Sybil Carlin, 5433 Kenmore avenue, was selected as Senn High school's outstanding graduating senior. Sybil, a dark haired, soft spoken girl, looking older than her 17 years, is quiet in her determination to become a lawyer. There's never been any question in her mind, she explains. Ever since she was a youngster, she's planned to be a lawyer.

"And I believe after the war there will be a real need for women lawyers, because so many of the boys aren't able to stay in school," she continued. "Of course, if the government says that girls are needed to win the war, I'll stop school to help. But I hope that doesn't happen."

Standing first scholastically in her class, Sybil was a member of the honor society, the student council, the drama, French and glee clubs. She is undecided whether she will take her prelegal work at Northwestern university or the University of Chicago.

Marriage and Career for Her.

Sullivan High's outstanding graduate is blonde, blue eyed Margaret McWhirter, 1658 Farwell avenue, who hopes to combine marriage and a career. Scientific research is her chosen field, tho she hasn't yet settled on any particular phase.

"All I'm sure of now is that it must have to do with people—like biology or psychology," the 17 year old miss said with decision. "That's probably because I like people and hope to help them. I want to be ready to do my part in the post-war world, too."

Margaret, who plans to go to Northwestern university next fall, was vice president of the Girls' Athletic association board, captain of the senior girls' basketball team, a member of the championship baseball team for two years, and is an enthusiastic indoor roller skater, hiker and swimmer. She is class valedictorian, secretary of the senior class, and vice president of the National Honor society.

Her spare time—from 3:30 to 7 o'clock weekdays and all day Saturdays—is spent at a switchboard, where she earns money to help finance her college education.

Star Senior's a Welder.

Senior class president, Paul Orser, 2130 Irving Park road, is Lane Technical High school's outstanding graduate. His major has been welding, and as a welder he will begin work in a war plant the Monday after graduation—the same day he registers for the draft.

"What I'd really like is a job welding for Henry Kaiser," he said, eyes shining. "But just welding is all right. I hope, if I go into the army, they'll put me welding in the tank corps or in some kind of maintenance work. I think I'd be a lot more important to them using my trade."

During the last year, when he wasn't busy working with his father as a plumber's helper, he was making winches and derricks in a factory with government contracts. His average was 25 hours a week. And, even so, he was able to get top grades in his school work. On the side, he was superintendent of the welding shop.

War Influences Guide Their Choices.

Three boys and one girl were represented in the Tribune interviews of outstanding graduating seniors from the city's four general schools which draw pupils from all over Chicago. The schools are Washburne Trade, Spalding, Jones Commercial, and Flower Technical.

Clarence Markus, outstanding senior of Washburne Trade school, goes to work the day after graduation in a war plant. He will practice the trade he learned in school—tool and die making.

Hopes to Be War Pilot.

"I hope this practical experience plus what I learned in school will help me become an army pilot," he said seriously. "I register next month, and I've been thinking about the job I'd like best in the army. Being a pilot, I think, would suit me fine. And knowing tools should help me understand the insides of a plane." Clarence lives at 5157 Strong street.

Charles McCarthy of Spalding School for Crippled Children hopes to attend De Paul university and study mathematics for teaching. During the summer he worked in a defense plant, inspecting metal goods after they had been sandblasted.

Charles lives with his uncle, Martin J. Sweeney, 5719 South Green street, and comes to school every morning in the Spalding bus. He is class president as well as head of the civic, social, and cultural club. He also is interested in dramatics, particularly comedies.

Parents in Gary.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McCarthy, live in Gary, where Charles attended St. Luke's Parochial school for a while. A leg injury suffered when he was 2 years old has made it necessary for him to spend much of his time in hospitals and summer camps for crippled children.

A war time graduate who hopes to help in the rebuilding of axis seized Greece, when peace time comes again, is John Gravenitis of 3227 South Lituanica avenue, who was chosen as outstanding senior at Jones Commercial High school. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gravenitis, were born in Greece, so John wants "to see and help reconstruct" his parents' native country.

Likes Business Training.

In the meantime, John intends to continue his business training at night school in preparation for being a certified public accountant. But he expects that the army will interrupt his CPA plans for a while, because he received his questionnaire last week.

However, John figures he should make the army a good staff sergeant. That's because he has been president of his class this year and the class is composed of 64 girls and 11 boys.

"It's quite a test to keep that many girls in order—and quiet—at class meetings," he explained. "So I think that shouting orders at a group of soldiers would be easy after the job I had in school."

Enjoyed School Journalism.

Rosemary Nikolich, who represented the all-girl Flower Technical school, is interested in business journalism, altho most of her class want to be Red Cross nurses. Science is one of her favorite subjects, but her one and a half years on the school newspaper has been the most enjoyable of all her school activities, she believes.

won a letter in swimming and was a member of the architectural and glee clubs.

Only five feet tall, ebony haired Mary Garabedian of 2056 Larrabee street, who was chosen the outstanding senior of Waller High school, has a number of far-reaching aims on her tentative map for the future. She wants to teach mathematics or physics and plans to apply her college gained knowledge of these subjects to help the war need.

"I believe that the United States must put her trust in the education of our youth," Mary declared in her soft spoken voice. Her black eyes are alternately serious and laughing, and her approach to life in general is candid.

Admittedly, she is a disciple of "the quiet life" and working out a difficult mathematics problem is her idea of "fun." Mary plans to enter Northwestern university next fall and, until then, intends to study trigonometry at home.

Doris Muir of 1830 Belle Plaine avenue, class salutatorian, has been selected as the outstanding graduate from Lake View High school. She is vice president of the school honor society and president of the girls' athletic association. Her fondness for sports of all kinds shows thru in her clear blue eyes and fresh complexion, while her Scotch ancestry is apparent in her red-gold hair.

Mathematics and English have been her favorite studies; but she is still undetermined as to the field in which she wants to pursue her education. She would like to attend college in Chicago.

NAVY MEN GIVE 'AHOY, AMERICA' A NOVEL TOUCH

W-G-N Show Presented as Dress Rehearsal.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The bluejackets and marines at Navy pier are putting on a lively and entertaining show titled "Ahoy America," every Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 8 o'clock over W-G-N. "Ahoy America" is presented by men from the Naval Aviation technical training school in coöperation with W-G-N.

The show reflects the work and life of the men at Navy pier. And a lot of comedy is woven into the scripts by "Margie," a girl interested in the navy, and "Mac," a typical bluejacket. The rôle of Margie is played by Songstress Mary Ann Mercer, who rations out one song each week.

Given as Dress Rehearsal.

The show is presented as a dress rehearsal. This gives it spontaneity and informality. Listeners get an accurate picture of how a big time variety radio program is put together. Frequently the progress of the show is interrupted while Morrison Wood, the producer, gives instructions to the cast. Since Wood is actually busy directing the show his part is played on the air by Forrest Lewis. Cuts are made in the script and so announced on the air. Sometimes some of the music, presented by the Navy Pier Orchestra and Glee club, directed by Lt. Orrin Tucker may be repeated.

"This novel form of putting on a show," said Wood, "puts the members of the cast at ease and makes for a livelier show. Informality is the key note of the program and entertainment for navy personnel and radio listeners the primary objective. Informing listeners how the navy men work, study, and play is a supplementary objective."

Kirkpatrick Sets the Pace.

Jess Kirkpatrick, master of ceremonies, gives the show a lot of added pep and pace—and delights the bluejackets attending the shows with his magic tricks before broadcasts.

Kirkpatrick and Miss Mercer, thru their inquiries, introduce a lot of humor about navy practices, terms, and traditions. Sample:

Lt. Tucker: You should have said, Lieutenant Tucker, J. G., Jess.

Kirkpatrick: What does the "J. G." stand for? Just gottem?

And Margie turns out to be the kind of girl who, upon an introduction to a chief petty officer exclaims: "Grand; I like to pet, too." This brings forth a shrill chorus of whistles and applause from the bluejackets.

Capt. Richard F. Whitehead, chief of staff to Rear Adm. A. C. Read, chief of the technical training command; Comm. J. N. Walton, executive officer of the pier, and Bernice Parks, stage star, will be guests next Tuesday.

Templeton and Peerce to Be Kostelanetz's Guests

Alec Templeton, pianist and composer, and Jan Peerce, tenor, will be guests on the Andre Kostelanetz program at 3:30 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS. Musical selections will be: Coward's "Kiss Me," Robbins' "Moonlight Mood," and four numbers from Cole Porter's "Something to Shout About."

a day. Cages formerly marked "teller," now have illuminated signs which designate the kind of rationing which is handled by that particular clerk.

There is one window apiece for food, coffee, tires, sugar, and miscellaneous. Two cages are given over to fuel rationing. The same well lighted and convenient tables where bank patrons formerly endorsed checks are at the disposal of rationees.

Mrs. Dalton said that every one seemed to respect the dignity of the former bank and voices are lowered. She said there is no pushing, jamming, or loud talking, even when there is an unusual crowd at the board.

Ration board 40-46 has a variety of clients, since it includes the Lake Shore drive area, bounded on the south by Diversey avenue and on the north by Irving Park boulevard, and goes as far as Southport avenue on the west. In the west part of the district, Mrs. Dalton said, the board has a number of families who still use gasoline lamps for their light and kerosene stoves for heating and cooking.

"Oftentimes," she added, "we have a lot of mink coats in the same line with the little old ladies with shawls on their heads, who have come after gasoline for their lamps."

I was elated to learn that fine silken fabrics, rayons, hose and the most fragile things I wear are washed with costlier, milder soaps in clean, filtered soft water. Because of the meticulous ironing of all flat items and the hand finishing of doilies, Madeiras and needlework, and because of its size and very low price, I naturally favor Edgewater's.

An important message to the women of America

FROM THE MAKERS OF RED CROSS SHOES

The President of The United States has asked that the name, "Red Cross," be discontinued in connection with all commercial products.

To millions of American women, perhaps the most familiar product bearing this name is the Red Cross Shoe.

It has been known by this proud name for a great deal longer than you can probably remember—as a matter of fact, for over 50 years.

With our nation at war, however, we realize that many Americans are having to give up, for the duration, many of the things they have long treasured.

We who make Red Cross Shoes, therefore, and the thousands of merchants who sell them, unhesitatingly accede, during this critical war period, to the wishes of our President.

And, as we do so—as the name "Red Cross Shoe" becomes "Gold Cross Shoe" (our shoes will be so labeled as rapidly as possible)—we make this pledge:

Gold Cross Shoes will continue to be Red Cross Shoes in every way. They will be made by the same skilled craftsmen, in the same factories, over the same famous "Limit" lasts, and sold by the same merchants.

There is, we believe, no higher pledge we can make to the women of America.

Wife Plasters Husband's Puss!

"I read about this guy J. G. who's woman snores at night. And if I was him I'd put a muzzle on the dame like I done to my man. My guy was driving me nuts with his snoring. Did I say 'snoring'? Why, when my big hunk of man got going, he sounded like a blast furnace in full blast. He'd start out kinda quiet like, with a few moans and gulps and a couple of shrill whistles, and ends up with a roar. Then he'd start over again with a little moan, a gurgling gulp, and end up like a new steel furnace that they'd touched off for the first time. Every time he'd get to the final blast, I'd just about leap out of my skin.

"Finally, neither me or my skin could stand the gaff any longer, and I got an idea. I got some adhesive plaster and cut off two small strips, 'bout two and a half inches long. These I plastered right over his puss, so he had to keep his mouth shut when he was sleeping. I kept doing this 'til he got the idea of using his nose 'stead of his trap to breath with. Well, my guy stopped snoring in 'bout three weeks."

And as Epicurus, the Greek, said a few thousand years ago, "Hoist all sail, my dear boy, and steer clear of culture." The use of the word "Puss" in referring to her husband's pan could have been replaced with something a lit'l more refined, like f'r instance: beezer, kisser, map, mask, mug, mush, snoot, tomato, dead pan, anything but puss. That's something you'd expect from one of the back stalls of Duffy's Tavern.

And yet, adhesive plaster on a guy's puss! Why say, mebbe the gal's got something thar. Tried Skokie's Sun-Glo yet? Ah, there's a sweet laundry service for a sweet lady!

SAILOR WOULDN'T TALK, SO BUDDIES TELL OF HONORS

They knew Murphy wouldn't breathe a word of it, and so they decided to take matters into their own hands!

That was the way two of his buddies in the signal school put it when they wrote that Ed Murphy, whose parents reside at 2000 Lincoln Park West, had won top honors in the Butler university signal school at Indianapolis, Ind. They explained that the highest possible grade in the school is 4.0 Murphy graduated with 3.9 and is now a signalman third class.

The young sailor also was named honor man of his company at Great Lakes last August.

"We think this is all pretty good going and would like to see him get a break in his home town paper," the two buddies—Frank Grohn and Phil Goldberg concluded.

"Life with Father" Returning to Erlanger Feb. 1

June Walker and Percy Waram Head Cast of Chicago Company

By Cecil Smith.

In 1939 Oscar Serlin, a former Chicagoan who had tried his hand at producing Broadway plays without much luck, interested a sizable group of theatrical backers in a dramatization of Clarence Day Jr.'s colorful biographical sketches of his father's unique personality. The younger day was a bedridden invalid in the latter days of his life; and as he lay in his bedroom, month after month, he set down and sent to the New Yorker magazine a long series of brief mementoes of his blustery but fundamentally soft-hearted father, a monumentally individualistic business man of the latter nineteenth century.

From these fragmentary tales Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse began to fashion a play, and Serlin thought it possessed the germs of success. At first Mrs. Clarence Day Jr., widow of the author, was opposed to any representation of her husband's family on the stage. As she read the manuscript of the play, and as she understood the vein in which Serlin intended to treat it in staging it, her objections disappeared.

When he had gathered the necessary subsidy, Serlin signed contracts with Mr. Lindsay, one of the co-transcribers, and Dorothy Stickney to act the parts of the red-headed parents. He intrusted the direction to the relatively little known Bretaigne Windust, and he turned the designing of an appropriate 1880 setting over to the brilliant Stewart Chaney.

In the fall of 1939 "Life with Father" opened for a week's tryout in Baltimore. The first audiences took to it well, and Serlin and his associates began to entertain hopes for a successful New York run.

But certainly nobody, even those who had worked with it and knew it best, could have been prepared for the triumph of "Life with Father" in its first evening in the Empire theater in New York. From the opening curtain revealing a Victorian living room partly furnished with authentic possessions taken from the old Day home to the final curtain with Vinnie's ultimate triumph over Father Day's resistance to his belated baptism, the audience loved every minute of "Life with Father." Father himself had somehow been translated into a universal figure, endearingly familiar to every member of the audience. And the sight of the four Day boys, of stairstep ages, growing up in the stern tranquility of a New York almost as rural as it was urban filled every one with nostalgic delight.

"PINAFORE"

Philip Tully and June Winters will sing and act the romantic leads of "H. M. S. Pinafore," and in other Gilbert and Sullivan operas as well, in the Boston Comic Opera company engagement beginning next Sunday at the Studebaker.

After more than three years "Life with Father" may still be seen at the Empire theater in New York, with Mr. Lindsay and Miss Stickney still faithful to their original characterizations. It has exceeded the run of every previous play on Broadway except "Abie's Irish Rose" and "Tobacco Road," and if it continues until May, 1945, as it very well may, it can wrest the long run record away from "Tobacco Road."

But New York is not the only place where "Life with Father" may be seen, for a return engagement will begin at the Erlanger theater here on Monday, Feb. 1. The previous Chicago history of the comedy has been detailed many times, but it is spectacular enough to bear another repetition.

When the long term value of "Life with Father" became apparent, Oscar Serlin set out to prepare a second company for Chicago. This company also spent a preliminary week in Baltimore, and then came to the Blackstone theater here, with Percy Waram and Lillian Gish cast as the Day parents. Every one said that the

UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN

"Major—" Agnew peered more closely at Major Campbell's face. He stiffened. "O," he said. "Yes, I remember." He added reluctantly, coldly polite, "I'ow are you, sir?"

Major Campbell spoke pleasantly but rather quickly to Agnew and turned to Victoria again: "Your wedding! When is it to be?"

"Wednesday."

"They're waiting, Vick," said Agnew, face sulky, pale blue eyes watching John Campbell.

"Wednesday! But—that's day after tomorrow! Who is the man? Isham?"

Agnew had put his hand on her arm. She said quickly, "No, not Hollis! It's Michael Bayne I'm going to marry. You remember him."

"O," said Major Campbell. "Yes, I remember him. I ought to have said who's the lucky man. Well, good wishes. You'll be leaving here, then, very soon?"

Agnew uttered an impatient puff and tugged covertly at her arm. "Very soon," said Victoria. And added, unexpectedly: "Thank you."

"Don't thank me. Tell Bayne what I've just told you," said Major Campbell and put out his hand. She put her own hand in it; he gave it a brief hard pressure, said rather perfunctorily, "I hope you'll be very happy," and turned away.

"Do hurry along, Vicky," said Agnew impatiently. She had a last quick glimpse of John Campbell's tall, uniformed figure swinging down the path into the dusk, the white gravel crunching briskly. Agnew's thin hand at her elbow pushed her toward the house while he muttered crossly in her ear.

"Mike's probably at home waiting while you moon about with an ex-policeman!"

"He was state's attorney."

"It doesn't matter what he was," snapped Agnew, sounding like his mother. "What'd he mean, to tell Mike, what he'd just told you? What'd he tell you?"

"O—nothing really."

"He Talked of Henry's Death"

"You mean nothing you want to tell me. My gosh," said Agnew peevishly, "when will you stop treating me like a baby? What'd he talk to you about? Come on, tell me."

"Nothing, I tell you," said Victoria, suddenly impatient. "He just—talked about Henry's death—"

"Well, I could have guessed that. What'd he say exactly? Did he apologize for the way he treated you?"

"Well, yes, in a way," said Victoria, grasping at it.

Agnew said: "I suppose if you won't tell me, you won't. Never mind, I'll find out."

"Find out what?" asked Hollis, lounging into the little library. "Everybody's waiting for you two."

"We're coming now," said Victoria and walked past him into the living room. Agnew and Hollis followed, Agnew saying nothing so ostentatiously that Hollis gave him a sharp and inquisitive glance. But he said pleasantly: "Colonel's coming to the house to dinner, too. All in honor of your precious Michael, darling. Altho why you want to marry him when——"

Agnew interrupted: "When she could have had you," he said with a cackle of laughter.

"Right for once," said Hollis, his fine, slender face unmoved and his light Steane eyes very blank and still. "Some time your tongue's going to get too clever for you, little brother."

Bessie and Colonel Galant were at the front door. Thalia was strolling toward the driveway, escorted by three obsequious, elegantly uniformed young officers. Bessie glanced at her two sons, and said quickly: "Now boys, don't quarrel. Where on earth have you been, Victoria?"

"She's been with me," said Agnew, his thin face so expressionless that Victoria wondered, not for the first time, at his powers of concealment.

The colonel's car was waiting for them—a dun colored army car with a respectful boy in uniform at the wheel. The three officers bowed with much style as it moved away, and Hollis, sitting beside the driver, laughed. "I'm in august company," he said over his shoulder. "It isn't often I get bowed to by my superiors."

"I think it was Thalia who got the bows," said the colonel.

Thalia, in the back seat, held her hat against the breeze. She was looking, as always, very pretty: pale pink crepe outlined her beautiful little figure. Her wide pink hat shaded her small face and gave it and her soft dark eyes and her full, pretty red mouth an extra touch of mystery and loveliness. She said softly: "Vicky, wasn't that John Campbell? I mean, the tall, dark man in a major's uniform that talked to you—so long—at the tea table."

"Tall, dark, and handsome," said Agnew in a disapproving mutter.

"Yes," said Victoria briefly. "That was Major Campbell."

"That's what I thought," said Thalia. Her voice was perfectly even and gentle; yet oddly it seemed to Victoria to have an undertone of a kind of amusement.

But that was wrong, she decided swiftly. John Campbell could arouse only tragic and sad memories for Thalia Frame.

Suppose John Campbell were right! Suppose Henry Frame had been murdered! Suppose the case was not really ended at all!

It was an unwelcome and a horrible thought; it leaped into her mind and fastened itself there as if it had claws.

For people are not murdered by accident and people are not murdered by strangers.

During the time of the investigation Victoria had never, even for an instant, believed it was murder. She had never even briefly given credence to such a theory about Henry's death. It had to be accident or suicide for there was no one to murder Henry. She, the entire family, had taken the instantaneous and unwavering stand that there was no question of murder. John Campbell—on the most charitable basis of explanation—was mistaken; young, zealous, determined, and mistaken. It had been simply and sheerly impossible to entertain for an instant the notion that one of them had killed a man.

It was still impossible to do so. John Campbell was wrong.

Yet she could not stop thinking of her talk with him and the things he had said—altho to permit herself to do so was like looking over a precipice, up to now veiled in clouds, which opened to reveal ugly and dangerous depths at her feet.

She was so engrossed in thought that she was surprised when they turned in at the gates of the house, passed the gate cottage [occupied by the gardener, who never paid any attention to the cars that came and went] and the scent of orange blossoms from the grove north of the house came into the car. Orange blossoms; Clistie intended her to wear them on her rose-point cap, on Wednesday. With the wedding lunch in the garden where the azaleas were blooming in pink and crimson masses.

"The bridegroom's here," said Agnew and nudged her with his sharp elbow. "Wake up, Victoria. We're home and there's Mike's car."

"She hasn't said a word for 10 miles," said Hollis and helped her out of the car. The moon was white and shining now, touching the roofs and gables of the long house with silver. There were lights in it, everywhere. Michael's long gray coupe, in the driveway, glistened whitely. He had flown from Seattle, but had sent his car on a week before to Pine Beach where there was an airport. The door was open and Clistie [already dressed for dinner in the new, brown lace and chiffon dress she'd made for the wedding], was standing there beside the smiling colored butler, waiting for them.

Michael was upstairs changing, she said, and in another few minutes they would have been late for dinner. "Dinner's at 8 and you'll want cocktails first," said Clistie. "You want a drink right now, don't you, colonel?"

She led him toward the drawing room. Victoria lingered a little as the others went upstairs, in front of the long mirror in the hall. How long had it been since she'd seen Michael—five weeks, was it? That was half the time of their entire acquaintance. When they'd told the family of their engagement everybody had exclaimed. But you've only known each other since Christmas, they'd said, particularly Aunt Bessie.

Yet the way she and Michael had known each other, the peculiar situation they'd been plunged into, had counted far more than years of a desultory social acquaintance. Time alone didn't matter.

She hesitated, looking at herself rather doubtfully. Brides were supposed to look beautiful. She took lipstick from her bag and touched it to her mouth, sleeked her shining pompadour up another fraction of an inch, and turned toward the stairway.

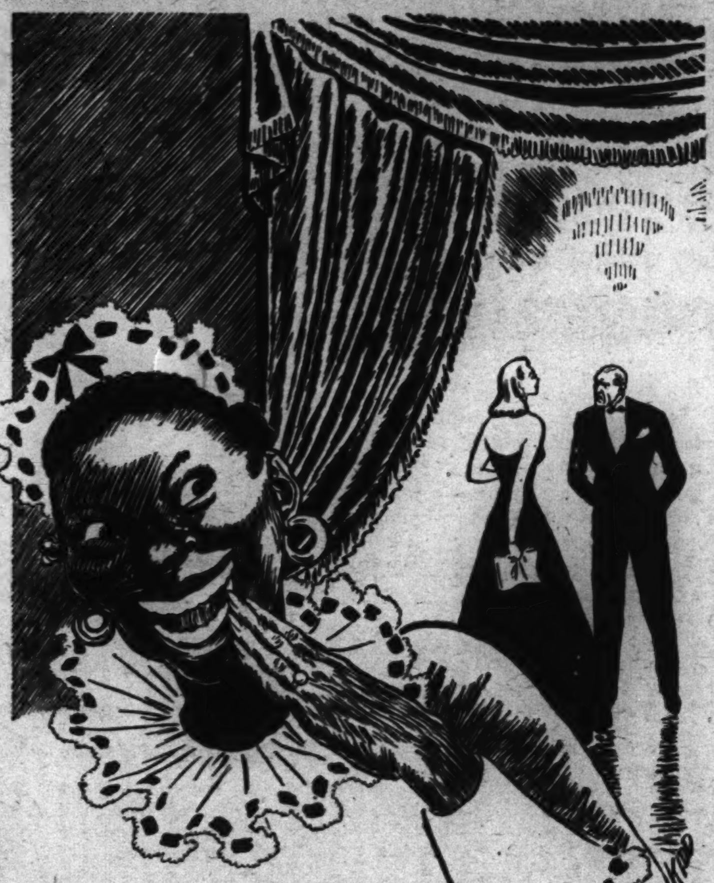
Michael, she knew, was in the green guest room, midway of the hall. Clistie had put flowers in it that morning.

Victoria went on to her own room where the lights were on, the curtains drawn, and her dress laid out. It was a new dress, too, pale yellow chiffon with a full skirt. There were slippers to match and fresh violets in a vase on the dressing table to be worn at the V of her throat.

She took up the little gold clock beside the violets on the dressing table. Every one, some time, has been struck with the relentlessness of time, and Victoria was then. Forty-two hours until Wednesday noon.

She put down the clock abruptly and opened the wall of mirrored cupboards.

Thinking of time, tho, and thinking in spite of herself of Maj. John Campbell and what he had said, she forgot to put on the violets and selected the wrong slippers. Descending the stairway she discovered her mistake. The gilded narrow straps that made the toes of gold sandals showed as she went down the steps instead of the pale yellow slippers that had been matched to her dress. It was too late to change, however. There were voices in the drawing room and she went on down the stairs.



"I know I had a quarrel with him—and a silly little maid heard part of it and repeated what she heard."

So it was that she and Michael met for the first time in five weeks more or less publicly. In the long drawing room, in fact, with every one there before Victoria, in a group in front of the great fireplace and around a table where there was a tray of cocktails and a low green bowl of scarlet camellias. Michael saw her stop in the doorway and put down his glass and came to her, smiling, his hands out.

Michael Bayne, Branch Manager

Michael Bayne, just under 30, was manager of the branch office of the Steane mills in Seattle, and had been manager there for several years. It was a small office controlling very little business, but existing for the convenience of an office located near certain timber supplies. It had been established a few years previous to Henry's death for that purpose.

That was why Michael Bayne was put in charge of it. He had been a buying agent for the Steane mills and he was on the west coast at the time. He was young but very capable. He had had quite enough business experience to take over so small a portion of it, and the Seattle office had emerged entirely clear from the debacle of Henry's embezzlements which had been confined entirely to the New York office, where by far the bulk of the business went thru Henry's hands. The occasional order that went directly thru Michael's office was too much to balance the risk of trying to steal part of it. Besides, Michael would have caught any unaccountable discrepancies. Henry had consequently let Michael's office strictly alone, except for periodic reports.

Victoria indeed wouldn't have known Michael if, at the time Henry came south, Michael had not already been on the way to New York to give Henry one of those reports. Henry's trip south, to discourage Victoria's request for more money, was unscheduled. Consequently, since Michael was already on his way east, he had wired Michael to change his reservation to Chicago and come south instead. Michael had done so and thus had seen Victoria for the first time, as well as Bessie, and Hollis and Agnew, and naturally Clistie. Thalia had already known Michael. They'd met in New York on his occasional visits to see her father. They'd been in fact rather friendly, doing an occasional night club or theater together, but to the others Michael was a stranger.

He did not remain a stranger long. For it was only a few days after his arrival that Henry drowned himself and John Campbell had called it murder. So that all at once, in the sudden intimacy of shared anxiety, Michael had stopped being a stranger. He had been in fact like a rock of refuge, like a bulwark, like a fortress. He had stood between Victoria and the newspapers. He had tried and frequently succeeded in standing between her and John Campbell. Bessie had taken to her bed, hysterically. Hollis had got himself moderately tight and managed to remain in that condition the whole time. Agnew had been frightened and nervily quarrelsome and besides was only a boy. Even Clistie had had an attack of nerves and crept around the house like a shadow, but—which was rather unusual of Clistie—saying very little about Henry and his death.

So it was actually Michael who was Victoria's refuge and defense.

And in the end it was Michael who knew enough of Henry's high handed and autocratic methods to suggest an investigation that went farther than a glance at books [dummy books] already checked on by accountants. It was Michael who went himself to carry thru the investigation and got back with proof that Henry Frame had had a motive for suicide barely in time to prevent John Campbell's request for a grand jury indictment.

After the case was closed Michael had stayed on for a week or two and the night before he went away he'd asked Victoria to marry him. He took her in his arms as he had done once before, after a particularly long bout of questioning—when, after John Campbell had gone, Michael had held her and told her not to be frightened, that he'd do something—he didn't know what—but something. That he'd not let them try her for murder.

And he hadn't let them. He had done something to stop it.

They set the wedding date that night. The azaleas and orange blossoms would be out when he returned to marry Victoria.

The azaleas were blooming now, and the orange blossoms. The little interlude of waiting was over. And Victoria stood in the arched doorway—yellow chiffon clinging to her waist and falling in a swirl around her feet, her shoulders bare and her golden brown hair swept up high, her face a little white under its soft tan and her eyes very large and dark. Waiting for Michael as he crossed the long room toward her.

The great boughs of crimson azaleas on the tables, Bessie's white and green gown, the sparkle of glasses, all looked bright and very gay. Col. Galant had risen, gray haired, erect, and spare in his uniform, smiling toward Victoria, glass in his hand. Hollis was standing at the piano and he looked over his shoulder and did not smile. Thalia beside him, in a misty blue gown, her white arms outstretched as she leaned against the piano, turned her wistful, lovely little face with its soft dark eyes toward Victoria, too. Agnew, incredibly lanky in dinner clothes, looked sulky. Clistie, sitting in a corner of the Burgundy red sofa—very fine in her new brown lace with its turquoise ribbon—was quiet too, but was not looking at Victoria. She was staring thoughtfully at the toe of her turquoise slipper.

Against this vividly patterned background Michael approached Victoria.

The severe black and white of dinner clothes was always becoming to Michael. He was not trim and elegant like Hollis but there was something substantial and solid about his compact figure and the strong sharp curves of his nose and chin.

His clear gray eyes were smiling. "Hello, Victoria," he said.

The sharp, bright picture behind him broke up, moved, shifted, became only a group of people, drinking cocktails before dinner.

Michael took her in his arms. He kissed her and looked down at her, smiling.

Michael hadn't changed. Neither had she.

But she couldn't marry Michael on Wednesday.

Why?

Looks as Sweet as a Bride

And what was she to do about it?

Michael linked his arm thru hers and led her toward the others. "Cocktail, dear?" he said and put a glass in her hand.

Col. Galant was beaming. "You look as sweet as a bride tonight, Vicky," he said, and lifted his glass.

Thalia turned and murmured something low to Hollis. Bessie's dark face, so unlike the Steanes, looked heavy and weary with the sagging lines under her chin and the brown circles around her great dark eyes. Bessie had made the arrangements for the wedding. Clistie had done the work. What would Bessie say when Victoria told her there was to be no wedding?

No wedding? Could she hurt Michael like that? Two days—not quite two days actually—before their marriage?

But she couldn't marry him, either.

She set down her glass with suddenly clumsy fingers. The big sapphire on her left hand shone coldly. Michael had given her that. She'd give it back to him; but no,—she must keep her promise.

She had to think, really think. Why had she promised, then?

"Dinner is served, Madam," said Jody in the doorway, extra stately and extra suave because it was almost a wedding dinner.

Bessie acted as hostess. "Michael, will you take Victoria in? Hollis——" she nodded at Thalia and stretched out her jewelled, swarthy hand toward Col. Galant. "Bruce, dear, you'll have to put up with me. Agnew, will you take Clistie?"

Agnew, who liked Clistie, pranced up to her with the gayety of a young colt and one unaccustomed cocktail, and offered her his arm. Michael's arm felt warm and hard thru the black coat sleeve below Victoria's fingertips.

"Michael sits beside you, Vicky dear," said Bessie. "After Wednesday, you know, you'll always be separated at dinner parties."

Michael holding her chair leaned over to say in her ear: "But together at home. Vicky darling—"

"You are trying to frighten me."

What Has Gone Before

Ten weeks had elapsed since Henry Frame's death and the trying ordeal in which Victoria Steane was suspected of his murder by John Campbell, coroner and state's attorney. Victoria had quarreled with Frame about his management of Steane's mills, in which she owned most of the stock. Then Frame was discovered drowned. The coroner's jury said it was suicide when Michael Bayne, who ran a subsidiary, Steane's lumber camp, discovered Frame was embezzling from the business. Now Victoria's life with Aunt Bessie Isham and her two sons, Hollis and Agnew, and the housekeeper, Clistie Forbes, is about back to normal. Thalia Frame, Henry's daughter, has stayed on after her father's death, for a visit. At a party given by Col. Galant at Camp Blakoe, John Campbell, now a major, comes up to Victoria and asks to speak to her.

INSTALMENT II.

JOHN CAMPBELL came to Victoria and stopped. And said suddenly, with an impulsive quickness that she had never heard in his voice before: "Victoria, I am sorry; I didn't mean to frighten you."

She had braced herself for that meeting. She saw the different, less guarded look in his eyes without actually seeing it; heard her first name—he'd always called her Miss Steane, pleasantly; never anything else—without actually hearing it. Later she remembered both. Then she said stiffly: "I'm not frightened. What do you want to tell me?"

There was an instant of silence. As if waiting for a signal, the sun seemed to drop down in that instant, below the rim of the lake, leaving only a rosy afterglow.

Impersonal and Pleasantly Cool

The look in his face imperceptibly changed. His voice when he spoke was not impulsive and quick. It was as she remembered it, pleasantly impersonal and cool.

He looked away from her, out across the lake. "I'm sorry. But I — the fact is——" he paused so long then that it was as if she paused, too, her heart and her breath and her thought. Finally he said, abruptly, as if he hadn't been able to think of a better way to say it: "The fact is, the coroner's inquest was wrong — about Henry Frame, I mean. It was murder, you know."

Victoria felt she had to say something. But it wasn't true. Henry hadn't been murdered. There was nobody to murder him.

John Campbell turned quickly toward her again: "I really am sorry. But, don't you see, I had to tell you."

There was another instant of silence. His eyes were as dark as the slate gray lake below them. He said rather gently: "Let's walk for a bit. The path goes along the lake for half a mile or so," and he put his hand lightly on her arm and she walked slowly along the graveled path beside him.

John Campbell said quietly: "I'd better explain. You see, the whole thing is, I'm in the army now. I'm not state's attorney now; and I'm not the coroner. Anything I say now is just—just as a citizen. Anybody."

She did say something then. She said, "Why——" falteringly, and stopped.

"Why am I telling you this? Because I think I have to. At the time I had to go along with the decision of the coroner's jury I couldn't"—he paused there rather oddly as if he'd checked himself, and changed it—"I didn't combat the jury's decision. I had given them all the evidence, all my reasons——" again he seemed to scrutinize his own word and change it, "most of my reasons for believing it to be murder. Their decision, in view of the evidence Bayne turned up, was suicide. So I—in the end I let it ride."

"Henry knew he was faced with disclosure! He knew that, this time, I wouldn't give up. He knew I intended to learn about the business. He knew——"

"Do you think you would have found evidences of his stealing? Evidences he had successfully kept covered for years?"

"Yes, I——" She stopped and said more honestly: "Not right away. I knew nothing about the business. But nevertheless he was frightened. It meant disclosure in the end."

There was a little pause; then John Campbell said pleasantly: "Perhaps. But he would have had time—time to hide any traces, time to think, time to rearrange affairs. He wasn't threatened with disclosure immediately, the next day."

She Repeated What She Heard

"But why are you telling me this now? Why do you say he was murdered? I know that he was found drowned. But he couldn't swim and never had been able to swim so he wouldn't have gone into the river without intending to. I think it was intentional; suicide. You said somebody saw to it that he drowned. I know I had a quarrel with him and a silly little maid heard part of it and repeated what she heard, and you believed her——"

"You admitted it," he said. "You admitted that you'd told him you were helpless as long as he lived; that you couldn't remove him from his position as manager, that you couldn't make him give you more money. You admitted his anger."

"But I didn't murder him! There was no evidence of murder except—except a scratch on the pier and you said it was made by the heel of his shoe, as if somebody had struggled with him. And there was a bruise on his head and you said somebody could have struck him. That's the evidence—all of it."

"No, that isn't all," said John Campbell. There was a sudden surge of harshness in his voice. He said, staring straight ahead of him, his brown jaw hard: "You've forgotten the most important thing. That's the fact that he was the kind of man some one might want to murder."

It sounded almost as if he'd known Henry, Victoria cried: "But you didn't know him! You knew nothing of him, or of me. Yet you accused me of murder!"

"You had the strongest motive," he said shortly, looking straight ahead. "But, as you say, that's in the past. I only meant to tell you—now—that while I was an official my hands were tied. I had to accept the coroner's jury's verdict and call the case closed. And besides, we really were up against a stone wall of no evidence. We explored every possibility. I was, at least, convinced that there was nothing more to be done. I wanted to keep the case open; but the verdict was suicide; I couldn't argue with it. But then, today, seeing you here, it seemed to me that I had a kind of—duty. I still believe he was murdered. Therefore—well, murder is not a nice thing, you know. It's like a tiger lying in wait. Like a madman in ambush hidden."

She said in a stifled way: "You are trying to frighten me."

"No, I——" he broke off and turned to face her, putting his hands hard around her wrists as if to compel her to listen. "Yes," he said. "Yes, I suppose that's exactly what I'm trying to do. Murder is what I said it was. And there's so much money—your money now, altogether your own. It's so important to so many people. Do you understand?"

"No. You are warning me! As if some one murdered Henry and my money was the cause!"

"I only want you to understand that—that might be the cause of it. If I knew the truth—"

"You mean if you knew who murdered him?" she cried sharply. "But no one murdered him! He couldn't have been—" she paused, checked by a sudden thought. And said slowly: "You don't believe, now, that I murdered him."

"No. I don't believe that you murdered him."

"Did you ever really believe it?"

He didn't draw away from her, but there was a sense of withdrawal; his eyes didn't waver but still, in their depths, were suddenly remote and inscrutable.

"The evidence—the motive, rather, pointed toward you."

As if some one else were putting words into her mouth, Victoria went on: "Would you have sent me to the grand jury with a request for an indictment?"

He started to speak and stopped, his mouth so tight that the hesitation was incongruous. Then he said rather heavily: "Yes."

For a long moment neither spoke. She knew he was looking fixedly down at her; and as if he'd spoken, but rather slowly, she turned and met his intent, hazel eyes.

"Why?" she said. "Why have you—told me this? Don't you see that you've said too much not to say more?"

It broke the curiously quiet moment. He looked away from her eyes.

"I was wrong to do it. I thought I had to tell you, to—to warn you, I suppose. I've only alarmed you, needlessly."

Agnew was coming down the path from the colonel's brightly lighted little house, ahead of them. She could hear his footsteps plunging along the sloping gravel path toward them; half way he stopped, picked up a stone and shied it toward the lake, where it splashed loudly. As Agnew waited to watch the widening circles she said: "Warn me against what?"

"It Was Impulse, Seeing You Here"

Agnew's tall, lanky figure started toward them again. John Campbell said: "I don't know. If I knew—but I don't. It's only the fact of murder, unsolved, unsettled, perhaps—unfinished. But I've no proof. I'm sorry I spoke to you. It was an impulse; seeing you here. I was wrong."

Agnew, scuffling gravel loudly, came up to them. "Vicky, for gosh sake, come on. Everybody's waiting. You'll be late to your own wedding." He saw the maple leaf on John Campbell's shoulder and stopped abruptly; a major, in Agnew's opinion, was not to be hustled out of the way.

He hadn't recognized John Campbell. He had eyes only for the uniform. John Campbell said to Victoria: "Wedding! Your wedding?"

"Yes." She put her hand on Agnew's bony wrist. "Agnew, you remember Mr. Campbell, Major Campbell."

Four Soloists to Appear with Chicago Symphony

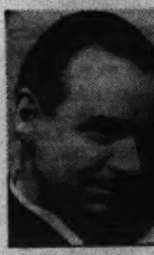
One Concert to Stimulate Sale of War Bonds

By Claudia Cassidy.

Music's focal point this week is Orchestra hall, where the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play five concerts featuring four soloists, three of them widely celebrated. The fourth is Hilde Somer, young Viennese pianist who makes her début Tuesday afternoon, playing the first of Mendelssohn's two rarely heard piano concertos. Zino Francescatti, the mercurial French violinist, returns at the midweek concerts to play the Bruch concerto recently performed at a Tuesday concert by Fritz Kreisler, while Wednesday evening finds Nathan Milstein and Gregor Piatigorsky playing Brahms' double concerto at the performance to be donated by soloists, orchestra, conductor and management to stimulate the sale of war bonds. Hans Lange conducts all these concerts, plus Saturday night's "Pop."



Zino Francescatti.

Miss Somer is third in the orchestra's series of young soloists, a parade which got off to an amateurish start with Sidney Foster, then leaped into brilliance with Leonard Pennario. Daughter of a piano teacher, she began to study piano in Vienna at the age of two. Now not quite 21, she will restore Mendelssohn's G minor concerto to the subscription repertory after almost 20 seasons of silence. Tuesday's complete program, starting at 2:15, follows:

Overture to "Anacréon" .......Cherubini
Concerto for Piano, No. 1, G minor
.....................Mendelssohn-Bartholdy
Symphony No. 2, D major......Sibelius

Probably the only way the bond concert could have made itself more alluring in the matter of soloists would have been to capture Vladimir Horowitz and make it a trio. The fabulous three, Horowitz, Milstein and Piatigorsky, escaped from Russia together and made up what must have been an amazing ensemble before they split into three major box office attractions. Both Milstein and Piatigorsky appeared in recital earlier in the season, and Horowitz is due Feb. 22, but only Piatigorsky is listed as soloist on the regular symphony schedule. He returns early in April.

The Russian cellist played the Brahms concerto with Joseph Szigeti at Ravinia last summer, replacing the late Emanuel Feuermann on brief notice. He should be ideally balanced by Milstein when they appear Wednesday evening. This is the program, which starts at 8:30:

American Overture, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home"..........Harris
Symphony No. 5, C minor......Beethoven
Concerto for Violin and Violoncello,
A minor ..........................Brahms

Mr. Francescatti's Chicago début four seasons ago was by far the most remarkable success scored here by a new violinist since Milstein's own lasting triumph. Known in Europe and South America before he invaded the United States, the young Frenchman immediately became such a favorite that a touch of diplomatic black magic was invoked to get him out of occupied France for a second tour. He was young enough to be regarded by the Nazis as a likely candidate to join Gen. de Gaulle.

The midweek program, which will be played Thursday at 8:15 and Friday at 2:15, offers:

Concerto for strings and two wind instruments, F major ............Handel
Introduction to Act III., "Ariane et Barbe-Bleue"..................Dukas
[First performance in Chicago.]
Symphony No. 3, F major........Brahms
Concerto for Violin, No. 1, G minor
.....................................Bruch

The Handel concerto has been played only twice in the orchestra's history, the last time 10 years ago, while the Dukas excerpt rates as a novelty, altho the opera was staged at the Opera Comique in 1907, and broke into the Paris opera itself in 1935.

Considering the variety and brilliance of the Chicago opera's French repertory back in Mary Garden days, it is curious that the Dukas setting of Maeterlinck's version of the Bluebeard tale never reached our stage. Toscanini conducted it at the Metropolitan in the season of 1910-'11, with Geraldine Farrar as Ariane, Leon Rothier as Bluebeard, and Matzenauer as the nurse, but it was not well received, and lingered only two seasons in a total of seven performances.

Checking back over the records, you will find Farrar accused of giving a "Gardenish" performance, and the score of harboring "excruciating dissonances." It might fare better today, tho it might not reach the pinnacle some critics have implied by ranking it alongside "Pélleas et Mélisande" as one of the finest achievements of the French lyrical theater. At least the two share the common—or, rather, uncommon—ground of symbolism and a static stage given emotional focus by music.

We are to hear only the introduction to the third act, in which Ariane has released Bluebeard's imprisoned wives, only to find they prefer enslavement while he, naturally, yearns after the one woman he finds unattainable.

This is certainly a far cry from the Ballet theater "Bluebeard" set with such insouciant impertinence to Offenbach's bouffant score. Imagine a ballet to Maeterlinck's "Bluebeard," which involves a big eyed wife named Belangère, a long haired wife named, but of course, Mélisande, and the six silver keys that unlock spilling cascades of amethysts, sapphires, pearls, emeralds, rubies and diamonds. The forbidden key of gold unlocks a menacing subterranean chant of women who are far worse than dead, being neglected.

TO MAKE CHICAGO DEBUT

Hilde Somer, pretty Viennese pianist, makes her Chicago debut Tuesday afternoon at Orchestra hall, playing Mendelssohn's Concerto No. 1, G minor, with the Chicago Symphony orchestra under the direction of Hans Lange.

Current Music News

Yehudi Menuhin comes to the Civic Opera house next Sunday afternoon to play Dvorak's Concerto for violin with the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos. The program, under the banner of the History and Enjoyment of Music series, also holds Gluck's Overture to "Alceste" and Brahms' Symphony No. 1, C minor.

Yehudi Menuhin.

Now 27 years old, Mr. Menuhin is on his 16th transcontinental tour of the United States and will return to Orchestra hall in recital March 28. He recently played his 50th New York concert and has played from 10 to 20 return engagements in such diversified cities as London, Paris, Amsterdam, Zurich, Brussels, Melbourne, Buenos Aires, and Johannesburg. A diligent statistician figures that his concert travels have chalked up more than half a million miles, which goes to show what a background you can have at 27 if you make a successful debut, as Menuhin did, at the age of 7.

The Fine Arts String quartet, assisted by Ernest Guntermann, flutist, and Franz Pfau, pianist, will appear at Fullerton hall this afternoon at 5:30. The program:

Quartet for flute, violin, viola, and cello, D major.....................Mozart
Quartet, D-flat major...............Dohnanyi
Quintet for piano and strings..Shostakovich

Efrem Kurtz was in town last week on his way west to conduct the San Francisco Symphony orchestra. Coming next week from California will be John Barbirolli, who will be a guest conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Mr. Barbirolli has had a particularly successful sojourn at the head of the Los Angeles Symphony.

Arturo Toscanini will do some musical juggling next Sunday afternoon when he conducts the NBC Symphony orchestra in a program which has as soloists Vivian Della Chiesa, Jan Peerce, Nicola Moscona, and the Westminster choir. Climaxing the performance will be the first performance in America of Verdi's "Hymn to the Nations," written in 1862 as a political attack on oppression in Italy. The Verdi score was photographed on microfilm and flown to New York, where the maestro has been combining it with "The Star Spangled Banner" in his own orchestration.

David Van Vactor's "Salute to Russia," a fanfare commissioned by Fabien Sevitzky, will be played by the Indianapolis orchestra today on a Russian program otherwise devoted to the music of Rimsky-Korsakoff, Prokofieff, Liadoff, and Tschaikowsky.

The Metropolitan Opera company announces an unabridged Wagner cycle on four consecutive Tuesday evenings, starting Feb. 9 with "Das Rheingold" and continuing with "Die Walküre" Feb. 16, "Siegfried" Feb. 23, and "Götterdämmerung" March 2. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct. No definite casts are announced, but the management says it will choose those casts from a list of well known artists, including Melchior, Lehmann, Lawrence, Traubel, Janssen, Huehn, Kipnis, List, Moscona, Thorborg, Maison, and others. Prices range from $1.10 to $5.50 a single performance. Subscribers to regular Metropolitan performances have first choice, and public sale of tickets for the cycle opens Wednesday, Jan. 27. Orders for single performances will be taken when the subscription sale ends Jan. 30.

The American-Russian Young Women's Club of Chicago will present its first concert this afternoon at 4:30 at the People's auditorium, 2457 West Chicago avenue. Appearing are Frances Glickman, soprano; Mona Bradford, contralto, and Josef Cristea, tenor. Proceeds go to Russian war relief and to the service men's fund.

Three Bands Open Chicago Cafe Dates This Week

Gracie Barrie Is Taking Over Husband's Role

By Will Davidson.

Three bands come back to town this week, and if variety is the spice of life, they should nicely season the season.

Irrepressible Charlie Wright returns to the Camellia House of the Drake Tuesday night, replacing valiant Val Ernie. Charlie is an amiable gent with a quick wit and a splendid flair for injecting new life into old music. He also has a wife, Dawn, who is an adorable elf with a penchant for face falls and slow burns, and a knack of imitating Hildegarde with all the incisive brilliances of a Gluyas Williams. She also sings. Starring with the Wrights will be lovely Eleanor French, one of Camellia House's favorite singers.

TWIN MODEL

Jane Churchill is one of the famous and beautiful twins who grace the nightly antics of the College Inn models in the Panther room of the Hotel Sherman.

Come Wednesday and the Blackhawk introduces Gracie Barrie to Chicago café circles as a band leader. Gracie is a popular girl here in her usual rôle of musical comedy or café singer and the band has always had a following in town, but she's new at the baton business, having taken over husband Dick Stabile's job when he went into the army. The Blackhawk also will offer Crawford and Caskey, dancers, and Maurice Rocco, the burnished boogie woogist.

Gene Krupa starts beating his drums in the Panther room of the Hotel Sherman again on Saturday, a hey hey day for the jitter kids. I presume that the College Inn Models will still be there. They always are.

Looking like a banjoless Ash Stevens, and adapting his semi-classical musical talents to the demands of a semi-popular music room, Armand Buisseret has taken hold of the Tavern room in the Bismarck hotel with a firm grasp. His opening night reception was gratifying, and he promises to be a popular maestro. Buisseret is no newcomer to popular music by any stretch of the imagination, but his multitude of local appearances have been of a little more genteel nature than one expects in a popular café band. His own violin is a beautiful instrument in his hands, at home both in the traditional phrases of the "Poet and Peasant" overture and the racial wails of "St. Louis Blues." His band is neat and compact. Eddy Kozak at the drums and marimba is something of a star, and Dorris Wittish, noted concert pianist, is a definite asset at the keyboard. The unit is strong on strings, which is well for this low ceilinged room.

Entertainment duties are carried capably by Eleanor Lutton, soprano, and Jules and Joan Walton, dance team. Miss Lutton offers a likable voice in simple arrangements of such songs as "A Heart That's Free," "Dinah Lou," and the Italian street song. The Waltons dance and demonstrate the polka and waltz, a feature that seems to find favor among Tavern guests.

'Father' Coming Back to Chicago on February 1st

Blackstone, a proud relic of WPA occupancy, was a dead theater to which patrons could not be brought back by any ruse whatsoever. But Serlin saw the wiseacres refuted, for "Life with Father" passed 66 weeks in Chicago, from February, 1940, to May, 1941, and broke the long time run record of 65 weeks established by "Lightnin'."

A third company, with Louis Calhern and Dorothy Gish, was organized in the fall of 1940. This troupe divided its first season between Boston and Philadelphia, moving to Detroit for the summer of 1941.

In October, 1941, nearly two years after the Broadway première, only six major cities had seen "Life with Father." From then until the spring of 1942, therefore, both the Chicago and the Boston companies went on tour, making countless long and short stands all over the country. Lillian Gish had by then withdrawn from the former Chicago company, to be replaced by Margalo Gillmore. Mr. Waram, Mr. Calhern and Dorothy Gish remained in their parts.

Even in three years the play had not lost its wide appeal, for it had become the most deeply loved play of this decade. While the orginal company—with new boys in place of the four who had long since outgrown their rôles—held the fort at the Empire, Mr. Waram and Miss Gillmore went barnstorming again. Because Mr. Calhern and Miss Gish wanted to enter the cast of a new play [which has long since closed], the third company was disbanded. The remaining touring company went to the Pacific coast and back, and now in eight days we shall have it with us again.

On Jan. 11—two weeks ago tomorrow—June Walker took over the part of Vinnie from Miss Gillmore. She will appear with Mr. Waram here in Chicago. The four boys, and most of the other characters, are newly cast since the Blackstone theater days.

Billy Rose to Produce 'Carmen Jones' This Year

"Carmen Jones," Oscar Hammerstein III.'s adaptation of Bizet's "Carmen," has been taken over by Billy Rose, who will produce it with an all-Negro cast later this season. Max Gordon held the rights for a long time. Robert Russell Bennett, who has been working on orchestrations for it, will direct the vocal music and conduct the orchestra.

'Arsenic' Making 2d Tour to Pacific Coast in Year

The Boris Karloff company of "Arsenic and Old Lace" is breaking all precedent by embarking on a second tour to the Pacific coast within a single year. The press agent remarks wryly, "In other times tours like this would have made the railroads very happy."

Drama Notes

Ruth Draper.

Ruth Draper, the eloquent and versatile one-woman show, makes her only Chicago appearance of the year at the Civic theater this afternoon. Scorning all scenery and all properties, except perhaps a chair and a table, and limiting her costume changes to a diversity of shawls, scarfs, and minor accessories, Miss Draper creates remarkably complete and satisfying illusions. Only in "Our Town" and Orson Welles' "Julius Caesar" has the theater been successful in dispensing with visual aids to the imagination, and these plays were able to call upon a large cast of actors, whereas Miss Draper does it all herself. Her program today begins with the familiar and hilarious "Doctors and Diets," and further presents three novelties—"The Actress," "Three Women and Mr. Clifford," and "Vive la France—1940."

In the Gilbert and Sullivan répertory of the Boston Comic Opera company, opening a fortnight's engagement at the Studebaker theater next Sunday, will be found seven out of ten successful operas of the inimitable British duo. They are in chronological order of their composition, "Trial by Jury" and "H. M. S. Pinafore" [offered as a double bill], "The Pirates of Penzance," "Patience," "Iolanthe," "The Mikado," and "Ruddigore." Absent from the list, unhappily, are "Princess Ida," "The Yeomen of the Guard," and "The Gondoliers." There are also four other Gilbert and Sullivan works which are virtually unknown in this country—"Thespis" [the earliest collaboration, and a failure at the outset], "The Sorcerer" [also an early work, belonging between "Trial by Jury," and "H. M. S. Pinafore"], and the two ill-starred compositions written after the collaborators' famous fight in 1890, "Utopia Limited" and "The Grand Duke."

Many of the ripest comic parts fall to Florenz Ames, a seasoned veteran, whose performances have been much praised in the east. He will appear as Ko-Ko in "The Mikado," Sir Joseph in "H. M. S. Pinafore," the Lord Chancellor in "Iolanthe," the major general in "The Pirates of Penzance," the judge in "Trial by Jury," Sir Ruddigore in "Ruddigore," and Bunthorne in "Patience." Other principal players and singers are Robert Pitkin, Morton Bowe, Philip Tully, Bertram Peacock, Robert Eckles, June Winters, Catherine Judah, Margaret Roy, and Marie Vandez. Louis Kroll conducts the orchestra.

"The Eve of St. Mark," which repeated its New York success at last Monday's opening in the Harris theater here, is Maxwell Anderson's 23d produced play. His first triumph came with a play about another war, "What Price Glory," written in collaboration with Laurence Stallings. "Saturday's Children," a simple and human drama, sent Ruth Gordon on the first lap toward stardom. His first verse plays were historical—"Elizabeth the Queen," "Valley Forge," and "Mary of Scotland." Later he continued his poetic style in such other plays as "Winterset," "High Tor," "Key Largo," and "Candle in the Wind." "Both Your Houses," dealing with the ills of congress, won the Pulitzer prize. He has won the New York Critics' Circle award twice with "Winterset" and "High Tor." And now the wheel has seemingly made a full turn, for in "The Eve of St. Mark" Mr. Anderson reverts to direct prose, and again, as in "What Price Glory," treats of soldiers and war.

"Watch on the Rhine" and "The Eve of St. Mark" share a common honor apart from their common elements and timeliness and patriotism. Tonight in Washington the New York company of "The Eve of St. Mark" will give the annual benefit, distressingly known as the "command performance," for the benefit of the infantile paralysis fund. A year ago it was given by Lucile Watson, Mady Christians, Paul Lukas, and most of the others now playing at the Selwyn in the welcome return engagement of "Watch on the Rhine." This is, incidentally, the final week for Lillian Hellman's magnificent drama, and if the Selwyn is not sold out for every performance Chicago's judgment is sorely at fault.

After 41 weeks at the Blackstone all the players in "Good Night, Ladies," may fittingly be described as veterans. But there are five veterans of many another show who are described as "the forgotten five of the praise department." The svelte young beauties in the foreground tend to distract public attention from the seasoned trouping of Dora Clement, Max Hoffman Jr., Cecil Elliott, Jean McDonald, and Beatrice Newport. Of these perhaps Miss Clement has the strongest claim, for "Good Night, Ladies," is her 675th play in 25 years in the theater.

Margaret Anglin, who gave a single performance as Mrs. Malaprop here last year on the closing night of "The Rivals," is now heading Frank McCoy's stock company performance of "Watch on the Rhine" in Detroit. She plays Fanny Farrelly, the rôle acted by Lucile Watson in the Selwyn theater cast here.

This One Will Look Well in Your Library

"VOGUE'S FIRST READER," edited by Frank Crowninshield. [Julian Messner, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell.

My friend whose wife presents him, every Christmas, with a year's subscription to Vogue, hoots when I say a good word for its brief essays: "Nobody reads Vogue, man! People only look at it."

This "First Reader" demonstrates that more men—and women—might well pause to read that magazine. It does not demonstrate, however, that the literary resources of women under hair dryers are equal to those of men waiting for their barbers. Compared with the literary anthology recently compiled, fortunately without illustrations, from Esquire's distinguished short stories and its comments on life and literature by Ernest Hemingway and William Lyon Phelps, Vogue's collection comes off second best.

Editor Crowninshield would counter this verdict by saying that Vogue attempts in its text to do something original; namely, to develop as "a new kind of literary form" the prose sketch distinguished by two characteristics: "the intimacy that comes of the truly personal experience," and brevity. "The results are often delightful; Robert Nathan, Ford Maddox Ford, Ludwig Bemelmans, Isobel Paterson, and Mary Ellen Chase, among others, do this sort of thing well.

A few hardy contributors forget the intimate personal touch and write sound, factual accounts of Neru, Mr. Churchill's American Mother, Billy Mitchell, and the Moscow Blitz. Frequently, however, Vogue's stable of celebrities reveal that when one tries to be personal, he becomes trivial; and that when he is asked to be concise, he thriftily saves his significant ideas for more important occasions. The quality of the authors here presented is, as the editor announces, very high; but the quality of their contributions to the "First Reader" at times is not.

The book is a pleasant storehouse for browsing and a source of agreeable items for dinner table conversation, no one of them yet popularized from coast to coast by the Reader's Digest: F. B. Stein's cryptic and pungent phrases, "Sorry for wolves" and "Intelligent Mr. Toad"; Irwin Edwan, Virginia Cowles, and Maj. Eliot's anecdotes of the war; nostalgic recollections of Christmas in old Europe by Pierre Van Passen, Leo Lani, Andre Maurois; chit-chat about Sarah Bernhardt, Claire Boothe, and Orson Welles. Memorable are two prose poems: "Dry Tortugas," by Archibald Macleish, and "A Prologue to America," by Thomas Wolfe. Not to be overlooked are those practical stimuli to good talk, the suggestions and recipes for choice food supplied by Sheila Hibben, Bemelmans, Lee Simonson, and Marjorie Rawlings. [Mrs. Rawlings, it should be interpolated, makes it clear that her food leaves her guests speechless.]

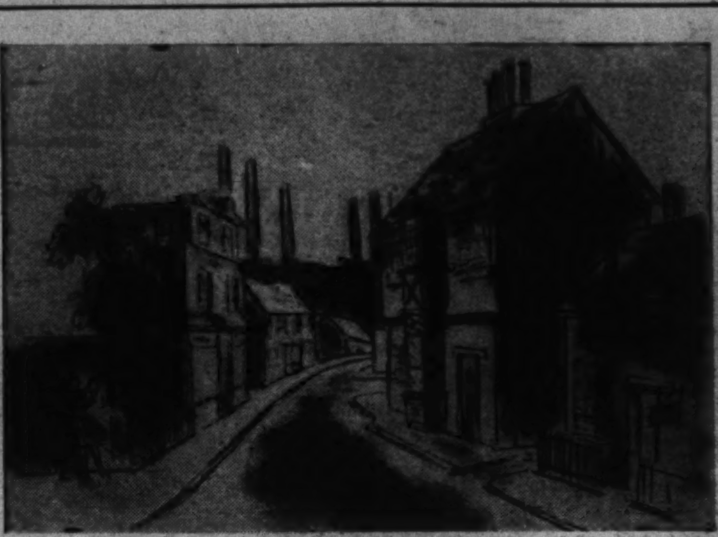
The "First Reader" will look very well on any drawing room table; a large volume handsomely bound in buckram and set, we are informed, in Bordoni Book type, with chapter titles most appropriately done in Ultra Bordoni and author's names in Typo Script Extended—an elegant example of the smart modern manner affected by the Condé Nast Publications. I have given a copy, as a bedside book, to a light hearted schoolmarm who will find it amusing in the cold semi-isolation of the North Country.



Cover design for J. B. Priestley's new novel, "Blackout in Gretley," to be published by Harper Feb. 3.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

OMNIBUS volumes are riding the crest of the wave in the publishing business this year. These fat and weighty collections, useful as book-ends after reading, have been coming out in dozens. Among the latest is "The Dickens Digest" [to be published on Feb. 8 by Whittlesey House], which contains four of the great Victorian novels, trimmed of what the editor regards as excess verbiage.

The purpose of this publication is to arouse among the plain people a desire to read Charles Dickens, but it is this column's notion that the plain people have never lost that desire. Only among the fancy people of this generation, such as jazz addicts, sprigs and sprats of the modernistic cults, and pseudo sophisticates fresh out of high schools where they studied "projects" instead of books, is the pure quill and real McCoy of Dickens, uncut and minus streamlining, regarded as tedious reading.

He Was a True Prophet.

So they are reprinting Dostoyevsky, the titanic novelist, slightly "tetched" in his mind, of 19th century Russia. If you will turn to his "The Possessed," written 1870-'72, you will find that Dostoyevsky was a true prophet about certain political and international curses of modernism. Listen to parts of a long speech in that work:

"Down with culture! We've had enough science. Without science we have material enough to go on for a thousand years, but we must have discipline. The thirst for culture is an aristocratic thirst. The moment you have family ties or love, you get the desire for property. We will destroy that desire. . . . We will reduce all to a common denomination: Complete equality! . . . Only the necessary is necessary. . . . But slaves must have directors, and once in 30 years Shigalov [a character probably standing for Marx and his disciples] will let them have a shock, and they will all suddenly begin eating one another up."

Where It All Began.

Here's a book for scholars and technicians of cabaret and dance band music: "The Real Jazz" [Smith and Durrell]. The author is a Frenchman, Hugues Panassié, who published in Paris during the 1930s a magazine called "Le Jazz Hot." He gives New Orleans a citation as the fountain source of jazz, but proclaims that Chicago reared the foundling into its full strength. "By 1920 Chicago had become the capital of jazz."

Any one who is preparing to sail away with a rifle on his shoulder and reconquer the Malayan peninsula [O, crying need!] should slip into his pack a little book, weighing only a few ounces, called "Easy Malay Words and Phrases" [John Day company]. It contains rules of pronunciation and useful glossaries.

In the vacant and dreadful days when the Rickenbacker castaways faced the Infinite and prayed for rain, did they recite any comforting verses from the machine age poets such as Archibald MacLeish? No, they chose a horse-and-buggy poem called "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," published 145 years ago.

Spook Helps Write Novel, Then Strikes

"NOTHING CAN RESCUE ME," by Elizabeth Daly. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.]

Reviewed by Drexel Drake.

When a mystery novel, in its dramatic substance, goes beyond the feeble promise of its opening chapter, the resultant reward for the reader is a gratifying reverse of the so frequently encountered letdown. This story has that noteworthy quality. The initial hint of spooks and mystic forces does not preclude a tale that is credible in its complications and their untangling. A large and assorted cast of principals causes momentary confusion, but this author has an extraordinary faculty of developing the reader's acquaintance with each member within the space of a moderate length book.

Elizabeth Daly provides another adventure for her private investigator, Henry Gamadge. He goes to Underhill, Florence Hutter Mason's country estate, because family, house guests, and servants are in a state of upset. On repeated occasions, some ominous quotations have been mysteriously inserted in the typed manuscript of a novel the middle aged Mrs. Mason is writing. Gamadge decides quickly that something more than a prank is afoot, but his intervention is too late to prevent murder from striking viciously. He engages in considerable unmasking of private attitudes toward the Hutter millions in the process of searching for the murderer.

Readers may be disappointed by the author's solution of the enigma [it's a bit on the weak side], but that does not destroy enjoyment of a splendidly written, plotted, and peopled story.

"BLIND MAN'S BLUFF," by Baynard Kendrick. [Little, Brown, $2.]

It required the keen sense of a blind detective, Capt. Duncan Maclain, to trap a murderer who had completely baffled the homicide squad in a series of ingeniously contrived murders. The captain's efficiency is admirable and the author avoids overstressing the detective's handicap of sightlessness. The first victim of the murder also was blind, but the author makes of that deliberate coincidence, by commendably rational treatment, an element of real strength in his story. Excellent dramatic background captures immediate interest and the melodrama that follows is well plotted.

"ANOTHER DAY TOWARD DYING," by Melba Marlett. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]

Only Mrs. Sarah O'Brien, who from her window saw the automobile run down Mrs. Hetty Willoughby, 84 year old benefactress, believed that it was not an accident. Even her detective husband found himself unable to share her conviction that it was murder. The first problem was to find the hit and run driver. Motive for murder was equally evasive. But Mrs. O'Brien persisted despite experiences that taxed her strength and endurance. This is faultless writing, careful character drawing, and thoro working out of a well conceived puzzle. These qualities may compensate for the gently flowing pace of the narrative and a murder that is at least a trifle fantastic in both motive and execution.

"MURDER TO TYPE," by Amelia Reynolds Long. [Phoenix Press, $2.]

With blood banks and transfusion elevated to the present point of universal prominence, perhaps it should have been anticipated that deliberate mixing of blood types would find its way into mystery fiction as a murder method. Beyond that novelty, fairly well staged, this story of blackmail and impetuous youth offers excitement for the not exacting reader. Serious effort, no doubt, but structure and people a bit shallow.

Real Post War Plan Needed, Cudahy Feels

"MAKE THIS THE LAST WAR," by Michael Straight. [Harcourt, Brace, $3.]

Reviewed by John Cudahy.

Of the increasing volume of post-war books "The Problems of Lasting Peace," written with realistic approach by our two greatest internationalists, former President Hoover and Hugh Gibson, and with that counsel of caution born of wide experience, is the greatest contribution.

There is no such note of restraint in the ebullient offering of Mr. Michael Straight, editor and Washington correspondent of the New Republic. Surveying the sorry scene, he is devastating in his indictment of causes and institutions which have brought about our miserable plight but thoroly sanguine and confident in his proposal for their eradication. In his analysis, war aims and peace aims are inseparable and he quotes an 80 word sentence of Vice President Wallace to the effect that when farmers can buy land reasonably and can sell their produce thru their own organizations, when labor has the opportunity to bargain effectively, "when the children of all people" can learn the whole truth of the world in which we live, then all will move "straight ahead."

Not even by world communism can this millennium be achieved, altho the author believes communism "an undeniable demonstration of the hunger in men thruout Europe and all nations to live as part of a united world." And finds that "It is Russia rather than to the allies to which the European underground turns for inspiration." But the real hope for victory and peace is the movement of the 30 nations which, we are told "possess three-fourths of the world's economic power."

However, irrespective of material means, the allies can win the war and win the peace, if they practice that selfless unity of purpose which they so nobly profess. They can win the war by the creation of a single command similar to the supreme war council, by the creation of central agencies for the distribution of munitions and supplies, by the effective mobilization of man power. They can win the peace by the realization of that "affirmative equalitarian society" which will bring about stabilization, international justice and order.

The war must be waged as a people's war with unselfish unity equally for all the people of earth. After the war America, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, must distribute their "great surpluses" . . . "on a reconstruction loan basis in which no repayment will be made." There will be a crying need for these resources, "four-fifths of China live on the verge of starvation" and the want in India, Asia, Africa, and southeastern Europe is distressing beyond imagination.

The effort of reconstruction and relief should set in motion forces of organization, economic development, freedom, stability, and social progress to accomplish a workable post-war world order. Mr. Straight deprecates blue prints. A plan, he implies, will emerge from mutual effort between peoples and nations if all are animated by unity.

Yet it is hard to see how any human institution, even an organization of the world, can effectually function without a structure. The leading case is that of the American colonies where divers and often conflicting elements were fused by the spirit of compromise in the federal Constitution.

This blindness to realities characterizes the whole thesis of "Make This the Last War." Yet one ghastly picture is realistic enough. That is, the famine, want, disease, epidemics, and utter chaos that will prevail when the armies cease firing. Millions will be homeless, naked, and starving, the economic fabric will be in shreds, transportation wrecked, and staggering the spectacle of misery and devastation. With this dreary prophecy the writer agrees emphatically.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

THE telegram read: "Hope you can lunch Saturday call me Palmer House morning MACKINLAY KANTOR." . . . It turned out that the author had invited to the luncheon some of his other old friends—Howard Rapport, "Snowshoe Al" Bromley, George Butzen, Bailey Stanton, and Stephen Cohn. . . . They, and we, knew him 'way back in the days when he wasn't dining at swell hotels. . . . There were times when he wasn't dining much anywhere.

Kantor was on his way from Johns Hopkins, where he had an operation on his leg, to Hollywood, where he is acting as adviser in the film version of his frontier novel, "Gentle Annie." . . . He is trying to get into shape for a sojourn in the army. . . . The operation was the result of an old injury. . . . If everything turns out all right, he'll follow his latest hero, Rusty Marsh, of "Happy Land," into the service. . . . And just when he's beginning to pile up a fortune from his writings.

MacKinley Kantor.

The former Chicagoan's career doesn't exactly follow the rags-to-riches theme. . . . He was never in actual want, even tho his father disowned him when he refused to follow the elder Kantor in the jewelry business. . . . "You'll never amount to anything as a writer," his father told him. . . . The youthful Mac tried his hand at poetry—a vocation that doesn't pay very much—and one of his poems, about the death of Floyd Collins in a Kentucky cave, appeared in THE TRIBUNE'S Line o' Type or Two column. . . . This earned him a lot of notoriety, but no money. . . . He wrote a couple of novels, with Chicago as the locale, and they did fairly well. . . . He went back to Iowa, where he and his mother made a living of sorts by running a newspaper in the kind of town pictured in "Happy Land." . . . Meanwhile, he kept on writing.

He started clicking with "Long Remember" and "The Voice of Bugle Ann." . . . His success gave him ideas. . . . He took an apartment in New York and bought a country place on Long Island, and the Kantor family had servants, governesses, and such. . . . His next novels continued to sell, but not enough to support him in the style to which he once hadn't been accustomed. . . . To tell the story briefly: he went broke. . . . Discouraged, he quit writing.

He decided to hell with it all, and took a train bound for Florida. . . . As the train was about to pull out, a messenger boy came along with a telegram. . . . It was from his literary agent, and it related that one of his books had just been sold to the movies for a sizable sum. . . . Mac grabbed his traveling bag and jumped off. . . . He tipped the messenger boy $5, and gave another five to the redcap—"for good luck." . . . It was about all the money he had.

It sounds like a movie, but that's how he got started again. . . . He went to Hollywood and began turning out original film stories, besides the stories he wrote for the book and magazine publishers. . . . Last fall he dictated a scenario, sold it to 20th Century-Fox, rewrote it, sold it to the Saturday Evening Post, and then Coward-McCann took it and started rushing it into book form. . . . All this in about two weeks' time. . . . It's called "Happy Land," and it was published nine days ago.

In his column in this section Harry Hansen relates that Kantor's newest story "gets closer to how people think and act than many a story that invokes a knowledge of psychiatry." . . . William Allen White has written: "If I had but one gift that I could give to every one in this land, high or low, rich or poor, military or civilian, it would be 'Happy Land.'" . . . Everywhere the critics are pointing out that, without resorting to heroics or flag waving, the novelette has brought home to Americans the real meaning of America.

"Maybe I'm all wet," we said to him, "but I think you've arrived at last. In my opinion, 'Happy Land' is by far the finest thing you've ever done. I wouldn't be surprised if it became a minor classic." . . . "Maybe you're right," he said, "but maybe it's only a matter of right timing. Perhaps it appeared at just the time when Americans needed it and were ready to accept it."

How the Axis Powers Got on Warpath

"RIP TIDE OF AGGRESSION," by Lilian T. Mowrer. [Morrow, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Maureen Daly.

This book is a condensation, a digest of the background of each of the axis nations as they led to this war. It is a swift and accurately dramatic account of the growth of the three wolf-nations, Germany, Italy, and Japan, from the start of the war in 1914 till they were ready to tear apart the world in their powerful grab for international domination in world struggle No. 2.

The rise of aggression was systematic and deadly. It was fed by foreign funds and nurtured by home governments that skillfully managed to pull the ersatz wool over the people's eyes and build up large armies behind the league of nations' back. Step by step, tank by tank, the ruthless, unscrupulous leaders built a mechanized force calculated thru an unhindered world-blitz, and trained and militarized minds in their own countries to achieve and preserve their goal—the enslavement of the world.

This is a book about the ambitions of the axis partners and the menace the three constitute to the rest of the world.

The political background that led up to this war is told here with accurate, factual precision. In Germany Hitler hood-winked, hoodlumed and blackjacked his way to power, mysteriously absorbed his nation's unemployed while the rest of the world was worrying about bread lines, and emerged with an army trained and mechanized second to none, while the vacillating league of nations turned its diplomatic back and muttered worried prayers for peace. With the march on Austria in 1938, Germany won the war of 1914.

Italy, guided by parrot-minded Mussolini, first tried her strength—and that of other nations—in the Ethopian conquest. The Spanish civil war provided excellent practice grounds for Italian troops, and Italian bombers got in their preliminary target practice over Spanish soil. Japan got in her first thrust when the Mukden incident in 1931; a mysteriously "placed" bomb, gave her an excuse for outraged access to Manchuria. By Dec. 7, 1941, all three aggressors had tried their punches sufficiently in the preliminaries and were ready for the major aggression.

"Rip Tide of Aggression" furnishes an organized review of events invaluable to a reader whose time does not permit him to read back thru the history of each country for the last quarter century.

Starts Series on America's Mountains

"THE FRIENDLY MOUNTAINS: Green, White, and Adirondacks," edited by Roderick Peattie. [Vanguard, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth C. Kaufman.

One of the most valuable ventures of recent years in the book publishing world has been a number of "series" which, if finished, will give a complete picture of the American scene, with large slices of history, folklore, and culture patterns thrown in for good measure. There is the well known series on American rivers, another on American seaports, another of "biographies" of states and cities. With this volume Roderick Peattie starts a series on the mountains of America.

The editor himself, a well known naturalist and geographer, points up the book in an introductory chapter on the Four Ranges, the White mountains, the Taconics, the Green mountains, and the Adirondacks. Zephine Humphrey, a distinguished Vermont author, sketches the history of the whole region, from the day in 1609 when Samuel de Champlain, from the lake which bears his name, first laid eyes on the Green mountains and the Adirondacks, on thru the periods of settlement and attempted settlement and down to the heydey of touring and hiking which has been so sadly interfered with by the war.

Robert Balk, a Holyoke geology professor, traces the pre-history of the mountains, the oldest on the continent; a Harvard meteorologist, Victor Conrad, discusses weather and climate, and Hugh M. Raup, a Harvard botanist, maps out the several zones and belts of vegetation. A chapter on "The Round of Nature," by Henry Potter, a farmer and self-trained observer of flora and fauna, ably seconds the observations of the experts. I found Potter's talk about birds by far the most interesting and livest part of the book.

There are chapters on mountain climbing and hiking by Louis B. Puffer, a Vermont university professor, and on skiing by Katharine Toll. An appendix gives explicit instructions for the prospective visitor, be he a mountain climber, amateur botanist, winter sportsman, or garden variety of tourist with a healthy curiosity about one of the most beautiful and accessible [and considerable] playgrounds in the country.

There are a score of beautiful photographic reproductions, but, incredibly, no map. The book suffers in that, being a compilation, it lacks a central point of view; the contributors wrote with a utilitarian aim, and they have succeeded in giving a vast amount of helpful information for those who may get to know the mountains or who already know them at first hand. The reader outside of New York state or New England will probably find that they take for granted a background he does not possess.

QUIZ ANSWERS

These are the answers to Vincent Starrett's query, "Where would you send their mail?" on page 11.

1. No. 10 Downing street, London, England. 2. 221-B Baker street, London. 3. 149 Salem street, New Haven, Conn. 4. 105 North Tower, Bastille, Paris. 5. "Hearthrug, near the Fender, with Alice's love."

Allowing 20 points for each correct answer, par is 60. Anything over that figure is miraculous.

Bennett Beauty.

Joan Bennett, screen star, has signed a contract with Alfred A. Knopf for a book giving her time-budgeted methods for keeping attractive in these hurried days. Its title is "How to Be Attractive," and publication is scheduled for mid-April.

Good Morning!

Perfect nonsense—the story of "You Were Never Lovelier"—but it serves as an adequate vehicle for that glamorous twain, Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire, to dance, sing, and make merry in.

They don't dance as much as I would have liked, but their every number is class—especially the sample which, so to speak, your Mr. Davis flings in the face of his to-be father-in-law. At the time neither he nor Edwardo has an inkling that there's to be any such relationship.

The crux of the situation has an old ring. Namely, a family tradition that younger daughters may not wed until the eldest is safely married.

The locale is South America. Edwardo is a wealthy hotel magnate with three lovely daughters. . . . The two younger are secretly engaged—and on pins and needles because their icy hearted sister will have none of men. . . .

Then comes hope, beautiful hope, for them in the person of Robert Davis, famous New York dancer. . . . He has lost all his money playing the races in South America and he is forced to seek a job dancing in Edwardo Acuna's hotel, where his friend, Xavier Cugat, and his band are playing. . . .

Edwardo will have none of him. O, NO? He has plenty of him and for breakfast, dinner, and supper. And thru his OWN—stupidity. But all of that is for you to learn about from the picture. . . . You will surmise that ere long a heart of ice melts under the sunshine of a smile. . . . Guess whose heart and guess whose smile?

Outside of the fact that the women in the cast are most unbecomingly gowned [I thought and I can be wrong], the picture is attractive to the eye, musically pleasing, and considerable fun.

See you tomorrow.

SECOND RUN

One of the heroine's few contented moments in "Now, Voyager," brings softness and a smile to her interpreter's face. Bette Davis as she appears in the picture, now having a second run at McVickers.

Actor Yearns to Play Good, Honest Murderer

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—David Hoffman is trying to figure out whether he's working up or down the ranks of movie villainy. In his first two film rôles the New York stage actor portrayed Nazi spies. Currently he's working as a Russian traitor. "I don't know which is the worse," Hoffman sighs. "Maybe in my next film I'll get to play a good, honest murderer or something else comparatively respectable."

This Town Called Hollywood

By Philip Scheuer

A 20th Century-Fox employé for many years, who nevertheless still regards Hollywood as a strange and wonderful place, glanced out of an office window the other noon and saw something that made his eyes pop.

Down the steps of the administration building there descended a rather large man who might have come straight from the gilded fables of old San Francisco. He wore a flamboyant western outfit, striped blue vest, broad-brimmed hat, and he was jauntily puffing a stogie. On his arm was a very pretty damsel in a wide picture hat and a dress that to the onlooker's stupefied gaze seemed also to belong to an olden day.

As he continued to stare, the pair approached a gig drawn up at the curb. The gentleman helped the lady in, signaled to a groom who stood by the horse's head, and put one foot tentatively on the gig's step. The groom moved to the step on the opposite side and placed his weight on it; whereupon the gentleman lurched decisively into the driver's seat and, touching his whip to the animal's flanks, drove smartly away.

A motor car was parked near by. The groom got into this beside a uniformed chauffeur, closed the door, and in a few moments the car had followed the gig slowly down the paved road leading to Santa Monica boulevard.

Thru all this singular activity, life had gone on much as usual—men and women strolling casually by or pausing to chat, an occasional car or truck rolling past at reduced speed. There had been no cameraman present to record this deathless event; indeed, our friend had only his memory to assure him that it had happened at all.

Suddenly he realized who the couple, so hauntingly familiar, had been—Orson Welles and Linda Darnell.

I have gone to some pains to verify the story. It's true, all right—not only of that one day but of many. And its sequel is this:

Welles, pretty damsel [her name changes each time], horse and gig continue along Santa Monica boulevard to Beverly Hills. At Romanoff's restaurant they are met by the groom, who has reached there ahead of them. The procedure of the administration building is repeated, but in reverse. The groom takes the horse's head and the couple enter the restaurant. After they have lunched, presumably well, they reappear, climb aboard the gig and return to the studio—followed and later preceded by chauffeur and groom. The gig is then turned over to the groom, who vanishes with it—horse and all, sirs—until another midday has rolled around.

The gig belongs to Tim Durant, broker and sportsman. Welles owns the horse. A Welles spokesman was explicit as to the great man's purpose in adopting his present mode of travel. "Orson does it," he said with finality, "to conserve gas and rubber."

As of this writing, no one but her own mother has come out with a good word for unhappy Frances Farmer. This is unnatural, even in a town where knifing in the back is the accepted convention among the best of friends. I hardly know the girl and am only a middling admirer of her screen work. But to even the most casual reader of the published accounts, it must be plain that Miss Farmer is sick. Heart-sick, mind-sick, body-sick or whatever, she is certainly far from well.

Yet Hollywood was quick to condemn—forgetting, perhaps how quick the rest of the country is to place the onus on Hollywood itself. All of us, it seems to me, could profit more by at least seeking out the true causes of human anguish before we vilify and mock their outward aspect.

After 33 Years, Cast in Movie with Classmates

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—Back in 1909 Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Roland Young, and E. J. Ballantine were in the same graduating class at what now is the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London. Hardwicke and Young became movie actors, but Ballantine stuck exclusively to the stage. He didn't see his two former classmates again for 33 years until recently, when he came to Hollywood to appear in his first picture, and found he had been cast in the same film with them.

LOVELY RITA

A cryptic expression, isn't it? And cryptic the lady is in "You Were Never Lovelier." She is Rita Hayworth and she certainly DOES keep Fred Astaire guessing. On the Chicago screen.

Vaudeville

Jo Stafford.

Other stage talent includes Radcliffe and Jenkins, Red Dorris, and Dolly Mitchell.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

FOR the world, as we know and perhaps fear it, as we find it at times tiresome and perhaps ugly, there is still the remedy of flight. In spite of restrictions on transportation there are several possible retreats. Death, according to Plato, is the safest one. But death, as even Mr. Aldous Huxley agrees, is a slightly final sort of remedy; few of us look forward to it with pleasure. And drink, as a surrogate for death, adds ultimately only to the discomforts of life. There are happier therapies. In philosophical mood, I suggest books as the most satisfactory escape; for solace, distraction, and respite from the exigencies of living.

One reads, of course, what it gives one pleasure to read, and shuns the list of the Hundred Best Books. Personally, for the purest escape, I prefer the grand old tales of shipwreck and island adventure and those absorbing documents of crime and solution that catalog as detective stories. This is an adolescent hangover, no doubt—don't bother to point it out to me. And if you think vicarious adventure is a poor substitute for the real thing, you are wrong. Better than the experiences themselves, take my word for it, are the books about them—in which you may encounter all manner of difficulty and discomfort without once going hungry or in peril of your life.

Sequel to "Treasure Island."

I am moved to these reflections by the appearance in my mail of two books—"Back to Treasure Island" and "The Best of Mr. Fortune." The first, as you may guess, is a sequel to "Treasure Island." It was originally published seven years ago. The occasion for its immediate appearance is a seventh printing, indicating in some degree its popularity. It has sold steadily since publication, in 1935, and already is an established favorite with boys. It has been translated into Swedish and arrangements have just been completed by the Vanguard Press for a Spanish translation to be published at Buenos Aires. Its author is Lt. Comm. H. A. Calahan, U. S. N. R.

Most sequels are disappointing, even when they are written by the original inventors of the story. This one is excellent, altho the continuation is by another hand than Stevenson's. To have written a sequel to "Treasure Island" that even approximates the initial masterpiece is an achievement. Readers unacquainted with Comm. Calahan's pastiche, which was, of course, a labor of love, will be delighted to renew acquaintance with some of the choicest scoundrels of literature. Most of the old characters are in the story. Blind Pew and Billy Bones are dead, as we know; so is Israel Hands. But Jim Hawkins and Long John Silver, Dr. Livesey and Squire Trelawney, Ben Gunn, Black Dog, and Abraham Gray are back, in a new set of red covers, for another crack at the treasure. There is also a new figure, a black girl named Diana, who is a honey.

Found Cyanide in Cat's Milk.

The second volume mentioned is in the excellent and inexpensive Pocket Books series of reprints. Culled from the original volumes, by the deft hand of Miss Lee Wright, here are 12 adventures of the ineffable Reggie Fortune, the moaning, mourning, sad-eyed amateur who has been called one of the "Big Five" among living detectives. It was Reggie, old inhabitants will remember, who discovered the cyanide in the cat's milk, who alone noted the absence of broken glass in the roadway, who knew what the mediaeval funeral barrow contained, who guessed why the quiet lady was so quiet, who saw the concealed face in the queer picture that looked like a problem in geometry.

Yes, Mr. Fortune is a good detective, and I like him when he is detecting; I like him very much. When he goes sentimental on me, I want to slip away some place and be quietly sick. Mr. H. C. Bailey, his creator, is worse than A. S. M. Hutchinson when it comes to dealing sentimentally with women and children, who—except as integral and imperative parts of the problem—have no place in a detective story anyway. Or have they? Canon Whitechurch, the distinguished English prelate, once wrote to the London Times about me, so annoyed was he by some passing remarks of mine on this dangerous subject. Maybe I am just an old grouch.

Nevertheless, these are all good stories, in their detectival aspects; I wouldn't be without them, and at a quarter nobody need be. Miss Wright thinks these 12 are the best. I could argue with her about that, but I won't be so ungrateful.

American Woman Started Fuss.

It is not often remembered that the Shakespeare-Bacon madness was inspired by an American. She was the aptly-named Delia Bacon, a Connecticut visionary who ended her days in an asylum. Hawthorne, himself, says Van Wyck Brooks in "The Flowering of New England," might have invented her tragic story. As it was, he gave it to the world in his fine volume of English studies, "Our Old Home."

It was during his four dull years in the American consulate at Liverpool that the novelist became involved with Miss Bacon. She had been the friend of his wife and of Mrs. Stowe, had written a few historical tales, had conducted a few classes in history; then had begun her hysterical career as an anti-Shakespearean apostle. Her personal charm must have been considerable, however; she fairly magnetized Hawthorne, even Emerson and Carlyle, altho they were all skeptical about her claims. It was Miss Bacon's notion that Shakespeare's plays were written by a syndicate of scholars centering around Sir Walter Raleigh, and that they contained a system of thought, concealed by ciphers, for which the world was waiting.

She claimed to have received permission from the vicar at Stratford-on-Avon, and from the sexton, to open the grave of Shakespeare in search of documents that would disprove his authorship of the plays. To this end she haunted the church, at midnight, with a lantern, hovering over the grave like an obscene ghoul, but lost her courage in the face of the bard's famous imprecation, and did nothing.

Her book, "The Philosophy of Shakespeare's Plays Unfolded," was published in 1857, with an introduction by Hawthorne, who paid for the entire publication and lost about $1,000 by his generosity. His only reward was the lady's frantic anger at the lukewarmness of his preface. Today the book is one of the curiosities of literature.

Where Would You Send Their Mail?

Poaching on the preserves of Mr. Howard Collins, I am minded to propose a quiz question of my own: If you had occasion to send a letter to the following characters of history and legend, what address would you write on the envelope? 1. Winston Churchill. 2. Sherlock Holmes. 3. Solomon Levi. 4. Dr. Manette. 5. Alice's Right Foot. [Answers on page 12.]

New Study of Hitler and His Nazi Policies

"THE NAZI STATE," by William Ebenstein. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.75].

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi.

The flood of books on nazism continues unabated. The desire to capitalize on the public's curiosity—a morbid one at times—and to whip up more hatred of the enemy explains the haste in writing and publishing. Quality of output is accordingly somewhat mediocre.

However, this is one of the better [not of the best] among such publications. Prof. Ebenstein writes well, with a sense for drama. He handles in a modest sized volume all major aspects of the Nazi system: government and economy, religion and schools, labor relations and international policies. He even tries to give the historical background in each field of the Nazi policies, which he makes appear to have grown out of the depth of German history. Hitler is presented as a sort of executor of a totalitarian will that was allegedly handed down by past generations of Germans.

The trouble is that picking out half-digested analogies which suit one's purpose doesn't make history. Omitting, e. g., the demoralizing consequences of a lost war, of a devastating inflation, the bolshevik threat, the great financial crisis, etc., gives an entirely misleading picture of Hitler's success. If you ignore, as Mr. Ebenstein does, that the subordination of private welfare to the whims of the state, the technique of persecution and of propaganda, the regimentation of personal freedom and of economic life, the break with religious and ethical traditions, were all modeled on the soviet pattern, well, then, you can blame it all on Frederick the Great, or even on Martin Luther [of all people!].

Dr. Ebenstein is not much of an expert in history, sociology, international affairs, theology, and least of all in economics. But he ventures into every field, and does so by relying on a few Nazi books, rather than on the study of Nazi life. However, he does a fine job in his own field: public administration. He is thoroly familiar with the Nazi laws of administration and describes astutely the organizational "reforms" instituted under Hitler. To be sure, he knows more about the letter of the law than about the actual practice of its application.

The Hitler state is a militaristic monster, indeed. But the professor makes it look so monstrous that it couldn't exist. It eats up its own children, so to speak. Why should the Germans have been enthusiastic [in peace time] about it if they never received from it anything but hardships, as Mr. Ebenstein wants us to believe?

Unique Portrait of Jewish Life

"MEMOIRS OF MY PEOPLE," by Leo W. Schwarz. [Farrar & Rinehart, $3.75.]

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy.

This is another anthology, but not just merely another collection of miscellany, put together for the reader too lazy or too uninterested to do more than sample here and there the various fine wares of a large and comparatively unknown literature.

The collection is unique in that it is a gallery of self portraits gathered from the vast store of Jewish writing—the first time this has been attempted for any tongue. The time covered reaches from the 11th century to our own day, including many countries and many languages in the 60 selections which comprise the book. A majority of the excerpts had to be translated, and this difficult task has been done uniformly well. One gets the impression of knowing the biography of the Jewish soul in its manifold aspects, of the reaction of the Jew to the currents of life and thought about him.

The contents indicate good taste and fine discrimination on the part of the editor. The volume is a valuable addition of supplemental reading to the pedestrian histories of Jewish life, without the dryness that this source material usually has. With great skill Mr. Schwarz has woven the intricate tapestry of Jewish life, giving us a vivid, full and harmonious picture.

Nazis Tunnel the Channel in This Novel

"TUNNEL FROM CALAIS," by David Rame. [Macmillan, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Marcia Winn.

Now that we think of it, it seems remarkable that no modern Jules Verne beat David Rame to the central theme of this exciting adventure story—a tunnel beneath the English channel.

This is no place for well known geographical tidbits about the width of the channel, the chalk cliffs of Dover on one side, and the sand of Calais on the other. But all conspire, under Mr. Rame's excellent handling, to make one of the best mystery stories of this war, a mystery without [we are happy to note] a murder.

The plot is extraordinarily provocative. After reading it you keep muttering to yourself: "Why haven't the Germans already done this in the war? Why haven't the English done it? Could either foe possibly be doing it now?"

No one in British officialdom would believe, as Hemming, a Canadian engineer, kept trying to convince them, that the Germans could conceive or put into execution so fantastic a plan. Everywhere Hemming went he was treated with the polite indifference one gives a madman that no one really wants to arouse or be bothered with. Everywhere he told them of the Pietot shield, the molelike boring machine that, he was confident, was even then eating its way beneath the channel. Any day, he told them, it was likely to break thru on the British side somewhere in the Dover area. And the minute it broke thru, he warned them, a mighty mechanized army would pour out, while above would be aerial protection.

Not until he ran into a naval officer named MacRae, who had come to the Dover cliffs to investigate a light shining out whenever a convoy neared, did he find a credulous ear. How he, MacRae, a poacher named Henry, and a host of other extraordinary characters foiled the Nazis the minute they actually broke thru the British end of the tunnel makes a book of rare suspense and excitement—one you can read in two hours and wonder about for two months. We recommend it highly.

World's Biggest.

Publication date of "The Rise and Fall of the House of Ullstein," by Herman Ullstein, has been set for Feb. 10 by Simon and Schuster. The author was vice president of what used to be the largest privately owned publishing firm in the world. It was founded in Berlin by his father in 1877 and flourished up until the time Hitler came into power. At the peak of its success, the House of Ullstein employed 10,000 people and did approximately 20 million dollars' worth of business a year.

Woollcott's New Anthology Will Delight Men in Service

By Harry Hansen.

New York City.

THE drive for books is on and everybody is digging up volumes that the men at the front and in camp might like to read. But what do they enjoy reading? A number of months ago the British published a handy volume of favorite stories and poems and it was proposed to issue it on this side, when Alexander Woollcott said: "Why don't we make up our own?"

He knew what soldiers liked, for in the other war he had experience writing for the army newspaper, the Stars and Stripes. When I met him at that time during the occupation of Paris by the AEF—and don't think the Parisians didn't welcome it!—he was wearing a sergeant's uniform, and altho he filled it out well he didn't burst any buttons. Now he has prepared an anthology for the American soldier and sailor, and Viking Press will issue it under the title of "As You Were."

To compile it he had suggestions from Carl Sandburg, Stephen Vincent Benet, Booth Tarkington, and many others. He put into it poems and articles and stories that soldiers might enjoy—something by O. Henry, William Allen White, James Whitcomb Riley, Ernest Hemingway, and many others.

I've seen the list and it contains some surprises—for instance, the first appearance, in such respectable company, of Eugene Field's amusing poem about one of Willie's mishaps. Pure enjoyment dictated the table of contents. Nobody will make any money on the book. All the poems and prose pages have been donated, the editor gave his own time free, and the publisher will collect no profit. The troops, everybody hopes, will enjoy having it around.

Kantor Gets Close to People.

Authors do not, as a rule, like to portray simple, homely men and women, because they abhor sentimentality and are afraid they will be thought naive. They want to get behind the mask and reveal the inner turmoil. This has led them to neglect the lives of plain people who never kill any one, never become nervous wrecks, and never have to pay alimony.

By remembering that such lives are representative of the great body of citizens, MacKinlay Kantor has managed to do real well cultivating his Iowa acres. His little story about the lad who worked in his father's drug store, enlisted in the navy, and did the job that all American lads are doing because it's there to be done, gets closer to how people think and act than many a story that invokes a knowledge of psychiatry. I'm speaking of "Happy Land," of course. Men who say the American people are not awake to the war ought to read it and learn.

Kantor enjoys writing about Civil war veterans, Spanish-American war themes, and midwestern characters. His first novels grew out of life in Chicago—"Diversey" and "The El Goes South," for he attended high school there and worked at odd jobs in the 1920s before he went back to do newspaper work in Iowa. I didn't think his "Long Remember" got the true feeling of the days of Gettysburg, and in that book he did not use the method of heaping up insignificant detail that has characterized his most successful writing. He certainly has the trick of making the reader's memory work for him.

Max Miller in Washington.

The government pay roll must be heavy with authors these days. Many of them left good jobs to add to the heaps of written matter that pours out of Washington. So they are not in the same category as the unemployed and indigent who were aided by the WPA during the worst of the depression.

One of the latest to join the Washington group is Max Miller, who became nationally known when he wrote "I Cover the Waterfront" and has since written a number of books similar in character. Miller is in the naval reserve, on public relations work. He had to leave San Diego for Washington. At the same time his wife, Margaret Miller, will do a long distance editorial job by continuing to write the book page of the San Diego Union from Washington. Altho Miller has been associated with the west coast nearly all his life, he was born in Ypsilanti, Mich.

I suppose Chicago authors line up pretty much in the same way that authors of New York do. Many of them are eager to coöperate with the magazine section of the OWI and spread information about our needs and accomplishments. Subjects are often suggested by the OWI, and then authors and editors get together and plan stories and articles. After they are written, the articles have to be approved by the Washington authorities, but there is little difficulty or delay.

Some More About Joliet.

Miss Katherine Stites of 1747 North Mason avenue, Chicago, has completed writing a work of history on the region of the Illinois and Mississippi rivers from 1675 to 1752. She informs me that the earliest mention of Joliet occurs in St. Cosme's journal of 1698, when he says that after making the portage [to the Des Plaines] "there were four more leagues to make to Monjolly." "The name gradually changed from Monjolly to Juliet," says Miss Stites, "and it took an act of the legislature to change the name of Juliet to Joliet."

"Moon Is Down" Voted Best.

It was a distinct shock to some circles in New York when the Book of the Month club announced the results of balloting on the best fiction and nonfiction of 1942 by critics and reviewers of America. This showed that 201 reviewers had voted "The Moon Is Down," by John Steinbeck, into first place.

Steinbeck's book has been roundly condemned as soft, defeatist, appeasement, and everything else, because the Nazis in it were considered too gentle by those who want only extreme portraits in current fiction.

The Book of the Month club did not disclose how individual reviewers voted; so there need be no personal recriminations. However, they stood loyally by war books, putting "They Were Expendable" first in nonfiction, which satisfied all parties. Out of 20 books voted on, 12 were related in one form or another to the war, and Anna Segher's "The Seventh Cross," by far the best novel written by a German refugee against the Nazi terror, won third place.

An Interesting Book on War in Pacific and What It Means

"PACIFIC CHARTER," by Hallett Abend. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

"Wanted: A Blueprint for Peace." This could easily serve as a title for this interesting book. Mr. Abend has served for years as correspondent for the New York Times in the orient. He feels the inadequacy of the Atlantic Charter to define the policy for peace in the orient. Some of its provisions, notably concerning self-government or choice of government, are not yet wholly applicable.

To be specific, French Indo-China, Malaya, the Dutch East Indies, Corea, are not yet in a position either to govern themselves or even perhaps to be articulate about their own needs. They are all today being exploited by Japan. Their enthusiastic support of the cause of the allied nations is urgently needed. Can a Pacific Charter be so devised as to obtain it? "The several hundred million peoples whom she now exploits and rules must be told specifically what they stand to gain by Japan's defeat."

The allied nations are engaged in this war to earn their freedom. "Freedom to be earned." It might be disastrous to give it at once to people like the Coreans or Malayans who, like the former have known more than a generation of disintegrating oppression, or the latter who have always accepted a paternal government. But both should be made to know, and as early as possible, the value and responsibility of self-direction. It is problems like these that are made clear by this proposed Pacific Charter.

For the war in the Pacific, as has repeatedly been said by this reviewer, is quite as important as, perhaps more important than the war in the Atlantic and Mediterranean. And on the implementing of that charter will rest our own welfare and security. America will do well to think long and deeply about the fate of these Asiatic peoples. They are no longer only a theme for anthropological or aesthetic interest.

"It will be the fact that Japan attacked the democracies which will have greatly hastened the end of the old colonial system." Curiously this statement is true, but not quite so devastating in its implications for the democratic west as some might at first imagine. It could and should draw the east and west closer. The urge for self-determination the east is feeling, an urge that will become more and more insistent as the war goes on, can and should become a bond of union.

To be sure the white races lost face when the Japanese so easily drove them out of their once proud administration. If with native help we can win those devastated regions back and establish peace and mutual good will, mutual respect will follow. Face can be lost and regained as the history of the orient abundantly proves.

Nor need one, as the author seems to suggest, charge a people with ingratitude, when like the Burmese or Indians, in return for an excellent administration they seem to hate the administrator. For the very liberality of the rule has deliberately encouraged the desire for independence, has been the preparation for it, and the restlessness is the sign of health.

The Burmese hatred of the Chinese and Indians is much greater than the resentment against the British. It was partly for this reason that a Chinese army at first was not invited to aid in the defense of Burma. And the Indian dislike of the British goes no deeper than that abstraction, "British Raj." India's war effort today is much more nearly wholehearted than Mr. Abend would suggest. Mr. Gandhi's voice is not the voice of all India.

The truth is the differences in race, religion, temperament, and tradition in that more than half of the human race that we call the orient are much more profound than any differences in Europe. The question of peace and security for the Pacific and Indian oceans is titanic in its magnitude. Its charter is no secondary issue.

Amazon Airman Hunts for Father

"AIRMEN OF THE AMAZON," by Frederic Nelson Litten. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

The jacket of "Airmen of the Amazon" says the book is intended "for older boys," so it might be a misnomer to classify this rattling good yarn as a "juvenile."

The realistic and accurate background of aviation, the rivalry of German and American interests for Brazilian air lines, and the depiction of the life of the rubber gatherers in the Amazon basin are woven into the search of young Longstreet Parr for his father, Jeff Parr, a flyer who was lost in the jungle, leaving only a faint hint of his whereabouts.

Jeff Parr was captured and held prisoner by savage Indians in the interior. How his son flew and finally found him is a story that will surely interest "older boys."

Memoirs of the Golden Age of Music

"THE MUSIC GOES ROUND," by F. W. Gaisberg. [Macmillan, $3.]

Reviewed by Claudia Cassidy.

Despite its reminiscent title, this is no technical treatise on the tuba; nor, despite the fact that Fred Gaisberg has spent half a century making gramophone records, is it a formidable tome on the history and development of that jack and the beanstalk business.

It is a warm, friendly, factual volume about the people concerned in the fabulous progress from Edison's cylinder thru Berliner's disc and electrical recording to the gigantic industry now checked in midair by wartime shortage of Indian shellac—the very material so joyously hailed by Emile Berliner and Gaisberg, then his assistant, when they persuaded a button manufacturer to mold successful record impressions from plastics.

But no such looming shadow darkens Mr. Gaisberg's tale, which has a touch of Aladdin and a streak of Alger. His is a success story, with all the early tribulations dimmed by the brilliance of the happy ending. As a boy he hustled artists for cylinder performance, set up the recording horns and played accompaniments—for $10 a week. As an older boy he helped Berliner try to wrest backing from men who had no interest in a flat record, but had plenty in the idea of a talking doll. As a young man he got in on the ground floor of what became the RCA Victor company—and thereby hangs the tale.

As chief recorder of the British Gramophone company, Gaisberg spent a picturesque lifetime persuading the great and the near great to spill their wares into the increasingly hungry maw of mechanical reproduction of music. Because he has integrity and a gift for people—both unmistakably reflected in his book—his story becomes a vast memoir brimming with intimate tales of music's golden age.

Paderewski and Kreisler are his idols, but the book also holds revealing glimpses of Battistini, Tetrazzini, Chaliapin, Melba, Patti, and dozens more from singers to instrumentalists, conductors, and composers. He makes Casals a kind of Don Quixote, recording with pipe in mouth, imperturbably tying up a broken cello string and proceeding with the music. He tells how, disobeying orders, he paid the young Caruso £100 to record 10 songs—10 songs that cleared £15,000 for Victor and gave Caruso his first contract with the Metropolitan.

And so it goes, brimful of anecdote and information. The chapter on Sir Edward Elgar is the most human I have encountered, and the notes on Chaliapin are luminous with authenticity. You will miss some great names, because Gaisberg was primarily concerned with Victor artists, who made up his life. But between the lines of his fascinating story you will learn a lot about the record business, and you will get tantalizing ideas about records worth collecting—providing you can locate them.

Publisher Announces Prize Novel Contest

The eleventh biennial Harper prize novel competition was announced last week. The judges, Stephen Vincent Benet, Irita Van Doren, and Clifton Fadiman, will cast their votes without knowing who the authors are and without consultation among themselves. There are to be no restrictions as to setting or theme, and the contest is not limited to first novels. The award is based on literary merit alone. July 1 is the closing date. Would-be contestants may write Harper & Brothers, 49 East Thirty-third street, New York City, for further particulars.

Here's Your Movie Shopping List

By Mae Tinee

While bloodhounding about, I came on the trail of three pictures scheduled to appear soon on Chicago screens. Sh-h-h! Here's about 'em!

"The Palm Beach Story" has as featured players Claudette Colbert, Mary Astor, Joel McCrea, and Rudy Vallee. The story is about a gorgeous wife, married five years, who feels that she is holding her husband down. . . . Husband—Joel McCrea. [Wife, Claudette.] SO—she leaves him—not exactly over his dead body—but you get the idea. She feels she can do more for him as a "sister" and she's fired with the ambition to raise $99,000 with which to finance one of his inventions. . . . To Reno she goes—and I feel that no more of the tale should be told you here. . . . Preston Sturges wrote and directed it. . . . He did the same for "The Great McGinty," "The Lady Eve," "Christmas in July," and "Sullivan's Travels"—as you may remember. . . . In the picture, Miss Colbert wears TWO wedding gowns—one for a wedding in 1937, the other for a marriage in 1942. . . . ALSO she borrows a pair of pajamas from a six footer, Robert Warwick. But there I go, spilling things!

"Casablanca" is the movie Ingrid Bergman, Humphrey Bogart, Paul Henreid fans have been waiting for. . . . The scene—Casablanca, Morrocan metropolis. . . . Time—The period following the occupation of France. . . . Key situation—Refugees fleeing from Nazi Europe and unable to secure exit visas gathering in Casablanca. A main haunt of these people is Rick's Café Americain—owned by Humphrey Bogart. And, in and about this café unfolds a story comprised of many stories—on the order of "Grand Hotel."

The gang's all here in "Star Spangled Rhythm." Meaning that when you see this tuneful cinema, you'll look at and listen to Fred MacMurray, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Mary Martin, Dorothy Lamour, Rochester, Veronica Lake, Dick Powell—and O, what's the use—practically EVERYBODY'S there, a-singin' and a-dancin', and a-wisecrackin.' Also, I hear the picture has a story, too. But, does that matter, I wonder?

Russian Actresses Write and Star in Broadway Play

'Dark Eyes' Is Light and Gay but Confusing

By Burns Mantle.

Eugenie Leontovich.

New York [Special].—No more engaging story of the theater than that of the play called "Dark Eyes" has recently been told. This is the joint work of two Russian actresses, Elena Miramova and Eugenie Leontovich. It is also the story of two Russian actresses, Natasha and Tonia, who wrote a play in order to provide themselves with parts they liked and with the hope that the sale of the play would give them much needed work in the theater. Which happens to be exactly the way it worked out.

In the play Natasha and Tonia, together with their friend, Olga, are Russian refugees stranded in New York. When they are put out of an apartment for which they could not pay the rent, they naively gave their landlord a check for $500 on a bank in which they had no money.

This, they soon discovered, was a jailable offense, and for days they tried eluding the local police by sleeping in Central Park. Then they met another refugee, their old friend, Prince Nicolai, who, being told of their dilemma, promptly invited them to go with him to the home of his fiancée on Long Island for the week-end. Three days of rest and food should give them a fresh start.

Thus it happens that all four refugees barge in upon Helen Fields, who expects to marry the prince, and her family. Her father is an American industrialist who has been having a running fight with the burocrats in Washington and comes home all tired out. Her grandmother doesn't know what all the fuss is about.

Things are pretty hectic in the Field home from then on. The gay Russians organize a birthday party for grandma, with songs, dances and funny costumes. Natasha, who knew the prince in Russia contrives politely, but with determination, to win him back. And Tonia, thinking of Papa Fields as a possible backer for the play she and Natasha have written, frankly sets her cap for the flattered head of the house.

The best comedy scenes in the play are two in the last act. The bedroom assigned Natasha and Tonia is invaded by Larry, the adolescent son of the house, who drinks too much champagne at dinner and decides to visit the charming Russian guests in pajamas and bathrobe, and is later helped out by the flustered ladies just in the nick of time.

Later Fields is summoned by Tonia, who would explain that, altho she and Natasha are awfully grateful for his interest in their play, which he has agreed to finance, there must not be any misunderstanding. Neither of them is prepared to pay the price big American men are popularly supposed to exact in such transactions. Mr. Fields, having no such notions, is properly nonplused and acts it.

"Dark Eyes" is a light and gay comedy, and frequently possessed of a haunting charm. But I found it also rather confused, not so much in the telling of the story as in the accents of the Russian ladies playing it. It was not easy always to follow their English speech, and this was distracting.

Tomorrow night the Players' club will take over the Empire theater at 40th street and Broadway and help the "Life with Father" company celebrate the 50th anniversary of that famous playhouse. It was on Jan. 25, 1893, that Charles Frohman opened the then new Empire with a production of David Belasco's and Franklyn Fyles' "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

The players are sponsoring the party by the fact that virtually all their player members have, at one time or another, appeared on the Empire stage. Their long-time president, John Drew, was one of the Frohman stars who considered the Empire his home, and their present first vice president, Howard Lindsay, co-starred with his wife, Dorothy Stickney, is now playing the all time Empire theater record engagement with "Life with Father," already in its fourth year.

In honor of the event the players are presenting to the theater a plaque containing the names of 36 stars who have at different times occupied the No. 1 dressing room at the Empire. This list is headed by the names of John Drew and Maude Adams and contains those of all the Barrymores, Otis Skinner, William Gillette, Helen Hayes, Sarah Bernhardt, Katharine Cornell, Ellen Terry, Holbrook Blinn, Billie Burke, Viola Allen, Judith Anderson, and so on until you have counted 36 and, being an oldtimer, reveled in the memory of 36 separate and distinct playgoing adventures.

It is expected that Miss Burke will be in town rehearsing "The Rock," and that Helen Hayes will be here rehearsing her new Harriet Beecher Stowe drama, to be called "Harriet." If Ethel Barrymore is anywhere in the neighborhood she will drop over. It is expected the stage will be crowded with celebrities.

February record releases find Columbia putting out four albums to Victor's two, a mere drop in the turntable bucket to what used to pour from the unrationed factories. Victor's list offers Sibelius' Seventh Symphony, played by Vladimir Golschmann and the St. Louis Symphony [reviewed last Sunday], and Smetana's "The Moldau," with the National Symphony under Hans Kindler. Columbia will offer Debussey's "La Mer," with Artur Rodzinski and the Cleveland orchestra; Bach's Concerto in E major, for violin and orchestra, with Adolf Busch and the Busch Chamber Players; Sibelius' First Symphony, played by the New York Philharmonic Symphony, John Barbirolli conducting, and Shostakovich's Quartet, Opus 49, played by the Stuyvesant String quartet.

Meanwhile, Victor sends word that the trend of public buying has been toward standard works, which prompts the record company to concentrate on 2,000 items to be listed in a booklet called "Music America Loves Best."

The Chicago Negro Opera Guild, Inc., will present a second performance of Verdi's "Aida" at the Civic Opera house Sunday evening, Feb. 21. The cast again includes La Julia Rhea, Thelma Wade Brown, Napoleon Reed, William Franklin, and Jackson Smith. Elmur A. Simpson is musical director.

Music by the late Eleanor Everest Freer, founder president of the American Opera Society of Chicago, will be featured at a memorial concert to be sponsored by the society at the Arts club the morning of Feb. 18. The program will be chosen from the operas, "Joan of Arc," "The Court Jester," "The Legend of the Piper," and "The Brownings Go to Italy," from the song cycle, "Sonnets from the Portuguese," and other works. Among those participating will be Naomi Cullen Cook, Marian Schroeder, Freda Draper, Sonia Sharnova, David Johnson, Edwin Kemp, Maxwell Wilson, Vernon Gerhardt, Raymond Koch, Joseph Anderson, and Mae Dowlling Schmidt.

Bruno Walter returns as guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony at Carnegie hall this week. Thursday and Friday his soloist is Rudolf Serkin, who plays Brahms' Concerto for Piano, No. 1, D minor. Mr. Serkin returns next Sunday afternoon on a broadcast Beethoven program, to play the "Emperor." Saturday night's soloist is the English pianist and composer, Stanley Bate, who introduces his Concerto for Piano and Strings.

Fritz Kreisler will play the Mendelssohn Concerto for Violin with the Philadelphia orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy at Carnegie hall, New York, Tuesday evening. The program also holds music of Handel, Mozart, Dubussy, and De Falla.

Correspondence Schools Aid Latin American Ties

Enrollments in Mail Courses Show Increase

By the Rev. John Evans.

As judged by a report from one of the country's largest correspondence schools, this form of education is destined to become one of the bonds between nations of the western hemisphere. Making the report was the International Correspondence schools of Scranton, Pa., which stated that enrollments in Latin American countries is up 35 per cent above 1941.

David J. Gray, president of the Latin American division of the Scranton, Pa., schools, pointed to "an ever increasing demand" for United States correspondence schools' services in Mexico, Central and South American countries.

"During the last four years we have prepared new courses of instruction in Diesel motors, radio communication, industrial chemistry, aviation motors and textiles," Mr. Gray stated. "We believe these new courses are mostly responsible for our larger enrollments."

Instruction centers have been set up by the Scranton schools in Mexico City, Havana, Bogota, and Buenos Aires. At those points, Gray explained, the lesson papers are graded and text material is distributed.

"Education is a strong force in binding democratic nations together even in time of war," Gray declared. "When that force is executed by a private enterprise, undirected and uninfluenced by government, it becomes increasingly effective."

Eight hundred and twenty-nine scrolls were awarded yesterday to University of Michigan students at the first graduation convocation ever held at that university at this time of year. This is approximately double the number of degrees usually awarded at the end of the fall term. Those passing successfully will receive their degree diplomas by mail.

Critic, Agent Disagree About Steinbeck Play

George Jean Nathan, New York drama critic, and Annie Laurie Williams, agent for John Steinbeck, are enjoying a disagreement about a debated new play by Mr. Steinbeck. The California author has one, Mr. Nathan says, but can't produce it now "because its theme and treatment differ from the necessarily conventional dramatic war philosophy." Miss Williams says there is no such play. Mr. Nathan insists in return that Mr. Steinbeck has been working on just such a play, but has put it aside until the war is over.

Notes of the Dance

Ballet Theater will dance 19 ballets, four of them new to Chicago, during its 15 performances at the Civic Opera house from Feb. 24 thru March 7. There will be matinées each Saturday and Sunday during the engagement, but there is no performance Sunday evening, Feb. 28. The four new ballets are Anthony Tudor's "Pillar of Fire," an outstanding success choreographed to Schönberg's "Verklärte Nacht"; David Lichine's staging of "Helen of Troy," originally scheduled as a new work by the late Michel Fokine; Anton Dolin's "Romantic Age," and Leonide Massine's "Aleko."

Irina Baronova.

Standard favorites and revivals to be staged are "Coppelia," "Boutique Fantasque," "Tricorne," "Petrouchka," "Les Sylphides," "Bluebeard," "Swan Lake," "Princess Aurora," "Giselle," "Three Virgins and a Devil," "Capriccio Espagnol," "Peter and the Wolf," "Russian Soldier," "Pas de Quatre," and "Gala Performance."

This is an engaging cross-section of ballet repertory, tho there will be disappointment that it fails to include Tudor's "Lilac Garden" and "Dark Elegies," and that his new ballet, "Romeo and Juliet," will not be ready for a Chicago première, as once promised. It has been known for some time that Massine's "Don Domingo" would not tour. Even the sombreros are of a size, or rather an outsize, that baffles packing.

Among the leading dancers of Ballet Theater's current incarnation are Alicia Markova, Irina Baronova, Nora Kaye, Leonide Massine, Anton Dolin, and Andre Eglevsky. Adolf Bolm recently joined the troupe as régisseur general. Antal Dorati, formerly with the Ballet Russe, is leading conductor.

The Chicago Dance Council will sponsor a recital by Jane Dudley, Sophie Maslow, and William Bales at the Woman's Club theater, 71 East 11th street, next Sunday afternoon at 3:30. Miss Dudley was a member of Hanya Holm's first concert group and has danced for the last five seasons with Martha Graham, appearing as "The Ancestress" in "Letter to the World." She is co-director with Miss Maslow, also late of the Graham troupe, of the New Dance group. Mr. Bales danced for some years with the Humphrey-Weidman group, was a member of Theater Dance company, was guest artist with Hanya Holm, worked with the federal dance project as director, assisted Mr. Weidman in producing "Candide" and appeared in "Straw Hat Revue" on Broadway.

Carmen Amaya, with Antonio Triana and her troupe, will dance two performances at Orchestra hall Feb. 5 and 6.

TODAY'S GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR WOMEN . . . .
EXPERT BOOKKEEPING
Never before, except perhaps during the first World War, has there been such an opportunity for women in bookkeeping. New plants, expanded factories, arsenals, ship yards—new regulatory and taxing laws—all calling for more accountants, cost and statistical clerks, bookkeepers, record keepers, etc. And the men who would normally fill these jobs are going into military service or the factories.
Women must fill the need. And they can—splendidly. With short preparation—in spare time, in loop evening classes—they can qualify for these thousands of good paying jobs in government or private industry. From these they can, if they wish, develop into executive accounting careers.
• If you are ambitious, and like figures, investigate this opportunity. Ask about our practical training in Modern Bookkeeping. It's low in cost, practical, and interesting.

St. Chrysostom, Famous Church, Celebrates 50th Anniversary

by Cousin Eve

Fiftieth anniversaries are being done these days. Last Sunday St. Chrysostom's celebrated its first half century with Bishop Wallace Conkling preaching at the morning service. At vespers, the rector, Dr. Dudley Stark, was joined by Dr. Harrison Anderson of the Fourth Presbyterian and Dr. Duncan Browne of St. James' church in the celebration. At the tea in the parish house for the congregation that followed the services, Mrs. George Ranney and Mrs. Bruce Borland, wives of the wardens, were co-hostesses.

St. Chrysostom's is a beautiful church in Dearborn parkway near Lincoln park. Built of stone with a patio and adjoining parish house and office, it is an edifice that neither dominates nor overtops its neighbors, but modestly charms with an air of wideopen hospitality. Even its carillon, given years ago by the late Richard T. Crane Jr. is not loudly clangorous, but it sings merrily away.

Left: Mrs. Barton R. Gebhart's box seat for the Skokie carnival was a snow bank, but her ski suit protected her from the chill. The Skokie is one of the many north shore clubs whose winter sports facilities are popular with young people these snowy week-ends.

Two-year-old Sarah Coffin kept her fingers warm in a bunny muff while she and her mother, Mrs. Frank S. Coffin of Glencoe, watched the recent children's skating carnival at the Skokie Country club. Sarah's older brother, John, was one of the young skaters participating in the annual races.

Miami Beach Still Mecca for Sun Worshipers Despite War

This resort is mecca to many sun worshipers. To some it is only one of several sun shrines. But whether they are regulars or casuals, a goodly number are making their annual pilgrimage here, and finding the air, if not gay, at least as warm as ever.

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

A Chicago colony is developing on Di Lido Island. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gould Hutchins and their daughter, Helen, are settled in their home on this picturesque, manmade island between Miami and Miami Beach. Across the street from them, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Dreis and Patsy have opened their home. And next door to the Hutchinses, Mrs. George Barrett Sr., mother of the attorney general of Illinois, has leased a home for the winter. Accompanied by her granddaughter, Nan, she has been visiting the Dreis home until her own is ready for occupancy.

Recent arrivals include many of the regular winter visitors. Mrs.

Illinois Children's Aid Society to Hold Annual Meeting Tuesday

Agency to Map Year's Plans; 1,500 Provided for in 1942

By Irene Steyskal.

The biblical admonition to put first things first is a precept from which the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society has not deviated, even thru the stress of wars and depressions, in the 59 years of its existence. This greatest of conflicts in the country's history finds the society determined that a legion of lost children in Illinois will not be one of the tragic aftermaths. Facing greatly increased problems, the agency, one of the oldest and largest child welfare organizations in the United States, is assembling Tuesday noon in the Hotel La Salle for its annual meeting.

As the principal speaker, Chauncey McCormick, chairman of the board of trustees, will review the story of a difficult but rewarding year during which the society provided for 1,500 dependent children in foster homes in every county in the state.

Present at the meeting will be most of the 22 members of the Chicago Woman's board, of which Mrs. Jacob Baur is president. Mrs. Barrett Wendell, who has headed the clothing committee, will report on the work of procuring large quantities of materials, organizing sewing groups thruout the state, and the making of hundreds of garments. Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams III., as chairman of the volunteer committee, will tell how volunteer workers, supplementing the agency's staff, are assisting doctors and nurses in the society's medical clinic and helping with office work, and how Christmas gifts were provided for every child in the society's care.

Chiefly the society is concerned with the finding of foster homes where children can be reared in normal family surroundings. One of the serious problems at this time is the diminishing number of homes willing to care for dependent children.

These are some of the facts that Mabbett K. Reckord, general director, will bring before the meeting, with a plea that all friends of the society help in the search that must be maintained thruout the year for suitable homes. Holden K. Farrar will give the treasurer's report, and Louis C. Sudler will report for the nomination committee. The invocation at the meeting will be given by the Rev. J. Walter Malone Jr., vice president of the Presbyterian [formerly the McCormick] Theological seminary.

Child welfare agencies, public and private, from all parts of the state, will have representatives at the meeting.

In support of another important work of charity which the Sisters of Our Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd have been carrying on in Chicago since 1859, the auxiliary of the House of the Good Shepherd will give its annual card party Saturday in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel.

At the House of the Good Shepherd the nuns provide a home for wayward girls and women, endeavoring to rehabilitate and reëducate them for useful lives.

Always a special feature of the Good Shepherd benefit is a sale of the needlework made by the girls and women at the home. Mrs. Leo. P. Cummings, president of the service auxiliary, is taking an active part in preparations for the party. The large committee for the benefit is headed by Mrs. George J. Aste, one of the vice presidents, and Mrs. George W. Mahoney, a former president. Managing the linen sale are Mrs. Jerome J. Crowley, Mrs. James A. Conlan, and Miss Nellie Harper.

To 4,000 elderly and aged men and women at the Oak Forest infirmary this is a day that brings the fulfillment of weeks of happy anticipation. It is at the infirmary that the Ladies of Isabella bring to a climax and close their large scale holiday cheer parties, a philanthropic project which embraces 44 public and private institutions for the aged, orphaned children, and needy shut-ins.

Yesterday hundreds of hands were busy with the task of wrapping the 4,000 packets of candy, cookies, and fruit that will be distributed at the infirmary this morning and early afternoon. At 2 o'clock a gala program of entertainment will be presented in the auditorium.

Miss Marion Collins has directed the 1942-'43 Christmas cheer program of the organization, and Miss Marie McHale has been the special secretary for the project. The committee for the Oak Forest party is headed by Miss Margaret Dasse.

Immediately after the windup of the holiday philanthropies, Miss Anna M. Pontious, supreme grand lady of the society, plans to start work on a 1943 program expanding the welfare and charitable activities.

Women's Finance Forum to Hear Talk on Taxes

Lawrence H. Jones, member of the research department of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago, will discuss "Taxes in 1943" at a dinner meeting of the Women's Finance forum at 6:30 o'clock Thursday at the Chicago College club, 30 North Michigan avenue.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

The ink stained wretches in offices, as well as the heroines in denim who work on the assembly lines, are singing the praises these days of a most unusual skin cleanser. Originally, it was considered a complexion aid, but now that rôle is secondary, at least in the minds of hard working women, to its efficiency as a rollicking good cleanser of the skin of the hands.

It's a thick white liquid formulated from oils, but its action is remarkably fast. It's applied with the fingers and removed, not with tissues, but with cloth. An old, but clean, piece of Turkish towel is our favorite.

You'll be staggered at the amount of dirt that comes away with the liquid. But what will comfort you most, when you use it on your hands, is the fact that dirt DOES come off, without scrubbing or the use of rough abrasives. It leaves the skin softer than before, and glowingly clean.

The good thing about this, as a hand cleanser, is that it does its efficient work with no sacrifice of lubrication of the skin. It's a sort of combined hand lotion and cleanser, and that's what so many women need these days.

It's not necessary to apply this lavishly. Use the same amount for your hands that you would for your face. You'll find it sufficient, and you'll be giving the skin the cleansing it needs, plus a little necessary oiling.

[For information, telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0200, or write her care of the Chicago Sunday Tribune. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for written reply.

A skin cleanser, originally intended for use on the face, is proving a boon to the women whose hands get grimy. It combines the qualities of a cleanser and a hand lotion. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

If you are lucky enough to be able to take a winter vacation, get away from the cold and snow for a few weeks and relax in one of our native winter resorts, you may want some information on vacation wardrobes. When you have decided where you are going, we will be glad to help with any wardrobe problems by sending you a chart of minimum wardrobe requirements for a January or February vacation. Included in the information is a list of the average temperatures for this season in the various popular winter spots. Just send us a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and the mimeographed sheet will be yours.

The length of time you are away from home will, of course, influence the size of your vacation wardrobe. For a month's stay you will need more than for two weeks. Plan carefully so that you will have enough clothes for all requirements. It is a most uncomfortable feeling to attend a function and be inappropriately dressed. The ideal situation is to strike a balance—not too few and not too many. Quantities of clothes and luggage are a nuisance to the average traveler, while too many clothes stuffed into inadequate luggage results in wrinkling, making every repacking job at the stopovers a case for a professional "trunk sitter."

The greater proportion of any traveling wardrobe, whether it is summer or winter, should be given over to sports clothes or tailored attire. They will take care of just about any daytime necessity. For train travel, dark tailored clothes are the best. For boat wear, light spectator sports items are the rule.

Lingerie should be the kind that you can launder yourself, if necessary, easily and quickly.

See that the hats you include are small, easy to pack, and the kind that stay on the head in a stiff breeze without having to be held in place.

Remember there is a mimeographed sheet of additional wardrobe hints for a stamped, self-addressed envelope for those who are in the market.

Household Forum

by LOUISE BARGELT

[Have you some household help that saves on labor and conserves on materials? Is there some comfort you could enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune.]

Mrs. Jennie L., Chicago—We have sweaters and knitted garments galore in our house and I'm the one to keep them mended. I can do a better piece of work with darning if I use a little vegetable brush instead of my darning egg. The brush bristles hold the knit fabric better than the egg and mending is a lot easier.

Mrs. George J., St. Paul, Minn.—We have found that if we give our snow shovel a good waxing before using, the snow won't stick to shovel. My husband feels, too, the wax is an added protection to the shovel.

Mrs. James F., Chicago—We're drinking more tea in our house these weeks, and I find if I rub salt into our cups it will get rid of tea stains.

Leona H., Oak Park, Ill.—I noticed that my window casings were getting scarred by constant raising and lowering of our Venetian blinds, so my husband glued small pieces of felt to the bottom crosspieces of the blinds, and the trouble has stopped.

Letty Burke, Chicago—I did quite a little gardening last summer and expect to do more this summer. As I toted the wheelbarrow around the house and garden I got the idea that it would be a help if wheelbarrows were manufactured with two wheels at the front instead of one. That would be a comfort I could enjoy!

Mrs. Katharin B., Louisville, Ky.—I keep a couple of spring type clothes pins handy and clip them to finger ring of kettle covers. I've enameled them for easier cleaning and they are a help against burned fingers.

Mrs. Jack F., Peoria, Ill.—The men in my family do a lot of tinkering around the house and garage and I often have to remove grease spots from their washable clothes. When spots are stubborn I rub them well with lard or kerosene, and then launder in hot soapy water. This usually does the work.

Harriet M., Oak Park, Ill.—For some months I've made a practice of washing and preparing all my fruits and vegetables as soon as I bring them into the house. In this way they are always ready to eat or to cook and meal getting is a shorter affair; and my work surfaces less messy too, when I start a dinner or a lunch.

Meat Rationing Gives Cooks Chance to Try 'Variety' Cuts

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1943: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Certain meats don't keep well enough to allow for shipping long distances, and therefore aren't wanted in any large quantity by the government for lend-lease use or by the army and navy. These meats won't need to be rationed, which is lucky for civilians, for they include iron-rich liver, kidneys, and other highly nutritious organ meats

Certain "variety" cuts also are included among nonrationed meats. Some of them are unfamiliar to families which have long found beefsteak, roasts, and chops sufficient unto their needs. It's time all of us were becoming acquainted with such delicacies as tripe, tongue, sweetbreads, and the like.

"Tripe!" you may snort in derision. Have you ever tasted tripe, carefully prepared with a savory sauce? It is perfectly delicious! I'll take this tasty dish any day!

Savory Tripe.

[Serves four or more.]

1 pound fresh tripe
1 onion
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon flour
1 sprig parsley
¼ teaspoon thyme [or 1 sprig fresh]
⅛ teaspoon marjoram [or ½ sprig fresh]
1 bay leaf
1 clove
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 carrot
1 cup water in which tripe was cooked
1 teaspoon vinegar

Cut tripe into serving pieces. Simmer in water to cover until tender, about 1 hour. Cook sliced onion in butter until golden. Add flour, herbs, and seasonings. Add water. Simmer 25 minutes and add vinegar. Strain sauce over tripe, cover, and simmer until tripe is hot. Catsup may be added. Pickled tripe may be used, in which case omit vinegar.

Tripe, as you may know, is the inner lining of the stomach of beef. Honeycomb tripe, the lining of the second stomach, is considered most desirable. Fresh tripe is always cooked when you buy it, but requires gentle simmering at home for an hour longer, before use. Pickled tripe doesn't need to cook so long, but should be soaked in salted water for 15 minutes before cooking to remove excess vinegar.

Try tripe, simmered until tender, brushed with fat and broiled until brown. Or, dip it in batter or into egg and crumbs and deep-fry it; cream it in a well seasoned sauce, or bake it in plain tomato sauce or creole sauce. There are many ways to prepare tripe so that it is a real delicacy.

Brains are an unrationed meat which encounter wide prejudice, chiefly due to unfamiliarity and wrong methods of preparation. In parts of our south lands, they are relished scrambled with eggs. I prefer them crumbed and deep fat fried, or heated in a tomato-onion-green pepper sauce.

Brains and sweetbreads are similar in texture and tenderness. If you've learned to enjoy the epicurean sweetbread, you should also like brains. Neither meat keeps well. Both should be cooked soon after purchase.

Brains and Sweetbreads.

To prepare either brains or sweetbreads, soak in cold water for an hour and remove membrane. Simmer for 15 minutes in a quart of water to which 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar have been added. Drain and drop in cold water. Then prepare in any way you like.

1. Break them up and scramble them with eggs.
2. Reheat in rich, well seasoned cream sauce or well seasoned tomato sauce and serve on toast.
3. Dip in batter or into egg and crumbs and deep-fry.
4. Dip in melted fat and broil until brown. Serve on toast.

Sauce for Brains or Sweetbreads.

[Serves four.]

¼ cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
2 cups cooked tomatoes
½ cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons flour
Salt, pepper

Cook onions in fat about 3 minutes. Add tomatoes, celery, pepper. Cover and simmer about 20 minutes. Add flour mixed to a paste in a little water and season to taste. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add 2 cups pre-cooked brains or sweetbreads and heat thru.

My department still has available some mimeographed sheets of recipes for preparing these and other unrationed meats and will be glad to send a copy to each reader who sends in a large sized stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address request to Mary Meade, Department A, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack A. Berg of [illegible] North Greenview avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Eileen, to Myron B. Berkenstadt, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Berkenstadt of 1237 West North Shore avenue. Mr. Berkenstadt expects to leave this week for service with the army.

gently suggestive of church time. Indoor St. Chrysostom's has the same quiet simplicity in its stone walls and oaken seats, the same absence of elaboration. There are memorials of richly stained glass windows, while metal plaques are relics, the gift of church members are set in the stone. Among these givers one finds Col. and Mrs. Albert Sprague, George Ranney, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Conover, and other parishioners past and present.

The Rev. Thaddeus Snively was the first rector of this church, with Henry Durkee and Joseph T. Bowen, wardens. The vestrymen were John Adams, Dr. John Chew, Percival Fuller, Dr. Newberry Hall, Edward J. Martyn, Henry Pardee, S. Clifford Payson, John Rand, Winfield Scott, and William D. C. Street. The present day wardens and vestrymen are George Ranney, Bruce Borland, and John D. Allen, William D. Cox, Fletcher M. Durbin, Charles Y. Freeman, Convers Goddard, Joseph H. King, Le Roy Kramer, S. Graham Nelson, M. Paul Noyes, John T. Redmond, Albert A. Sprague, and L. Parsons Warren.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. George Packard had their 50th wedding anniversary and celebrated it merrily at a reception at 436 Barry avenue. The cards to this party had little gold dates above the script or nobody would have believed that the Packards could be having a golden wedding. Couples who stay married for 50 years are looked upon as something like museum pieces nowadays. The Packards are among Chicago's most civic minded and loyal citizens.

In Washington this week the New Deal had a unique celebration, commemorationg the demise of Republican James G. Blaine 50 years ago with a reception in the Pan-America building. It is unusual to celebrate any one's death with a party, but at this festivity a beautiful wreath was laid in front of Mr. Blaine's bronze bust and appropriate speeches were made by the Bolivian and Panamanian envoys and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

Here on the home front I wouldn't call it very exciting, if you know what I mean! Theater going and dinner giving are precarious with the acute taxi situation. Some people from suburbia stayed downtown Saturday night for a bit of dancing at a hotel. After midnight they had to walk three miles thru slush and sleet—the women in open toed sandals. That's not my idea of an evening's amusement, but it's certainly "different."

Of all the home defense work, the most piquant I've heard of yet, and the one that takes the bun for originality, is the plumbing class. It's nice to know that when the plumbing gets out of order in the months and years to come, one's charming neighbors, Eleanor Cochran, president of the Casino, Mrs. W. McCormick Blair, her sister, Louise Bowen Phelps, and Louise Hodgkins, Robert Carr's daughter, can come to your rescue. They are all women rather sylphlike and delicate than the reverse, and the very last you would expect to go in for plumbing.

Two girls who have given up a lucrative book business "for the duration" are Catharine Hamill, daughter of the Robert W. Hamills and Marjorie Barker of Michigan City, niece of Mrs. Nelson Barnes and cousin of Mrs. Charles C. Hickox of New York. The two partners dealt in first editions, fine bindings and special bookish dainties for the keen palates of book collectors, of whom there are not a few in Chicago. They had a fine going business and are sending some of their stock to the bank and storing part of it. Marjorie Barker has taken a welding job in Michigan City, because she excels in that line, and "Doll" Hamill is going down state in a munitions plant as a filler.

You have to salute women whose sense of patriotic duty leads them to set aside self, family, comfort, friends for hard, laborious life in lonely lodgings. It's really superb!

Well, one has heard several hair-raising tales these days. There was on Tuesday at the Woman's Athletic club one Gwen Dew, a roving magazine writer, who traveled too far and was caught by the Nips in a lovely hotel on the hills above Hongkong when that great British town fell. She lived for six months in a concentration camp, on rice, and showed the terrific ordeal. The most effective of her many stories was one of a Japanese officer in a Hongkong shipping office. There was a map on the wall with no outline of Japan—a mere sketch of shipping ports. The Japanese came in, took a red chalk and slashed a vast circle including all of China, some of India, all of Dutch Indies, Malaysia, Australia, the islands, Hawaii, the west coast of the United States and Alaska. Across this he wrote in big letters "Japan." "There is the map of Japan," he shouted and forthwith slashed three English clerks in the face with the flat of his sword, and went out. According to Miss Dew there are 200,000 British being held prisoners by the Japs.

Russell Tyson was at home Thursday afternoon at tea time to the American Friends of China, a party that completely filled his charming domicile. Mr. Tyson is a great sinophile and his apartment contains many pieces of ancient Chinese art as well as beautiful specimens of Georgian furniture which go so well with things Chinese. It was a perfect place for a lecture—if one couldn't follow the speaker, one could enjoy the collections so beautifully disposed.

Mrs. Chauncey Borland and Mrs. Paul Welling did the honors of the tea table and after the ceremony of the tea drinking there was an address by Dr. Park, a quite rollicking Chinese, a Harvard graduate with rosy cheeks and much gayety of manner. Dr. Park had written a book, "Retreat of the West," meaning the white man's retreat from Asia. And he rather fancied himself as a jolly little Chinese Paul Revere who had been warning Americans these many years that war was coming by way of the Pacific. And that, "for every dollar of profit in scrap sold to the Japanese, the cost will be billions."

Referring to the war strategy of fighting the Japanese in the Solomons, the speaker said it would take 100 years to defeat them. "A century," he moaned, "whereas, from Siberian bases by air, it would take three months. Japs not so hot on land," he said, "but Japanese navy very fit—so there you are." Never before have the American Friends of China had so jocular a Chinese lecturer or one educated at Harvard.

Mrs. Silas Strawn told the speaker that Russia had refused her Siberian ports to Washington, but he replied that pressure in the right spot would change all that. In the audience a greater number of men than usual. Miss Frances Whedon presided, and others were Mrs. Frederic Upham, Mrs. James Offield, Dr. and Mrs. Edmund Doering, Miss Herndon-Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Belin Voorhees, Col. and Mrs. George T. Langhorne, Mrs. R. T. Crane, Mrs. A. H. Patterson, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster.

Another lecturer who kept his hearers in gales of laughter was Arthur Meeker Jr., who on Thursday afternoon addressed the Fortnightly on "My Recollections of the Court of Louis XIV." Arthur Jr. has a charming and delightful way with him and his wit is spontaneous—made to order on the spot. His approach to his lecture is smiling and bland, he has something to say and says it. This talk was evolved from a recent fat tome of his "Ivory Mischief," written around the period of the Grand Monarque, and he is now in the throes of writing another historical novel. He will be heard again as a speaker in the Saturday morning series of lectures at the Arts club, to benefit Poetry, a magazine of verse, founded by the late Harriet Monroe, who is buried in the Andes mountains of Chile, where she died six years ago.

The Emerson House benefit Jan. 29 at the Racquet club takes the form of a cocktail rout again this year. The navy is lending some groups of its young ensigns from Abbott hall, who, with their wives, will contribute an added interest to the scene. Parties at the Racquet club cannot fail to be handsome and well done. It is a cheerful and beautiful place, kept up admirably, and the Emerson House board expects to repeat its success of a year ago. Of divertissment—two actors "out of the top drawer," as the saying goes, Gertrude Lawrence of "Lady in the Dark" and Paul Lukas of "Watch on the Rhine." And also a little shop with pretty girls behind the counter—distributing prizes—of whom Diana Hill and Betty Hubbard are two.

Emerson House is a settlement to the west, among Italian and Polish peoples. Founded years ago by Mrs. Philip Elting, it finally descended upon her daughter, Ruth, now Mrs. Edwin Winter, and is carried on by a group of energetic young matrons, who have been helped out this year at the settlement by the young brides of the budding ensigns at Abbott hall.

Among the women who have signified their intention of bringing friends to the Racquet club on the 29th are Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Barney Goodspeed, Mrs. Frank Wilhelm, Mrs. Jan Noest, Mrs. Thomas Connors, Mrs. William Cudahy, Mrs. Robert Dunham, Mrs. Robert Wheeler, Mrs. Byron Harvey.

It was Cornelia Conger who intrigued me more than any one else into taking a preview at the Art institute into the output of the great Georgia O'Keeffe. Miss Conger, an artist on her own, had seen a painting by Miss O'Keeffe in a modern room at the San Francisco fair. It was a curious overmantel painting of the drying skull and horns of a steer lying in desert sand under an opalescent sky. The room itself was lighted strangely. Side brackets were heads of steers with long horns of lucite from which light filtered thru. These wonderfully effective brackets are now owned by Sam Marx and used in his apartment in Chicago.

As for Georgia O'Keeffe's paintings, the Art institute devotes three rooms to them. And as a preamble to these desert introspections, there is a fascinating show from the southwest, a gallery of early Spanish colonial religious carvings from the Taylor museum at Colorado Springs. These carvings are as full of color and imagination as the O'Keeffe collection is frigid and remote. The painter is an addict of our western desert, of the great wide open places, and her paintings are abstractions in the desert void, studies in color, space, and emptiness. The skulls and bones of animals attract her brush, not flowers. Not flowers in the sense of garden truck, but irises blown to giant size like botanic specimens—or series of huge jacks in the pulpit reduced and fading away to mere ghost flowers.

These paintings of Georgia O'Keeffe are said to command great prices. My favorite is a nocturnal street scene in New York, with here and there the twinkle of lights from high towers, and mysterious void of black over all. An admirer of the artist says that she paints with a clean palette; and, indeed, her work radiates cleanliness of thought as well as love for the wonders of nature.

AT HOME IN MIAMI, FLA.

Lt. and Mrs. Frederick E. Hughes are at home in Miami following their marriage in St. Paul, Minn. She is the former Virginia Marron, daughter of Mrs. J. H. Marron of St. Paul. Lt. Hughes, a fighter pilot in the marines, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Hughes of Chicago.

Miami Beach Mecca of Sun Worshippers

Charles A. McCulloch has opened her home in Collins avenue, and Mr. McCulloch is expected soon. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Young are occupying their home on East Dixie highway, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Heller have opened their residence in North Bay road and expect William Vogt of Danville to arrive Feb. 7 for a visit.

Among the most distinguished visitors now here are the minister from Sweden, Wollmar Bostrom, and Mrs. Bostrom, who are house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert I. Appleton of Evanston. Mr. Bostrom has represented his country in Washington for 17 years, and Mr. Appleton became acquainted with him many years ago while visiting Sweden. Mr. Bostrom is a tennis enthusiast and is spending much of his time here on the courts of the Indian Creek club, of which the Appletons are members. The Appletons honored their house guests with a dinner party at the Indian Creek club last Wednesday and also entertained them with a party at the jai-alai games.

Necessity must be the mother of invention, and visitors are developing ingenious ways to get around. The ban on pleasure driving remains tight, and fast thorobreds are idly vacationing at Hialeah Park, but old Dobbin is coming in for a new workout. Four horse wagons operate from 12th avenue to the West Flagler dog track, and an ordinary nag now would bring about as high a price as a pedigreed racer, for track officials are searching for additional equipment. There is now a jai-alai express to the Biscayne fronton, a house car drawn by a pair of mules. Both this dog track and the fronton can be reached by regular bus service, but everybody wants to go the same place at the same time, and regular buses cannot handle the crowd. The Miami Beach Kennel club has not had to resort to such transportation, because it is on several bus routes and one jitney route.

The Miami Civic Music association solved the transportation problem another way. Its concerts formerly were held in the Miami Edison High school auditorium. When the pleasure driving ban struck, a scheduled concert by Jascha Heifetz was postponed, and now the association has made arrangements to use the Olympia theater, in downtown Miami, for its programs. Ruth Draper will be presented Feb. 9; Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist, will appear March 2, and Heifetz will be the attraction on Feb. 22.

As to the nonopening of Hialeah Park, the news didn't reach every one, for two girls from St. Paul showed up, from Delray, all dressed up for their first horse race outside the movies, but found they had nowhere to go. Certainly it was the smallest crowd that ever attended an opening day at Hialeah.

Hialeah certainly was ready for business. Those saddest words of tongue or pen were echoed when President John Clark said "It would have been a beautiful opening day." And so it would, for the bougainvillea vines, freshly trimmed, gushed purple, the sun never shone more brightly, and 32 new flamingoes were all primed for their first public appearance. But Hialeah stands ready to open on 24 hour notice.

When the war is won and resort Florida returns to its peacetime picture, there will be two greater Miami hotels missing, two of the best known, the Miami Biltmore in Coral Gables and the Nautilus at Miami Beach, for the war department has announced that they, along with seven others in Florida, are slated to be government-owned hospitals after the war.

The golf course at the Miami Biltmore had a distinguished visitor a few days ago, and he was playing golf, altho that is not what brought him here. The hotel will be reopened soon as a convalescent hospital, and Capt. Robert R. Jones Jr. of the first fighter command, better known to the golfing world as Bobby Jones, while here on official business, was asked to inspect the course and grounds. And he could not resist a swing at the ball. The course has remained open to club members, altho the hotel buildings are in a military zone.

Celebrities are received with renewed acclaim. Usually the winter diet is heavy with them, but there is rationing of renowned, too, it seems, and most of them now here are in khaki. The group from the theater world attracts the most attention. Constance Bennett and her husband, Gilbert Roland, who graduated from officers' candidate school Wednesday, entertained with a buffet dinner at their Miami Beach home honoring his fellow graduates, including Robert Preston, Alan Campbell, Eric Rhodes, Bruce Cabot, and William Holden.

Mr. and Mrs. Elisha L. Essley are occupying their home in North Bay road and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Allen of Wilmette have opened their residence on La Gorce Island. Mrs. Frederick C. Brown of Chicago is spending the winte. with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gebhart, in Coral Gables. Mr. and Mrs. Homer E. Stivers of Mattoon have as their guest for the winter Mrs. Stivers' sister, Miss Virginia Weatherford of Chicago.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Jan. 20, 1895.

Dear Julia: Receptions and a play have been on my schedule this week. Last evening we went to Hooley's theater to see John Drew and a fine company in Henry Arthur Jones' new drama, "The Bauble Shop," which shows the refining influence of a simple womanly character on a brilliant but impure man

Arthur Jones' plays, for the plot is always probable and the dialog brilliant and epigrammatic. I like him much better than Oscar Wilde as a dramatist. Perhaps I am prejudiced, because when Mr. Wilde was in Chicago I met him and thought his personality disagreeable. Then, too, I can't forget that he called our beloved water tower at Chicago avenue "a castellated monstrosity." The conversation in the Jones play makes you think of a lawn tennis game, where the ball is tossed back and forth across the net. For instance, the hero says he can't find the right kind of wife. His cousin, Lady Fennell, asks: "What kind of wife do you want?" "I don't know what kind of wife I want, but I know what kind I don't want," he replies. "What sort don't you want?" asks his cousin. "The sort all my friends have married," he replies.

Maude Adams, in the part of Jessie Keebler, is perfect, giving her lines almost a poetic flavor. And the great sensation of the evening was the debutante actress, Ethel Barrymore, niece of John Drew. She should go a long way on the stage, for nature has been kind to her and her musical voice and lovely accent made every theater lover sit at attention. She could hardly fail to be a success with her inheritance, for her grandmother, you know, was the great Mrs. John Drew, her mother the lovely Georgia Drew Barrymore, and her father, Maurice Barrymore, all stars.

Yesterday I attended a brilliant reception at the Lakota hotel, 30th street and Michigan avenue, pretty far to go, but I wanted to see my friend, Mrs. William Hale Thompson, who was giving this farewell party before she leaves for a Mediterranean cruise. Receiving with her was her daughter, Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze, looking very handsome in a Paris gown of pale pink satin, trimmed with ecru; her mother wore a rich garnet satin, with ornaments of pearls, heirlooms in the Gale family, pioneers of Chicago. The Thompsons have a beautiful suite of rooms in this fashionable hotel, and it was decorated lavishly with cut flowers and potted plants. There was delicious food, too, and good company, and I stayed longer than I intended, chatting with Mrs. Lyman Blair, Mrs. Ferdinand Peck, and Mrs. George E. Adams.

After leaving the Lakota I drove north to Dearborn seminary to pick up Martha Junior, who had been attending an alumnae reunion, held, as usual, on the birthday of Zwinglius Grover, founder of the school, whom the graduates regard almost as a saint. He was indeed a dear old man. The seminary is now 41 years old, having been founded in 1854. Its first home was on Wabash avenue in what is now our business district, and the first president of its board of trustees was our friend J. H. Dunham. It is now located in a fine residence section, Calumet avenue and 22d street. Martha had helped decide on the program for today and was elated over its success. Jane Addams spoke, and she is always inspiring; Hamlin Garland, a midwestern author, recited some of his poems, and Lillian Ball, Chicago novelist, read selections from her new book, "A Little Sister to the Wilderness."

Martha looked pretty and stylish, too, I thought, in her new street costume, made for the occasion by Weeks, our fashionable man dressmaker. It is of gray broadcloth, trimmed with black velvet and astrachan, the skirt side plaited, with one plait faced with velvet. The bodice has a box plaited vest, with revers, falling over the shoulder, trimmed with astrachan. The puffed sleeves are the largest I ever saw, but many admiring friends told her the effect was superb. Now I must close. Your loving

Martha Freeman Esmond.

FOOT NOTES.

What reader has a memory of the Henry Arthur Jones play, with John Drew, Maude Adams, and Ethel Barrymore in the cast? John Drew, who set the style for the well dressed man of the period, has passed on, and is doubtless wearing his halo at a jaunty angle. The beloved Maude Adams and Ethel Barrymore are still with us.

Mrs. William Hale Thompson was the mother of former Mayor William Hale Thompson of Lake Shore drive. Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze lives on Lincoln Park West. The fashionable Lakota has become the Lewis Memorial Maternity hospital.

Old Books.

Two books loaned by friends of the column have interested your editor this week. In an old English scrapbook, property of Mrs. Pearl M. Garrod of Chicago, we find two couplets, "The Best Medicines" and "The Restless Heart," from "Poor Will's Portfolio." [Does any reader know the "Portfolio"?] These we offer as Poems of the Week. [See below.] From a volume called "Professor de la Banta's Advice to Ladies," [1877], loaned by Mrs. O. E. Muench, 631 West Roscoe street, we cull the following, showing that ideals of feminine pulchritude have changed in 65 years: Says Prof. de la Banta, whose work is highly commended by all the Chicago newspapers, including The Tribune: "Broad, shapely hips add much to the beauty of the female figure."

The Elegant Eighties.

Some of our readers may be glad to know that Martha's letters of the Eighties, from this column, under the title, "THE ELEGANT EIGHTIES," have been published by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, and the book is available at all Chicago book stores.

National Officer to Speak at Annual Y. W. C. A. Meeting

Dr. Kathleen MacArthur, member of the national staff of the Young Women's Christian Associations of America, will speak on "A Faith for Today" at the annual meeting of the Chicago Y. W. C. A. at 7:15 o'clock Thursday night in the fifth floor auditorium, 185 North Wabash avenue. The meeting will serve a double purpose: That of reviewing the organization's accomplishments during 1942, and the launching of the second annual budget month. In reviewing last year's reports, particularly impressive is the 35,910 figure which represents the number of women and girls rendered service in the one year period.

Miss Barbara Abel, member of the Y. W. C. A. board, has written a skit depicting the extensive war service program of the club which will be acted and produced by club members. Miss Lilace Reid Barnes, president of the Chicago Y. W. C. A., will announce the results of the board of directors' elections.

Palm Beach Gives Parties for Soldiers

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

This resort where winter refuses to tarry, continues to focus attention on the entertainment of soldiers. The weekly dances for officers at the Society of the Four Arts are really gorgeous affairs.

These parties were planned by the distaff side of the Four Arts, but it wasn't any time at all before the men had horned right in. Their help has proved both welcome and efficient.

Byron D. Miller, whose huge cream-colored yacht used to lie at anchor in Lake Michigan, furnishes all the soft drinks for the dances. He not only furnishes them but also acts as head bartender, decapitating bottles with neatness and dispatch and wielding a handy towel. Mr. Miller prides himself on being a neat bartender. Arthur Bradley Campbell, distinguished world traveler, well known to Chicago, furnishes the cakes and also "mans" the knife, cutting the cakes in big, thick wedges which prove extremely popular. Col. LeRay Berdeau collapses the folding chairs and tables when festivities are over. Now that Charles Strout Davis has arrived from Chicago, a job will be found for him, too.

It was to attend one of these dances that Brig. Gen. Ralph H. Wooten, commandant at Boca Raton, and Mrs. Wooten came to Palm Beach the other day at the invitation of the Berdeaus. Col. and Mrs. Berdeau gave a large luncheon for them at the Everglades club and a dinner party at Villa Today, after which they went to the dance, by wheel chair. The meeting of Col. Berdeau and Gen. Wooten was a renewal of an old friendship. When Gen. Wooten was a military attaché in Chile, Col. Berdeau was engaged there in engineering.

For this dinner party and dance, Mrs. Berdeau wore dainty blue taffeta with stylized design of little red geraniums. Mrs. Wooten wore white chiffon with insets of black lace.

Maurice Maeterlinck is finding the "Blue Bird" anew in Palm Beach. The famous Belgian poet and playwright doesn't speak English fluently, but understands it perfectly. With his petite and lovely wife as interpreter he declared that Palm Beach was so lovely that it seemed to him it was "just waiting for the angels to appear."

Maeterlinck has already written four plays during his stay here and is also writing a series of autobiographical sketches. He finds this climate similar to that of the Riviera where he formerly spent his winters. The celebrated writer is a striking looking figure. His hair is as white as the clouds that drift overhead, and he wears one lock long. It is worn either over one eye, à la Veronica Lake, or is tossed back to hang on his shoulders. He is now writing about how he happened to write the "Blue Bird" and the "Life of the Bee." Mme. Maeterlinck does not help in his work. "I just adore him," she says.

Channing Hare, the artist, who has been spending the season at Winter Park, came over for the tea which opened the annual members' exhibition at the Four Arts, and copped first prize for his picture, "The Victor." Another picture of his, yclept "The Yellow Jacket," was not a prize winner, but came in for much admiration by the spectators. This painting shows a girl, a young modern, wearing a quilted satin jacket, and holding in one hand a pair of harlequin sunglasses. By her side is an empty cocktail glass in which glows a bright red cherry. Asked why his pretty subject hadn't eaten the cherry, he said that it would have cheated him out of that bit of color he needed. Mr. Hare himself was wearing a yellow jacket, a snappy sport coat in vivid canary, with a dark pin stripe.

Arrivals in Palm Beach include the Paul B. Smithsons and the Stuart Smithsons of Evanston who are at Brazilian court. Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury is at Palm Beach hotel for a few weeks' stay. Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. McLennan of Lake Forest have opened their El Bravo villa where their daughter, Mrs. Woodberry Ober, and Lt. Comm. Ober are guests. Mrs. Bartlett Richards of Chicago is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Ralph Hubbard Norton, in West Palm Beach.

Lt. and Mrs. Thomas Lewis are guests of the Frank J. Lewises on Royal Palm way, where Mrs. Thomas J. Connor is expected soon. Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton of New York have opened Four Winds, aptly named as this lovely ocean front house catches the breezes from the four corners of the earth. E. F. Hutton was formerly married to Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. His present wife, the former Mrs. Dorothy Dear Metzger, is also a beautiful woman. Mrs. John Bowen and Mrs. Richard Cavenaugh of Chicago are at the Whitehall where Mrs. William Bode is expected within the near future.

Jules Bache, celebrated art connoisseur, has opened his villa, La Colmena. His guests are Lt. and Mrs. F. Warren Pershing. Mrs. Pershing, the former Muriel Richards, is Mr. Bache's granddaughter. Lt. Pershing is the son of the great general of World War I.

In case any one was worried, the Palm Beach town council has passed an ordinance that precludes the sale of horse meat in the resort. The ban on pleasure driving has taken some of the glitter from Palm Beach, but it has failed to put a quietus on the season. Some people lean over backward to be conscientious, while others call the ruling an "ignoble experiment," and give it a broad interpretation. The majority has eliminated unnecessary motoring.

Hadassah Will Open Its 16th Drive Tuesday

The charity of American women who, in years of peace, set up Hadassah medical agencies in Palestine, has proved to be bread cast upon the waters which the tide of world events is returning to their sons, and hundreds of other united nations' troops. Army medical corps are drawing upon the Hadassah hospitals for large supplies of drugs and equipment, and the health agencies have been able to guard against critical epidemics of malaria, typhoid, and other diseases in important areas occupied by the allies.

Mrs. Benjamin Lavin.

These are some of the facts giving impetus to the 16th annual tithe drive which Chicago chapter of Hadassah is opening with a formal program Tuesday afternoon in the Morrison hotel. Rabbi Solomon Goldman is to be the guest speaker.

Mrs. Benjamin Lavin, who is chairman of the tithe committee directing the drive for funds, reports that, so important does the government consider Hadassah's medical work, it has offered full coöperation, giving priority ratings for all drugs, hospital equipment, clothing, and food bought by the organization on the American market. Thru the British War Relief society free shipping space is being provided.

Serving on the general committee with Mrs. Lavin are Mrs. Frank P. Burman, Mrs. Amons Bowman, Mrs. Leo Kirsner, Mrs. Martin Maremont, and Mrs. Henry J. Reich. Each district also has a chairman. Mrs. James H. Olshan is the Chicago chapter president.

Women in War Work

By Kate Massee

There are many women like Mrs. Linnette Marie Kolar in war work today, but still more of them are needed. Mrs. Kolar, the wife of Dr. George F. Kolar of La Grange, spends eight hours daily inspecting torpedo parts at the Amertorp corporation in Forest Park.

After Pearl Harbor, Mrs. Kolar, who was born in France, applied for war work at the United States employment office in Oak Park. Her qualifications were studied, together with her interests, and she took a training course at one of the five schools where women are trained for work at the Amertorp corporation. She was paid 65 cents an hour while learning, and her salary was upgraded with her proficiency.

Other women in the western suburbs who would like to inspect torpedo parts at the Amertorp corporation should apply at the United States employment office in Oak Park. Training courses are offered at schools in Oak Park, Proviso, Argo, Leydon, and Morton townships. High school graduation is required.

In keeping with the nation-wide program for enlisting more women in war work, the School of Design in Chicago has announced a new feature — a series of eight lectures on the business background of design, labor, and management problems. Prof. Orme W. Phelps, assistant professor of business at the University of Chicago and supervisor of the Illinois state civil service commission at Springfield, will conduct the classes.

The lectures, primarily intended to give students a full understanding of war time and post-war problems, will deal with all the aspects of production, merchandising, finance, organization, and distribution. A course in opportunities for women offers blueprint reading, mechanical drawing, inspection, soldering, brazing, and welding, on the basis of the school's educational principle of mastery of tools and machines and training of observation and judgment.

In addition to the new program, George Kepes will continue evening classes in camouflage, and other classes will be offered in principles of aeronautics, plastics, war display, motion pictures, scientific and war photography.

Registration for the courses started last Monday and each course is 16 weeks. For detailed information as to evenings and hours the various courses are being held, applicants should get in touch with the School of Design, 247 East Ontario street.

The women's auxiliary of Mercy hospital has begun its 1943 program with plans to increase its production for the Red Cross and to step up other war activities. The first plan will be a drive to double the present membership of 110, under the leadership of Mrs. Harry W. Cline, membership chairman. The women also will do the clerical work attending the blood bank to be installed in the hospital shortly. The bank was the gift of the auxiliary.

Men as well as women in Oak Park are busy these days helping collect books in the three months' campaign being conducted by the Red Cross, the USO, and the American Library association. Volumes assembled will be sent to soldiers and sailors. Thousands of books already have been donated to the committee, consisting of Mrs. Albert Cotsworth, Mrs. Fred Allen, Mrs. J. H. Pratt, Mrs. C. R. Boynton, Mrs. David C. Slagle, and Miss Elsie McKay.

The climax of the drive will be a program on the evening of Feb. 3 at the Oak Park club, with Lola Fletcher and J. Bradley-Griffin as the artists. The public is invited, and the only admission fee will be a book for the campaign.

A new series of classes to prepare women for war work will be offered beginning Wednesday, Feb. 10, at the University college, an evening division of Northwestern university, on the downtown campus. Courses in blueprint reading, mechanical drawing, and descriptive geometry, preflight aeronautics for instructors, business statistics, practical mathematics, and the psychology of personnel methods will be offered.

After a consultation with business and industrial executives, and representatives of the WAACs, WAVES, and SPARS, it was learned that one of women's biggest weaknesses is mathematics, Shirley A. Hamrin, director of University college said. Thus, a course in practical mathematics is being offered. Approximately 300 different evening courses will be given on the downtown campus.

[This department reports on women's war activities and answers questions regarding such activities.]

Northwoodside Lake Geneva's Swiss Chalet

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

Lake Geneva often is compared to the lake of the same name in Switzerland and nowhere on the lake is the resemblance so pronounced as at Northwoodside, summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Nelson Tevander. Not only is the house itself of the Swiss chalet type of architecture with steeply pitched roofs and charming "cuckoo clock" balcony, but it is perched on a steep, deeply wooded hillside overlooking the lake, reminiscent of the mountainside dwellings of the Swiss Genevans.

The setting of Northwoodside is not only unusually picturesque but the place has the added charm of catching every stray breeze that ripples the lake waters. The story is told of Gen. Henry Strong, who built the house about 1875, that before he selected the tract of land for his summer home he pitched a tent on every spot around the lake seeking the coolest location. In those days, except for a few cottages and camps, most of the lake shore was a wilderness inhabited by wild animals so that the general had many sites from which to choose.

Gen. Strong was one of the first Chicagoans to discover Lake Geneva, coming, it is said, in 1873 when the Chicago and North Western railroad was cutting its way thru to what was then the little village of Geneva, Wis. [Later, in 1881, the name of the postoffice was changed to Lake Geneva to avoid confusion with Geneva, Ill.] On this maiden trip over the new railroad spur line, the general was so impressed with the beauties of the lake that he began at once to search for the perfect spot on which to build.

Northwoodside is one of the few houses at Lake Geneva which, except for extra bathrooms, is almost unchanged from the time it was erected. Even the name given it by Gen. and Mrs. Strong has been retained. The house is frame with many dormers and gables still adorned with the quaint "gingerbread" characteristic of this type of architecture.

One of the few changes made was the conversion of the large open veranda near the driveway to a most attractive glazed porch which the Tevanders use as an outdoor living room from early spring until they leave for their winter home at Palm Beach, Fla. The glazed yellow tile floor and blue ceiling, the latter's exposed beams decorated with colorful old Swiss designs, make the cheeriest room imaginable. The lake blue of the ceiling seems caught in the chintz that covers the cushions of sofas and chairs.

Adjoining the closed porch on the lakeside is an open terrace, floored in red brick and protected from the steep hillside by a balustrade of warm tan Tennessee stone. Adding gorgeous color notes to this terrace are great delft blue pots filled with vivid rose geraniums. The French doors opening into the living room from the terrace are most arresting with their leaded glass panes, the upper portions which are formed of row after row of amber colored bottle glass discs from Florence, Italy. The walls of the living room are covered with the original burlap but its deep green color, which was a "must" for the fashionable drawing room in the last century, has given way to a sunny beige in tiffany effect. The woodwork is covered with a seemingly miraculous type of heavy satiny cream enamel which has withstood the years. An unusually handsome antique Persian rug cover the living room floor and the soft old blues of an ancient Chinese rug are reflected in the blue and white chintz drapes of the adjoining music room.

The Swiss influence, so predominant in the exterior of the house, has not permeated the interior, especially the dining room. There is much that is reminiscent of the Georgian period in this very beautiful room with its deeply paneled doors and walls, pure Adam mantel and exquisitely carved cornices. The exposed mahogany ceiling beams, in pleasing contrast with the antiqued white woodwork and paneling, are deeply, richly maroon. While undoubtedly modern, the silver lighting fixtures are of a simple, chaste design that might have come out of an 18th century manor house, if electrical fixtures had been in use at that time.

The large reception and stair hall also has features that might be traced to the Adam brothers, especially the staircase with its white slender hand turned spindles and classic urn on the newel post. Instead of mahogany, however, a satiny rosy pine was used for the hand rail and staircase and for the ceiling beams.

The library opens to the left of the hall and in this wing of the house there is a most attractive ground floor guest room with French doors to the garden.

What was once a bedroom at the top of the stairs has had its walls removed so that it is now part of the hall. With its crackling log fire and gay rose, white and blue chintz drapes and cushions, it make a charmingly intimate little family living room. To be sure it is almost too small when all the family gathers at Northwoodside, as there are five grandchildren in addition to the Tevanders' son, Nelson III., and their three daughters and husbands. At present most of the adult group either are engaged in war work or are in the armed forces. Nelson, altho only 16, is taking flying at Wallingford, [Yale's air field], in addition to his studies at Choate. Eleanor, Mrs. Samuel Taylor, drives an ambulance as well as a canteen kitchen on wheels for the Red Cross in Palm Beach. Her husband, Capt. Taylor, is in the army air corps. Lieut. and Mrs. John W. Holman are at Chattanooga, Tenn., where the lieutenant is an instructor at Fort Oglethorpe. Mrs. Holman formerly was Vivian Tevander. The youngest Tevander daughter, Althea, now Mrs. Gilbert Drake, lives at Chatham, Mass. Last year her husband turned over his yacht to the government and joined the coast guard.

While much of Northwoodside's 30 acres is beautifully landscaped, a large section has been left in the natural woods, beloved of both the Strong and Tevander families. To the west, the 1,200 foot lake frontage joins Hillcroft, summer home of the Philip Wrigleys and less than a hundred yards up the hill from the beach, their respective tennis courts are separated only by a fence. But, while tennis is popular on both sides of the fence, it is tacitly understood that when there are sufficient young guests present, there is only one game really worth the playing so two teams are formed, balls and bats are grabbed up and in a short time the bases are loaded on the "Wrigley Field" at Green Babies, the William Wrigley farm which lies west of Hillcroft.

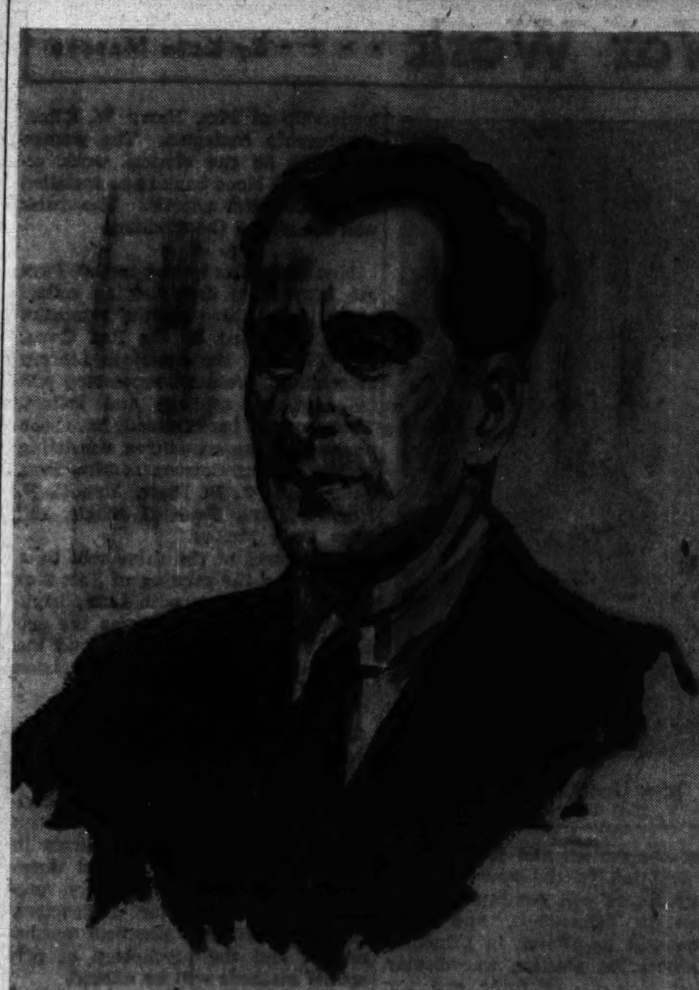
A most interesting place to visit at Northwoodside is the organ house which has one of the largest pipe organs in this part of the state. Gen. Strong, a musician of no small ability, had the building constructed with special acoustic properties to house the great organ. A bedroom for the general's own use adjoined the large organ room so that he could play at any hour of the night without disturbing his family or guests.

The general was also an omnivorous reader and owned a vast library. He was a charter member of the Lake Geneva Country club when it was formed in 1897 and immediately became a golf enthusiast. His son, Gordon, was als oa golfer, and one of the most sought after trophies at the club is the Gordon Strong cup for which the older members compete each season. So that Northwoodside would also be represented at the Big Foot Country club, which was founded in more recent years. Mr. and Mrs. Tevander, who are members of both clubs, donated a handsome silver cup which is known as the Northwoodside perpetual golf trophy.

The guest house at Northwoodside is a miniature of the big house, a miniature altho it has 12 rooms and is quite complete with kitchens and even a butler's pantry which until late years sported a fine old copper sink. It is a family regret that this copper relic was not retained so that they might now add it to the national scrap pile.

Like the big house, the miniature residence has the old fashioned type French doors with leaded glass panes and mosaic glass in upper panes of the windows. There is much rosy pine paneling and woodwork here and again like the big house, there are fireplaces in most of the rooms. The great blade of an airplane propeller is a strange bit of decoration adorning the wall of the second floor living room which is part of the suite generally reserved for Mrs. Tevander's granddaughter, Anne Holman. The blade is the remains of a plane flown by Anne's father, an aviator in the first World war.

Another interesting story told about this room is that it was here, while convalescing from typhoid fever that Gen. Strong's grandson, the famous playwright, Edward Sheldon, wrote his first big play, "Salvation Nell." Mr. Sheldon lives in New York.



"THE REV. HUGH LOGAN BOWMAN"

Salvatore Salla, gifted Chicago painter, executed this striking portrait sketch of Dr. Bowman, a minister from London who is now living here, in an hour as a demonstration of how an effective likeness may be obtained in a few strokes. Salla has one of the most attractive studio galleries in town, at 745½ Rush street. The blue facade of his studio is a cheering signal in the current drab of a street that forty years ago was one of Chicago's most fashionable centers with "brown stone fronts."

Mr. Raus attended the University of Chicago and received his degree from Notre Dame university. At present he is at an officers' training school at Fort Francis Warren.

Miss O'Keeffe Has Intriguing Art Exhibition

By Eleanor Jewett.

The most important opening of last week was that at the Art institute on Thursday when a comprehensive group of paintings by Georgia O'Keeffe was placed on view in the east wing galleries. Georgia O'Keeffe has long been noted for the beauty of her enormous flower pictures—one vast blossom will entirely fill a canvas—and for the glamor of her western landscapes where rolling hills adopt human form and bones become silent statuary. Bleached bones are as great a favorite with Miss O'Keeffe as are flowers. Something about their polished surfaces and smooth lines attracts the artist's imagination and she serves them to a public who has learned that there is more to a deer's horns than an unblown trumpet, a hunter's trophy, or an abandoned hatrack.

As intriguing as coral growing up thru the sea are the spurs and blades of the horns in "Deer's Horns, Near Cameron"; the color, too, in this particular canvas is subtle and sensitive—one can practically feel a lost generation finding refuge in such a citadel. The surrealist touch which flushes these various conceptions is orthodox; there is no passion or confusion of motive—simply pattern, quiet, and the commonplace, raised to an nth degree of uncommonness.

"Red and Pink Rocks and Teeth," note again the use of bone, tho here teeth rather than horns supply the substance. This is another problem of balance and proportion, a symmetry of incredibly inartistic materials which yet resolve themselves into an artistic whole. "Red Hills and Bones" is a third effective painting, tho most of us would prefer that the rolling ground had buried its dead. The bones are overlarge; except for the fact that they balance the top of the picture they are childishly large, but, looking for a complement to the ragged peaks, the magnified bones are a perfect solution.

There are 61 works in the exhibit, yet they are so hung the exhibition does not seem that large. Many of the pictures are small, and one of these tiny paintings is a gem. The little "Red Poppy" is so lovely, so gay, so brave, no one should miss it. A stunning flower picture is "Black Hollyhocks and Blue Larkspur." Those who think that everything has been done with flower painting that can be done had better see this exhibition. Georgia O'Keeffe pours new blood into what often is an anemic branch of decorative art.

Among the other paintings which will give particular pleasure are "Jack-in-the-Pulpit, No. 2," "Cross by the Sea, Canada," "Green Mountains, Canada," "The White Flower," "Mask with Golden Apple," "Grey Tree, Lake George," "The Broken Shell," and "White Canadian Barn."

Two other exhibitions opened Thursday at the Art institute. All three will continue until Feb. 22. An interesting collection of religious folk art from the Spanish southwest has been installed in galleries G55-G57. The 18th and 19th century carvings and paintings have been lent by the Taylor museum, Colorado Springs. The exhibit can roughly be divided in two parts: bultos [objects carved in the round, usually from wood] and retablos, which are paintings either on leather or metal [often on wood], rarely on canvas. These religious expressions were created by a primitive people, yet their work has power and distinction. Among the saints is one entitled "Protector of Irrigation Ditches"; the deserts of the southwest called him into being beyond a doubt, and the craftsmen gave him body.

The third exhibition is one of recent accessions, and most notable among these are the "Landscape with Sacrificial Procession," by Claude Lorrain, and "Still Life with Carp," by Manet. Among recent water color accessions, hung in gallery G59, is "Books," by the Chicago painter, Julia Theclo, whose one woman show last winter was a brilliant event in the Roullier Art galleries. Miss Thecla is one of our most original and gifted women artists.

The Ridge Art association is opening an exhibit of paintings by Derk Smit and Esther Austin next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the library of the Ridge fieldhouse, Longwood drive at 96th street. Both artists are well known in Chicago. Mr. Smit recently held an exhibition of his stunning decorative paintings at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue.

A new exhibit in modern style, "Indian America," is opening tomorrow at the Field Museum of Natural History. It promises to be one of the most interesting exhibits that museum of many interesting exhibits has staged. Indian civilizations as white men found them is the theme of the show; it is just as well perhaps that Indian civilizations as white men left them have not been included. But "Indian America" is an exhibit which children and parents alike should see. It is fascinating.

Flora Schofield has been enjoying a one woman exhibit in the Little gallery, Esquire theater. Mrs. Schofield is an honest and sincere painter whose work carries conviction.

The splendid exhibit of recent water colors by Herb Olsen and the beautiful flower paintings by Frances A. Barothy will remain on view to Jan. 30 at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. This is another exhibition not to be missed.

Skiing Holds Limelight in Quebec Sports

By Dorothy Johnson.

Whatever difficulties the war may have placed in the way of Canadian skiers, they're still taking advantage of Quebec province's snow and slopes. The glistening white trails are there, lavishly endowed with a record snowfall, and devotees of winter sports have demonstrated that elimination of special ski trains can't stop them. They've merely altered their plans to suit the times and the conditions.

Canadian officials have noted an increase in the number of citizens taking their vacations during the winter months. This is especially true of skiers, who formerly devoted weekends to traveling to their favorite winter sports centers, but now are taking a week or more of their vacation allotments during the current season, and putting in the entire time on skis.

The dominion authorities, it is reported, encourage this trend in the interest of rest and recreation vital to physical wellbeing and morale. They urge winter sports enthusiasts to travel during the midweek period, thus easing the transportation load which, in Canada, as well as in the United States, is heaviest over weekends. Hotels and pensions, too, urge this practice, since accommodations are at a premium on Saturdays and Sundays.

All the well known ski centers of the province are operating at capacity, and a "dark horse" community, Thetford Mines, known thruout the world as a prominent source of asbestos, vital war material, has come into the limelight as a winter sports area. Thetford has, for the last few years, been the home of a ski club which is devoting itself to developing the sport and has been instrumental in popularizing several regions of the province. During the course of the present winter, the club has laid out five trails which wend their way towards nearby lakes and localities. It also has built a jump for more experienced skiers, and has improved slopes for downhill and slalom events.

Snowshoers, too, are sharing in Canada's record snowfall. On Jan. 29, 30, and 31 the International Snowshoers' union will meet for its 35th annual convention in Sherbrooke. Thousands of snowshoers, members of more than 100 Canadian and United States clubs, will attend the conclave, which will bring an elaborate program of events, including world championship races, parades, recreational soirées, meetings, and a banquet.

Sherbrooke, the town which is to receive the peaceful invasion, has become the leading locality in the ever increasing circle of winter sports activities during the last several years. The hilly nature of its surrounding terrain adapts itself perfectly to all sports, especially skiing.

Among the events on the Quebec winter sports calendar are the following: Today, Lac Beauport, invitation jumping competition for Laurentide ski trophy; Jan. 27-30, Quebec, annual curling match; Jan. 29-31, Sherbrooke, the snowshoers' convention; Jan. 30 and 31, Seigniory club, curling match for Rankin trophy; Feb. 6 and 7, Seigniory club, 10th annual women's intercity, ski competition; Feb. 7, Trois Rivières, St. Maurice valley jumping championships; Feb. 7, Lac Beauport, slalom competitions, senior and junior, for women; Feb. 11-14, Seigniory club, 12th annual curling match for Sewell trophy.

Hot Springs, Ark., Spa Having a Record Season

The host committee at Hot Springs, Ark., predicts a record season on the basis of inquiries and current reservations. Inquiries received at the spa's health information bureau come from 349 cities and towns of 39 states and Canada. An analysis of the requests for information reveals that Illinoisans show greater interest in Hot Springs and its baths than do residents of any other single state, with letters, cards, and telegrams received from 52 places in Illinois.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

I have made a hobby of collecting data about national forests. Some one told me there are several in the state of Florida. Have you some information on this subject?—V. G. McP.

The government has set aside four areas as national forests in Florida, the Apalachicola, Ocala, Osceola, and Choctawhatchee. Apalachicola, county seat of Franklin county, is situated on the route from Tallahassee to Panama City and is one of the most scenic routes in the United States. The city is an ideal gateway to the national forest, which covers an area of 500,260 acres. The Apalachicola river borders the forest and the winding jungle beauty of the Ochlockonee river divides it into two parts. There are several tourist camps within the preserve.

Ocala national forest contains 316,897 acres between the Oklawaha and St. John's rivers. Within it are the pine forest, the Ocala national game refuge, and five famous springs. Forty miles west of Jacksonville is the Osceola national forest, 156,182 acres. A wild life area of 107,000 acres has been established. Between Fort Walton and Valparaiso is the Little Bayou recreational area of Choctawhatchee national forest, featuring boating and inland lake sports. The area is rich in folk lore and Spanish history.

Arizona Dude Ranches Have Home Comforts

TUCSON, ARIZ. At guest ranches near the old pueblo no opprobrium attaches to the term "dude." As one wrangler has put it, "a dude is a visitor who bounces on a cayuse long enough for his brains to settle. Then he gets so you can't get him off the caballo, even to sleep."

Time was when a dude ranch was only a 'dobe bunkhouse with a spare bunk, a spavined cow pony no longer able to chase dogies, and a shingle by the side of the road. But those ranches went with the model T and in their stead are desert lodges with all the comforts of home—and more, in this winter of heat rationing. Take, for example, Kenyon ranch, a few miles south of the Pima-Santa Cruz county line near the old Spanish town of Tubac.

Bill Allen, Kenyon's friendly host, was a middle westerner whose first acquaintance with the southwest was as a dude over at Circle Z. Falling in love with the valley of the Santa Cruz, where the sunsets would seem to make a piker of Maxfield Parrish, Bill decided to make permanent his dude status by going into the business.

Musing over his dude experience and prompted by his charming wife, Sis, on the vacationing woman's angle, Bill founded Kenyon ranch as a summing up of everything a dude would like to have in a ranch. Unfettered by the presence of buildings that would have to be transformed, Bill created a dude ranch from the ground up. Corrals were placed for the convenience of the dudes, not the dogies. Guests are housed in comfortable stone cottages built expressly for them, not in converted feed bins. Windows in the spacious main ranchhouse are constructed to let in the sunshine in winter, not to exclude it in summer when the ranch isn't open anyway.

Bill and Sis have one of the finest strings of dude cow ponies south of the Gila, meek steeds for beginners and livelier ones for experts. So horseback rides across the desert or into the surrounding foothills make up a great deal of the Kenyon curriculum. In addition, the ranch is close enough to the Mexican border to make excursions to Nogales feasible, even these days. And the ranch gameroom, with its ski ball game, pingpong table, assortment of table games, and the country postoffice stove for cold evenings, is always fun and fellowship headquarters.

Chicagoland folk have long patronized Kenyon. Frank H. and Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Evanston, together with their son, have wintered at Kenyon. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Ballou recently spent a holiday there. And on the current guest roster are Mr. and Mrs. Gray Tuthill, Mrs. John Hollister, Burton Browne, Thomas White, and Robert P. MacDowall, all of Chicago. All day rides into the mountains, interrupted at midday by coffee, sandwiches, and frijoles, are the choice of these guests, according to Bill Allen.

South of Kenyon, on a hill overlooking Nogales, lies the long rambling resort which is Rancho Grande. Two pair of Chicago honeymooners are staying there these days, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fischer and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Spencer. The Stagecoach bar and the quaint shops of Nogales are claiming their attention this week, according to Mrs. Red Myrick, the ever hospitable hostess of the ranch.

Today the Howard Millers at Wild Horse ranch near Tucson will stage one of their biweekly Sunday rodeos. The competition at these horse fiestas is strictly amateur, with Cortaro district cowboys not always taking away the honors from the dudes. The events are somewhat easier on the midriff than those at the professional shows. Emphasis on various races, musical chairs, and simple roping events, however, does not bar excitement or spills. Following this afternoon's competition, visitors will be guests of the Millers at a buffet supper at the ranch. Among those present will be Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Taylor of Kenilworth, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bodowess of River Forest, and Eugene Mapp of Chicago. The Justin Carrons of River Forest have recently left the ranch to return home.

El Conquistador inn is having one of the busiest seasons in its history. Located three miles east of downtown Tucson on Broadway boulevard, the Conquistador has an ample expanse of desert behind and the municipal golf course directly across the road in front. The hotel is famed for the horseback and station wagon noonday picnics at Sabino canyon organized by Manager Charles Doherty. Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden has recently arrived at El Conquistador for the winter season. Other Illinois guests now there include Mr. and Mrs. David C. Morrissey of Champaign, Mr. and Mrs. Horace B. Pearson of Wilmette, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Tweed of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Taylor of Chicago are scheduled to arrive for their winter vacation on Wednesday.

Mrs. John H. Mehan of Chicago, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Ross Dunn, and the latter's two children, Georgiana and Julie, has recently arrived in the Old Pueblo. Visiting their mother, Mrs. Andrew Bell, and their sister, Mrs. Julia Rebeil, prominent Tucson musician, Mrs. Mehan and Mrs. Dunn will stay in Tucson for a month.

Visiting here are Mrs. Edward S. Mansfield of Chicago and her daughter, Marilyn Joan, who are visiting relatives on East Ninth street. Mrs. Mansfield and Marilyn will remain in Tucson until the end of January.

Among recent arrivals at the Desert Grove out on Grant road are Mr. and Mrs. George T. Tawney of Chicago.

In a story about the cruiser Boise on the first page of the Graphic Section of today's issue Miss Salome Clark is mentioned as the daughter of Chase A. Clark, former governor of Idaho. # A Progressive Person Adapts Self to Times

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

From the looks of things, only those will survive with any degree of happiness who have in their constitution the ability to change with the times.

Daily we hear and read of the world changes facing us, once our current debacle of war is ended. We hear of the changes that will ensue in our private lives as our homes are conducted on a post-war basis. We hear of new economic forces that will be at work, or inventions affecting every angle of our lives, or an infinite number of departures from our current routine standards.

So it becomes apparent that we had better be schooling ourselves to meet change and meet it with that resiliency of mind and body which insures survival.

We'd better be asking ourselves how adaptable we are to change. Whether we are adaptable at all, or cling tenaciously to the old ways, the old opinions, old prejudices.

A great many women are finding the war work into which they have thrown themselves wholeheartedly has been an invaluable lesson in change, adaptability, resiliency. Some women have found themselves lacking in these progressive virtues when put to the voluntary work test. The change of hours, pace of work, consistent daily grind as much of woman's war effort is, has found some wanting, as executive heads of woman organizations will verify. It's their total inability to adjust themselves to new orders and demands rather than lack of patriotism in which they fail.

But we need point no finger at any particular group. To have prejudices is a universal failing. And prejudice always opposes. Prejudice plays a large part in discouraging new ideas. We could go back to the introduction of bath tubs to realize how new ideas may be rejected by prejudice, fear, or superstition. In the days of Benjamin Franklin, newspaper discussions on the dangers of frequent bathing appeared. Some cities had ordinances to discourage baths. True, the rejection was not permanent, but needless inconvenience was lost. When the "machine age" took over with its new inventions, old arrangements were dislocated and the unadjustables blamed the inventions, with prejudice dominating their ill judgment.

Give the new ideas, influences, inventions friendly attention and you'll find it easier to cope with them. Regard each new idea as a possible new experience, welcome it, and you will find your life holding new possibilities.

As says Ashley Montagu in his worthy tome, "How to Find Happiness and Keep It" [Doubleday-Doran]: "Of this you may be certain that by keeping an open mind you will live as fully as you can, while by keeping a closed mind you live as narrowly as you can." You needn't be rash about change. It isn't necessary to adopt every novelty that comes along, but people with a positive attitude toward new ideas are not likely to rush into anything reckless or dangerous.

An open mind that admits new ideas is likely to respond to fresh access of energy by feeling there is nothing you can't do; nothing you couldn't accomplish if you set your mind to it.

An open mind is the way of human progress thru the ages, the way of life, with a new enthusiasm for living its reward.

A homely little tale was related to us recently by a woman who had for years held an executive position. She lost it thru a change in the organization. A new job was offered her. In it her work had to be submitted for O. K. to a brilliant young woman, 20 years her junior. "It was desperately hard at first to reconcile myself to the discipline of corrected work," the woman tells. "But I recognized I was in a new world in which I had to make good. I had to cast out all my old prejudices in favor of the new. I knew myself that I had become set in my ways. I didn't like change. But I had to stick and I had to change, and it turned out the greatest blessing that ever happened. I found a new enthusiasm not for the job alone but for after-work living. I've made more friends in consequence than I ever could claim before. Something has happened to me, as I'm a nicer person to myself even."

That's what adaptability to change will do.

the Professional Woman in Wartime

You who are doctors will read the results of your selfless work in dry statistics that sum up health records of the nation at war. Most of the rest of you—lawyers, social workers, writers, actresses, librarians, architects, dietitians—will not have even this satisfaction. The only record of your work will be the fleeting memory of troubles lifted from weary shoulders, of faces brightened, of rows of homes, built with a minimum of labor, from which well-nourished war workers go proudly to their jobs.

We have chosen Elizabeth Hart to represent you because her radio program about wartime activities, "Elizabeth Hart Presents," is actually a focal point for your work, and representative of all peace-time jobs that are important in winning the war. Through it she brings to thousands of women in their homes the facts they need to know about their jobs and the war, as well as information about the work women are doing as WAACS, WAVES, war workers.

Because you realize that your work on the home front is as vital to winning the war as making shells; because with vision, with endurance, with a shining integrity you are turning your peace-time jobs into war jobs, Marshall Field & Company salutes you.

Elizabeth Hart, 747 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, NBC radio commentator, makes a war job out of her peace-time one by devoting her program, "Elizabeth Hart Presents," to the war. For this portrait by Dora, Miss Hart wears a beige wool suit from our Suit Shop. This is the fifth in a series of eleven portraits of Chicago women in the war, drawn for us by Dora.*

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

Mrs. M. R. Byron. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Black is a color not usually associated with wedding costumes, but it is appearing in some of the smartest ones these days. At the small wedding of Miss Virginia Parker to Malcolm Ross Byron the other day, the bride, who is one of Chicago's favorite mannequins and who has appeared in many St. Luke's shows, wore a wisp of a black hat with lots of fragile black veiling. Her street length gown was of beige crêpe, draped to one side, with a girdle of black grossgrain. The pretty, dark haired bride pinned her flowers, huge purple orchids, at the waistline. Her sister-in-law and only attendant, Mrs. E. Cummings Parker, wore a black crêpe dress and a white hat. A black dress brightened by red and gold embroidery was worn by Mrs. David Schoonmaker when she stood with her sister, Miss Nancy Palmer, at the latter's marriage to Lt. Robert G. Plunkett. Mrs. Schoonmaker's hat was of black, trimmed in red. The bride wore a smart frock of light green wool, and her hat and coat were of darker green. Her corsage was of white orchids. Typical of today's simple war time weddings was the former Miss Joy Savage's costume when she became the bride recently of the Rev. John Alfred Scantlebury. The slim bride wore a street length beige ensemble, and an American Beauty velvet hat with a large rose of crushed velvet at the front. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses. The bride's twin sister, Miss Jane Savage, who served as maid of honor, carried deep pink roses. Her gown was of aqua.

Standing beside the tea table the other day at the Arts club, Mrs. Arthur G. Cable wore a stunning suit of cinnamon brown wool, with a boxy, quilted jacket fastened with self-buttons. The white chintz blouse beneath it was sprigged in a quaint pattern of little yellow and brown vines and flowers, and the jacket of the suit was lined in the chintz material. To complete her costume, Mrs. Cable added a casual felt hat of snuff colored felt with a band of the deeper cinnamon shade, and a square handbag of amber tortoise shell. At the same tea Mrs. Walter P. Paepcke toured the galleries in a svelte black crêpe dress appliqued in an all-over design of black velvet vines with long slender leaves. The front of her becoming black velvet beret was pinched out to form a sort of brim, lined with pale pink faille as a frame for her attractive face. Mrs. Alfred P. Shaw, the club's president, welcomed guests to the exhibit. She wore a tailored black dress with a velvet collar and belt, and a panel of plaits at the front of the skirt. Tied about her throat was a gossamer scarf of fuchsia colored rice silk sprinkled with white dots, to match her fuchsia felt tricorne. The hat was cuffed in perforated felt, and floating from the back, snood fashion, was a veil of fuchsia appliqued with large felt coin dots in the same color.

Whenever Miss Yvonne Hoskins goes dancing in a bouffant net gown of white trimmed with sequin embroidery and ostrich feathers, she will be reminded of her gay debut tea-dance at the Racquet club, for that was the frock in which she bowed. Mrs. Robert C. McNamara Jr. received guests at a "fish-house punch" party recently in an unusual blouse and skirt combination. The skirt was of black silk, and the waist of cream satin. Its collar and cuffs and the fastening down the front were edged with fine old black lace. Aqua, shell pink, and ivory was the color motif of Miss Betty McArthur's recent marriage to Ensign William Dunshee. The young bride chose aqua taffeta gowns and matching feather turbans for her three attendants to wear during the ceremony in the chapel of St. James' church. Mrs. John C. Whiting, her sister's matron of honor, and their cousin, Miss Gloria Barnes, held bouquets of shell pink camellias against their delicately tinted gowns. The third attendant, 12 year old Ann McArthur, another cousin of the bride, carried sweetheart roses to match the buds of which her little hat was made. Trimming the bride's ivory satin gown was a circular flounce and peplum of heirloom Honiton lace which was brought from Belgium years ago for her maternal grandmother, Mrs. William Barnes, and which was later a part of the wedding ensemble of the bride's mother, Mrs. Selim W. McArthur.

A FRIEND IN NEED

[If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer need, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

By Sally Joy Brown.

Mrs. M. expresses a need which we feel sure many of our readers can aid in supplying. Women who have changed positions, nurses who have gone into service, or housewives who customarily wear white might be interested in the following letter from a representative of a group on the northwest side. "Dear Miss Brown: A group of women in this neighborhood are making their contribution toward war necessities by devoting as much time as possible to the work of making surgical dressings for the Red Cross. However, it is necessary that we wear white uniforms. We find them quite expensive to buy, and many of us are not able to afford them. Up to now, we have been wearing white house dresses. Can you help us secure some uniforms? We could use long or short sleeves, and we need all sizes, large or small. We feel that a dressing made is a life saved, and as we do want to go on with this work. I will do my best to call for anything offered for the use of our group and would be grateful to any readers who would mail them." The name and address will be supplied to any interested readers.

If any reader on the northwest side has a baby crib or bassinet, we know a young expectant mother who would be very grateful for it. She has the necessary baby clothes but cannot afford a bed for the expected child. Mrs. M. will call for a bed, if one is available.

• • •

The following request comes from a church on the south side. Fire recently damaged most of the church property, and for that reason the Rev. S. is asking aid. "Dear Miss Brown: We are calling on you because of the recent fire disaster, and we need your assistance in order to become reorganized for services. Just before Christmas, fire damaged our church severely, and our insurance was not sufficient to repair the building and replace the equipment which we lost, which included three pianos, 130 steel chairs, and 15 pews. Could you assist us in getting a piano in good condition and some chairs? We would greatly appreciate it."

New Soap for Children.

Given an appealing bar of soap, young Johnny may be induced to wash behind his ears and above that high water mark on his wrists. Any youngster would love the two cakes of soap designed to resemble Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's gift to the children of America, the two baby giant pandas, now housed at New York's Bronx zoo. The proceeds from the sale of these cunning bars of soap will benefit China's war sufferers.

New Color, 'Promise Pink,' Promises to Liven Spring

By Rea Seeger.

If it takes a sprightly new color to start a midseason off in high fashion or to revive a dreary winter wardrobe that must survive until spring, then the gay new color called "promise pink" provides just that dual answer to any questing shoppers. For it's a telling tone of cerise pink, a 1943 version of last year's great success, "shocking pink."

It's a pink to wear for dramatics under fur coats of brown pelts, from mink and beaver to the lighter tones of brown in caracul and sable dyed models. It is a color to wear with ink black fur coats and with the many fascinating gray furs, dark and light, and, of course, it is a color which contrasts with many fabric winter coats.

There's snap and assurance to this promise pink. Blondes and brunettes may wear it with the same distinction and grace; so will the chestnut topped women, for it has mid-winter magic, something in color to defy the blackest moods. Many of the dresses are made entirely of this flattering pink and there are many dresses of dark or contrasting colors spiked with this pink, offering another way of introducing color without the full strength of the shade.

Simply cut, young looking daytime dresses are made of slenderizing clinging crêpe, a crêpe that has been worked with deft fingers and fashioned into models that will do the utmost for figure flattery. Sleeves are short [there are a few models with long, fitted sleeves], bodices are intricate examples of inspired draping and fitting; so are the deceptively simple, short skirts, with detailed fullness discreetly managed at the side and, if at the front, flatly achieved to assure figure slimness. Other clever details such as stitched-on scroll bands, soft bows of the material, and unusual lattice work effects offer the distinctive contrasts that do not lessen the smart simplicity of these background or foundation dresses to wear under winter coats.

Whether you shop for dresses to wear right away or you desire clothes to last several seasons, these are the finds of the month, for such a color is a happy choice for year around wear. Spring navy blue will be the only rival, and promise pink not only accents winter black, but also sparkles with navy blue of spring. You have but to see this fresh, new pink with the navy blue clothes to realize the possibilities of such combines. Many dresses and costumes are featured in both black and navy blue, with pick-up accents of this bright, new color.

Try a pink blouse with a navy blue suit, or a pink hat and gloves to contrast with a navy costume or coat. Any blue skirt achieves new fashion importance with a promise pink jacket of crêpe or thin wool. Wear the dark blue jacket with a new pink dress and make another costume for a winter wardrobe. The combine mergers and get-togethers are virtually limitless!

Sketched are four new fashions ready to revive any winter wardrobe. All may be found in a smart collection of mid-winter clothes now on display in a Chicago store. For information call Superior 0200.

Bright, Clean Shower Curtains Add to Bathroom

Shower curtains can make or mar the attractiveness of your bathroom. In the days of white duck shower curtains, the curtain was kept clean and white by putting it in the regular weekly wash. Modern curtains require more care, and, as a result, don't always look as fresh and colorful as they should.

While most of them cannot be put into a tub or washer, they can be given a soap and water cleansing. Spread them out flat on the kitchen table and sponge them with a cloth wrung out in lukewarm suds. As you do each section, rinse it with a cloth wrung in clear water, and then wipe dry. When entire curtain has been sponged on both sides, hang it back on the rod to dry and look like new.

It's Blushing Applesauce

For a prettier applesauce, and tastier, too: Cut apples into small pieces. Do not peel or core. Stew with very little water until soft. Add sugar to suit your own taste, or ration book, and continue cooking for five minutes. Then rub thru sieve and you'll have a rosy hued applesauce you never could have had if you peeled the apples first.

Never Soak Mushrooms.

Fresh mushrooms require gentle brushing or a little scraping to make them ready for cooking. Never soak mushrooms in water as that would destroy the flavor and make them too moist.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, but not value. The column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Include a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker has announced that the department will issue a one cent "Four Freedoms Commemorative" postage stamp to replace the present one cent defense stamp. The new stamp will be placed on sale on Feb. 12, Abraham Lincoln's birthday, at the Washington, D. C., postoffice and at the philatelic agency of the postoffice department.

"It was deemed particularly fitting," Mr. Walker said, "that a stamp fostering the great principles of freedom should appear on the day when the nation annually pays tribute to the Great Emancipator, Abraham Lincoln. I hope that the new stamp will be helpful in impressing on the public the necessity for spreading the four freedoms to more and more of the world, so that the lot of the common man may be improved and a soundly based, enduring peace may be established after the present war."

The central subject for this stamp is inclosed in an oval frame and shows a bas relief of Liberty holding the lighted torch of freedom and enlightenment. Across the top is the inscription, "U. S. Postage," in colorless Roman lettering. Beneath this inscription at either side are denomination inscriptions reading, "1 Cent." Below the central oval is a colorless rectangular panel upon which appears the inscription "Freedom of Speech and Religion, from Want and Fear," arranged in five lines of colored Gothic lettering. Conventional oak leaves fill out the design at the lower corners. The new stamp is in green and measures 75/100 by 87/100 of an inch and is arranged vertically.

Collectors who wish first day postmarks on covers bearing this stamp should send covers, not to exceed 10, addressed and sealed, to Postmaster, Washington, D. C., with a cash or money order remittance to cover the face value of the stamps to be affixed. Orders for unused stamps must not be included with orders for first day covers, but collectors who desire selected copies may order any number from philatelic agency, division of stamps, postoffice department, Washington, D. C. The stamps will be placed on sale thruout the nation on February 13, or as soon thereafter as distribution will permit.

The Chicago Philatelic society, veteran stamp club of the United States with a record of 57 years of continuous meetings, will hold its annual exhibition and bourse on Feb. 19-21 on the mezzanine at the Atlantic hotel.

This society believes that stamp exhibitions will be of benefit to morale by offering a period of relaxation from more trying duties and that the exhibitions will in no way divert attention or money from the necessary war program. The usual excellence of C. P. S. exhibitions will be maintained and an exceptionally fine selection of material is promised.

A grand award will be made for the best exhibit and, due to an inability to obtain medals, other winners will receive certificate awards.

The show will be open Feb. 19 from 7 to 10 p. m., on Feb. 20 from 1 to 10 p. m., and on Feb. 21 from 1 to 9 p. m.

The committee in charge is headed by the well known Chicago collector, Saul Newbury, as honorary chairman, with Elmer Stuart, general chairman; Ben Reeves, in charge of the bourse; Anthony Russo, the exhibition; S. M. Farndell, construction; Willis E. Potter, publicity, and W. H. Schulze, reception.

Information and application blanks may be obtained from the proper chairmen and all communications should be addressed to them at room 210, 58 West Washington street.

YOUR CHILDREN
by Gladys Huntington Bevans

Wise Guidance Will Develop Child of Average Intelligence

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1943: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

This interesting letter needs no introduction, altho I can't resist saying that it will arouse mental opposition in those who believe in regimenting a child's life. On the other hand, it will arouse enthusiastic agreement in those parents in whose hearts it strikes an answering chord:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:

"I, too, agree that children should be heard. We have only one child, but that has been one of our main rules in our treatment of her.

"Up until now we have felt the experiment was too young to make any definite statement about the results. But Sue [we'll call her] now is 12, will enter high school in the fall, is an 'A' honor student, won the cash award at graduation, and was the youngest of a large class.

"She reads everything. Plays the xylophone, marimba, kettle drums, and other percussion instruments in the school band. She plays the piano beautifully, washes and dries all the dishes, takes care of her own room which she also planned. She makes excellent cookies and can cook an entire meal. Swims like a fish; sang in the girls' chorus; debates; is a regular attendant at Sunday school. She bicycles, has a perfectly free normal attitude toward the boys in her group, dances well and enjoys it. She can scrub the floor, work in the yard, put up her own hair, and is capable about selecting food, either in the market or from menus.

"That does sound like a doting mother's prattle—but it isn't. I do believe Sue has a keen mind, but I also believe a child of average mentality, if treated similarly, would react almost the same.

"I would like to take a child of parents whose I. Q. was not too high and see what I could do with her in 10 years. But we are such a happy family I'm afraid to risk it.

"Thru parent-teacher work I try to help parents everywhere I can. That's why I wish you'd write a booklet called 'Let Children Be Heard.'

"Let them develop normally. I'll give you one example and quit. I always had a fear of crawling, creepy things. Sue played with angle worms in her sandbox. Put them in her pockets to warm them. Thru allowing her to develop normally, I've overcome a great deal of that cringing myself. In fact, right now we have a chameleon who has the run of the sun porch. We've watched him shed his skin and read all we could about them.

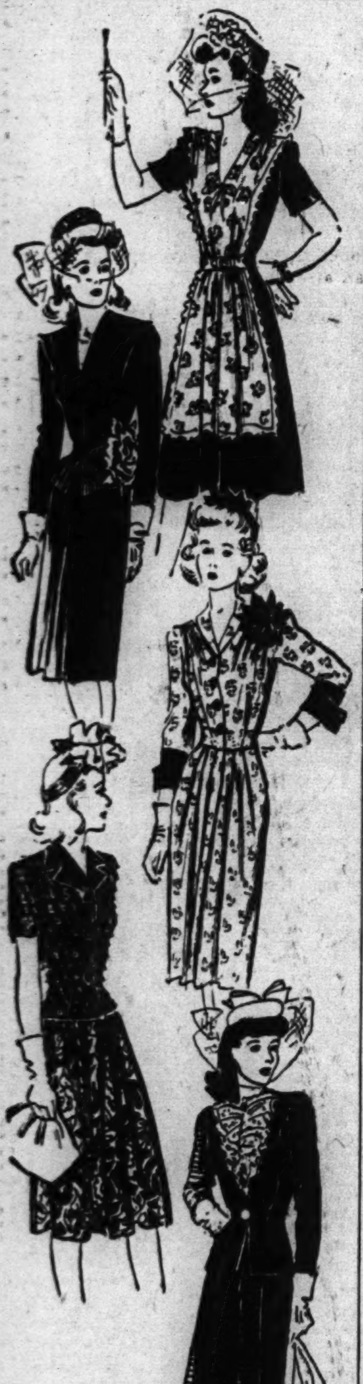
"In 'Cross Creek,' by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, the chapter on toady frogs and lizards and chameleons, was read and re-read. Sue wasn't satisfied until we had captured a moth to feed ours. My point is, now we know about chameleons. Ours has almost a personality. We call him Gorgeous. We want to know about everything.

"Perhaps you'll think 'Cross Creek' too old a book for a 12 year old. Well, we've never taken any book away from Sue. But either her daddy or I read anything we think needs talking over, not so she realizes it, but just casually, we may say, 'What did you think of that book?' and discuss it.

"Honestly, I think there is nothing more interesting than children, nothing so worth while nor precious.

"Have you heard this one? A father gave a child a puzzle to put together. It had the map of the world on one side and was very complicated. The child completed it soon and called his father. 'How did you ever do it so quickly?' he asked. The child said, 'It was easy, dad. There's a picture of a boy on the other side. I put the boy together right and then I knew the world would be all right, too.'"

Fashions . . . . . . . . . . . . . By Angela



Each new season, as it rolls around, brings with it an exciting story in women's fashions. There are no WPB restrictions on ideas and originality. So this spring, as in other years, designers have been busy creating new fashions and patterns to keep the American woman the best dressed woman in the world.

The apron dress is an example. This is a black crêpe dress with short sleeves. The bib and apron, which are stitched down with a little ruffle of the material around the edge are of a printed rayon jersey. There is a choice of color combinations—the black dress with either a light blue, gold, pink, or white printed apron. Under $13.

Then there's the little black dress that sees you thru every informal social occasion of the entire year. This simple daytime dress with long sleeves and fitted waist has good slenderizing lines. A wide, black faille band flatters the waistline. And on the left side is one large rich red flower—the only touch of color.

Altho it may not be discernible in the sketch, number 3 has a puppy dog design. Little line drawings of dogs' heads range over the green, brown, or navy crêpe to form the pattern. Faille, from which the lower part of the sleeves and the cuffs are made, gives the sleeves a fine flare.

The fourth is a two piece dress with a printed rayon jersey skirt. The skirt has a nice fullness provided by unpressed plaits. Little clusters of fringe dot the fitted jacket.

The suit, sketched last, is of a black pin striped bengaline. On the jacket is a plastron front of black velvet. A dickey with a frilly jabot is part of the costume. The suit can be worn with the dickey or with a separate blouse. Under $20.

Junior Miss Styles Bright and Colorful

By Bettina Bedwell.

Fashions for little girls and the junior miss take in a lot of territory this spring. They are garnered from the lands of our allies. Chinese inspiration, worked into clothes for young America, and Russian peasant themes are important in dresses which are ready to make a bow when spring comes. There are also ideas from the Netherlands, Great Britain, other small countries on our side.

Most prominent in the Russian influences are Russian blouse ideas, which appear in many different editions. And there are enchanting new fabrics which are printed with an all-over Russian cross-stitch pattern that looks like embroidery. These materials are used for dresses of all kinds.

The Chinese inspiration in little girl clothes is mostly in embroidery and appliqué of Chinese designs, and it is evident, too, in coolie collars and such details. Little boy play suits of sturdy cottons have trousers and coolie jackets.

There was a time, before your day, when most little girls wore sailor suits and nautically-minded Peter Thompson play dresses. Nineteen hundred and forty-three sees a revival of this kind of thing, and it looks good. There are dresses for girls which are made of clear blue cottons with big sailor collars edged in white braid and with surplice closings. There are two-piece dresses that are almost identical with the old-time Peter Thompson dress, except that these have fewer plaits in the skirts. Blue denim slack suits that are real sailor suits are styled for girls from 5 to 15, and slated for play.

Contrasting waist-and-skirt dresses are a big item in pint-size fashions for the coming spring. Pretty sophisticated dresses for the bigger girl, who wants to look grown-up, combine a black cotton waist with a bright, checked gingham skirt. Younger sisters get a dark colored cotton suspender skirt and a white peasant blouse, or a white blouse with a skirt made of cotton having the bright Russian cross-stitch pattern I spoke of earlier in this piece.

When it comes to spring coats for the younger girls there are lots of Chesterfields, the overcoat that has been such a runner for grownups this winter. They come in bright colors, navy, or light 'Sweet Chocolate' brown.

The prettiest coats are reefers made of navy blue or gray flannel with colorful peasant appliqué or embroidery on them. These coats often have silver buttons for extra measure. They have a peasant accent to them, and come mostly in sizes for the younger girl.

Add your syrup and you have a full pint of medicine that will amaze you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you've never seen anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness.

According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1943: By Ely Culbertson.]

Watching an expert partnership defend a contract is like viewing the operation of a well oiled machine. It is not so much that either partner does anything sensational; it is simply that neither does anything wrong. The following hand is an eloquent example:

East, dealer.
Match-point duplicate.
Neither side vulnerable.

NORTH
♠K 6
♥Q 9 6 5
♣K 9 7 6 2

WEST
♠9 7 2
♥8 4 3
♦Q J
♣A 10 5 4 3

EAST
♠A 10 8 3
♥A K 7 2
♦6 5 4
♣Q 8

SOUTH
♠Q J 5 4
♥J 10
♦A K 8 7 3 2
♣J

The bidding:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 spade | 2 diamonds | Pass | Pass |
| 2 hearts | 3 diamonds | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

Obviously, the bidding was rather vigorous on the parts of both East and South. However, at match-point duplicate, these bitter battles must occur around part-score contracts, i. e., each side must risk going down a trick [or possibly two tricks if it feels it is not apt to run into a double], rather than permit the opponents to make a score of 110 or 130 points. It will be observed that neither West nor North entered the auction—both allowed for the possibility that their respective partners were pushing a bit.

West, a national ranking player, saw nothing to be gained by opening either of his partner's suits, inasmuch as he had three cards in both, and therefore essayed a ruse in the trump suit. He deliberately selected the diamond jack as his opening lead. He had two reasons for this: First, a trump lead could hardly do harm and might destroy ruffers in the dummy. Then, the selection of the jack rather than the queen was aimed at deceiving the declarer as to the location of the queen, i. e., West hoped that declarer would later finesse for the queen.

The ruse itself did not work, but the trump lead proved highly effective. Declarer took the jack with the ace, and led his singleton club toward dummy. West suspected that this was a singleton, and altho it was the jack, took no chance on declarer's jumping up with the king. Instead, he himself put up the club ace. Now, since it was desirable to have another trump lead come from East, to create the possibility of West's making the diamond queen, West shifted to the spade nine. Dummy played low, and East did likewise—he did not make the mistake of putting up the ace. As long as he had control of spades, he could always take out dummy's remaining trump; meanwhile, there was no need to sacrifice the spade ace to the capture of a low card from declarer.

Declarer took the spade nine with the queen and laid down the heart jack. East won and cashed the heart ace, then shifted to a diamond. Declarer did not fall for West's "old army opening" of the diamond jack—he went right up with the king and dropped West's queen, but he was still in trouble. He could, of course, run the diamond suit without loss, but then he was left with three spades to the jack, while dummy had the singleton spade king. On a lead to the king, East took his ace and returned the ten-spot. Declarer won, but then had to surrender a trick to East's spade eight, and the contract was down one, giving East-West an excellent match-point score on the board.

As noted originally, neither West nor East did anything in this deal that was conspicuously brilliant. All they did was avoid error. But, when you come right down to it, that is all that is required in 98 per cent of the cases that actually arise at bridge.

Bridge Problem.

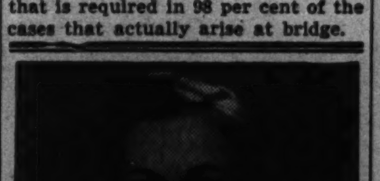
Hearts are trumps and South leads. North and South are to win five tricks against any defense.

Solution: South leads spade king, then queen of trumps. If West wins and leads king of diamonds, South discards jack of spades. If West leads another diamond, North trumps and leads nine of clubs, South discarding a club on the second diamond lead.



MUST YOUR DAUGHTER RISK HAPPY MARRIAGE ON HALF-TRUTHS?

Many a mother herself, reared in an atmosphere of false modesty, dreads the day when she must "tell her daughter." Too often, she fails to tell her at all. As a result, she learns "half-truths" from others. Little wonder so many young wives unknowingly risk their very happiness by placing their dependence on weak, ineffective "home-made" mixtures; or using over-strong solutions of acids for the douche which can actually burn, scar and even desensitize delicate tissue.

Today such risks are needless. Science has given womankind a safe—yet amazingly powerful liquid for the douche, Zonite. So powerful is Zonite that it kills immediately all germs and bacteria with which it comes in contact. Deodorizes—by actually destroying odors, leaving no tell-tale odor of its own. Protects personal daintiness. Yet! Zonite is non-caustic, non-poisonous, safe for delicate tissues. Over 20,000,000 bottles already bought. For modern hygienic protection you may never have known before, get Zonite at your druggist today.

New Furniture Light Weight, Packs Easily

By Edith Weigle.

Any one who has ever liked to play with jig-saw puzzles will derive a lot of enjoyment from the new, ultra-modern furniture designed by Dan Cooper of New York and so constructed that you can take it apart in a jiffy, carry it with you to the train or bus, and put it together again at the end of your trip.

Believe it or not, chairs, tables, beds, cabinets, chests of drawers—all can be put together as neatly as a puzzle and a lot more easily, because you know how to do it. No guess work, pieces are made to fit in slots or grooves, pins or pegs hold them firmly together, and presto, you have a chair or table.

Mr. Cooper has demonstrated, too, the practical uses to which lightweight plywood can be put, for this furniture is made of limed oak plywood, and of plywood lacquered in interesting colors. After the war we are going to see a lot of this type of thing in the field of home furnishings.

One of the most important features about this put-it-together-yourself furniture is that practically all the items are so made as to be interchangeable. The same two pieces of U-shaped wood which form the arms of a chair, for example, also make the head and footboards of single size beds. Deep mattresses fit over a slatted frame which rests on extension rods attached to these end pieces and then you have either a bed, or, when placed against a wall and given a tailored slip-cover, a smart day bed.

Or place a long, upholstered pad against the wall, as a back for this day bed, and it becomes a couch!

Long bases, supported by plywood legs, hold a pair of 24 inch cabinets, and a third one of the same size but with sliding doors, this group looking like a single unit. Or take them off the base and place open bookshelves at one end, using the rest of the base as a low, adjoining table on which you can make an artistic flower or plant arrangement.

All the drawers and shelves and cabinets are made to fit on these bases, so you can use as many or as few as you like. You can even pile two or three of the bases on top of each other, thus acquiring long, wide, practical shelves.

Mr. Cooper has designed a demountable double-decker bed that any boy would love to have in his room. The ladder is the end or footboard of the bed itself, instead of being a separate item. And the lower "deck" is closer to the floor, so that there's plenty of head room.

This 1943 furniture uses little metal or other scarce materials, is going to be reasonably priced when it makes its appearance in Chicago stores.

Lady of the House

Badge of Domesticity.

It was at the bottom of a drawer in the old walnut paneled chest—the linen apron a traveling friend had brought to mother from Russia a half century or more ago.

Blue dragons rampant along the elaborately embroidered border tell of the origin of the ancient design. Flambeaux hold blue and white flowers instead of flaring wicks; blue threads in the woof are woven into geometric borders and the sturdy warp intricately knotted into deep fringe at the bottom, while the top is gathered in scallops to the twisted cord and tassel ties.

I wonder if there is anywhere among the host of "collectors" one who collects aprons. I wonder why I didn't do it myself, I have seen so many. Kitchen aprons, sewing aprons, garden aprons, cocktail and barbecue aprons, long glamorous ones for protecting evening dresses from the dribblings of late snackers, tiny confections of lace and fine linen and ribbons for afternoon tea. Infinite in design and purpose, aprons are the badge of domesticity, possibly excepting those which are a part of official costume or necessary to men's trades.

Most vivid in my own recollection are mother's ample blue and white checked gingham aprons with square pinned-up bibs, and my own ruffled pinafores printed with tiny leaves or flower sprigs . . . learning to do hemstitching on sheer India linen . . . elderly ladies in big white aprons bordered with wide knitted or crocheted lace and insertion . . . occasionally a somber black silk or sateen over the full skirt of the best dress.

In the annals of fashion the history of aprons should not be neglected, so if any reader has a "collection," or knows of one, or has interesting bits of apron lore, won't you please write to this column?

Grandma's Garden.

Grandma has a garden
Upon her window sill
Where flowers are growing
Quietly and so still.
They are a sacred blessing
And her being seems to thrill
With gladness in possessing
This cheery little garden
That she can always see
Early in the morning
Thruout the day and eve;
For it is always there
Near her old rocking chair,
Fragrant, restful and still,
Upon her window sill.
—Maude Bowman.
